He commenced his christian work by organizing a Sabbath school in his school district and from this beginning, a class connected with the church in Adrian was started which finally grew into the M. E. church of Raisin Valley, and for ten years he was class-leader and S. S. superintendent till other workers were willing to take up the work.

When Mr. Laing moved to Holloway he took his letter to the Tecumseh M. E. church, attending its communion services, as long as his health permitted, but working in the Presbyterian church near his home with the same zeal and devotion, he had given his own church, teaching in the S. S., till two years ago.

His greatest interest was in the work of the Sabbath school, and he was at different times president and secretary of the county S. S. association, attending all its conventions, also, state and township, and how he enjoyed these meetings.

And now he is gone. Another christian home has been broken up—a home where God was honored, where daily prayer was offered in the family, where the church and its work held first place. Believing character and things eternal, more important than things transitory, he gave his best to these things.

Humble minded, cheerful, generous, a devoted husband and father, a sincere and loyal friend, a good man with a lofty conception of duty, the story of his life is that of loving, faithful service, rendered to his fellow men in the spirit of his Lord and Master.

At his request, the funeral services were held at the Raisin Presbyterian church, whose members he loved, and who had given him such christian fellowship, conducted by Rev. H. B. Dunning, pastor, assisted by Rev. D. S. Shaw of the Tecumseh M. E. church, and he was laid to rest in the quiet little cemetery at Raisin Valley, by the side of his wife and little child, father and mother. But the "Mortal has put on Immortality" and he has heard the Master's "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

DON'T SWALLOW DRUGS TO CURE CATARRH.

Hyomei (pronounced High-o-me) is a germ killing vapor of air which when breathed either through the mouth or nose will kill catarrh germs and sooth and heal the inflamed and mutilated membrane. Hyomei is such a powerful germ destroyer that it penetrates every fold and crevice of the mucous membrane of the nose and throat. And it kills the catarrh germs because it gets where those health destroyers are. Hyomei is pleasant to use; it is made from concentrated extract of pine and eucalyptus taken from trees in inland Australia where catarrh was never known.

Breathe in this pleasant, healing yet germ killing air (you'll like to use Hyomei) through a small hard rubber inhaler that comes with each outfit and relief will come quickly. Hyomei is guaranteed by C. A. Wright & Son to cure catarrh or money back; it gives most wonderful relief to consumptives. A complete outfit which includes an inhaler, a bottle of Hyomei and simple instructions for use costs $1.00, and extra bottles if afterward needed cost 50 cents. Leading druggists every where sell Hyomei.

THE CHILDREN LIKE IT
KENNEDY'S LAXATIVE COUGH SYRUP

It's a pity when sick ones drug the stomach or stimulate the heart and kidneys. That is all wrong. A weak stomach means weak stomach nerves, always. And this is also true of the heart and kidneys. The Restorative reaches out for the actual cause of these ailments—the failing "inside nerves." Anyway test the Restorative 48 hours. It won't cure so soon as that, but you will surely know that help is coming. Sold by all druggists.

NEEDFUL KNOWLEDGE.

TECUMSEH PEOPLE SHOULD LEARN TO DETECT THE APPROACH OF KIDNEY DISEASE.

The symptoms of kidney trouble are so unmistakable that they leave no ground for doubt. Sick kidneys excrete a thick, cloudy, offensive urine, full of sediment, irregular of passage, or attended by a sensation of scalding. The back aches constantly, headaches and dizzy spells may occur and the victim is often weighed down by a feeling of languor and fatigue. Neglect these warnings and there is danger of dropsy, Bright's Disease, or diabetes. Any one of these symptoms is warning enough to begin treating the kidneys at once. Delay often proves fatal.

You can use no better remedy than Doan's Kidney Pills. Here's Tecumseh proof:

George D. Chaplin, Ottawa St. Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I used Doan's Kidney Pills, procured from C. A. Wright & Son's drug store and they lived up to the claims made for them. When I procured this remedy I was feeling miserable but after a short use my health was greatly improved. I have no hesitation in recommending Doan's Kidney Pills, as I know they are a reliable kidney remedy." For Sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. IN FINE CONDITION.

Grand Rapids Reports Increases All Along the Line in Banking.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Sept. 16.—The clearings of the banks of this city for August show an increase of 20 per cent over those of August, 1903, and fall short less than 2 per cent as compared with August, 1907. For the eight months of the year the increase is 16 per cent over 1903, and compared with the banner year of 1907 they are nearly 3 per cent lower.

The bank statement showing conditions Sept. 1, published last week, contain still more convincing evidence that business in Grand Rapids is getting back normal. The loans and discounts aggregate $17,066,881.88, or $940,000 more than the total of Feb. 5, when the downward swing, following the panic, touched bottom. The increase has been $350,000 since June 23.

TRY TO POISON THEM.

Paris Green Found In Well of Farmer Near Saginaw.

Saginaw, Mich., Sept. 16.—A plot has been unearthed on the farm of Joseph Mojaski, in Taymouth township, by Sheriff Schultz, to poison the family of three. A large quantity of paris green was discovered in the well, and an analysis showed a heavy percentage of the poison.

Several days ago the three members of the family were taken seriously ill of after drinking the water, and an investigation was begun. A son of Mojaski says he saw a man drop powder into the well last Friday.

PAIN

Pain in the head—pain anywhere, has its cause. Pain is occasioned by the blood pressure—nothing else usually. Pain is Nature's signal. That signal is heard when you take a headache Tablet—it calls for Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets—it calls for blood pressure-lowering, pain quieting, Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets.

If you have a headache, it's blood pressure.

If a headache tablet, with narcotic pain quieting, is used to quiet the pain, that blood pressure is left to do its work—to injure the heart, to cause apoplexy.

Headache Tablets stop pain and lower blood pressure. Of course it has. It's contained, blood pressure lowering and where pain is—always. It's simply a good idea.

We sell as 25 cents, and cheerfully recommend.

NESTS IN GULF WEED.

Breeding Place of the Flying Fish in the Sargasso Sea.

In the middle of the north Atlantic there is an area of comparatively still water almost equal to continental Europe in extent and more or less covered with floating seaweed. It was known as the Mar de Sargaco to Columbus and the early navigators and is the Sargasso sea of modern geographers.

The floating seaweed was formerly supposed to have grown near the Bahama and Florida shores and to have drifted to its present position. It is now, however, known to grow and propagate itself where it is found. In it are found globular masses of weed containing fish eggs and known as fish nests.

Investigations show that the floating weed of the Sargasso sea is the chosen breeding place of species of flying fish. The eggs found in the nests were attributed to certain species of fish found resting on them, but careful examination of the eggs shows that they really belong to flying fish.

Apparently, however, the flying fish do not make the nests themselves. Each end of the egg of these fish is furnished with bunches of very long filamentary tendrils, and by means of these the finely divided branches of the Sargassum weed have been caught together in globular masses. The eggs may be said to have made their own nest.—London Field.

Utter Contempt.

"I s'pose you wouldn't marry me if I were the only man on earth?"

"I wouldn't even be engaged to you," responded the girl, "if you were the only man at a summer resort."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

And the Parson Passed On.

"And what are you here for, my friend?" asked the visiting parson of an inmate of a reformatory.

"'Cause I can't get out, thank you," replied the victim.—Ladies' Home Journal.

TREES IN HOLLAND.

All Streets and Canals Bordered With Elms or Lindens.

The average Dutch town is an attractive place in the summer months, since practically every street and canal is bordered with shade trees, which shut out the glare of the sun and offer cool and inviting avenues for the exploration of the tourist. The banks of these canals are generally terraced in two levels—the lower one for warehouses and the upper for shops or dwellings, but each elevation is planted with trees.

At best a city is an exceedingly poor location for tree culture. Narrow streets, with tall buildings, exclude the life giving sunlight; asphalt or closely paved walks prevent the necessary moisture from sinking into the ground and nourishing thirsty roots, and leakage from the gas mains is a deadly poison to all vegetation. For this reason care should be exercised in the selection of the variety of trees for street planting in order to get the best results. In Holland time has demonstrated that the elm and linden should be placed in the first rank, for there are many examples of these species in Dutch towns which have withstood the ravages of more than two centuries. The elm appears to be the hardier of these two trees and will live under most adverse conditions.

The Dutch municipalities expend large sums each year for the preservation of their shade trees, but the results amply justify the cost for maintenance.—Harper's Weekly.

A MARRIAGE NOTICE.

The Modern One Sounded Quite Grand to the Old Lady.

Old Lady Goodyear laid down the paper with a sigh and looked over her spectacles at Grandfather Goodyear. "I feel quite ashamed when I remember our humble marriage notice," she said.

"'Married, in the First Congregational church of Harborville, Abel Goodyear to Mary Lawton,'" chanted Grandfather Goodyear. "It read well, to my thinking."

"Yes, for those days, but not for present times," said his old wife. "You know, Anastasia Cumming's daughter Laura married a Toby, and their daughter has just married Sophy Leavitt's grandson. His mother, Sophy's child, married a Wilson."

"Well, what of all that?" inquired Grandfather Goodyear, rubbing his forehead in great confusion of mind.

"It's the fashion to keep all the family names," said Old Lady Goodyear, severely. "You hear how grand it sounds:

"'Married, at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Frederick Cummings-Toby, by Rev. Harold Lowden Kirkbright, Edith Smythe Cummings to George Broune Leavitt-Wilson.'

"Now, there's something for old Grandpa Broune and Grandma Smythe to be proud of—if they were alive."

"M'm!" said Grandfather Goodyear.—Youth's Companion.

INSANE PRISONERS ESCAPE.

Officers of Ionia Institution Are Searching For Them.

Ionia, Mich., Sept. 16.—Officers throughout the country are on the watch for Lista Shackleton, aged twenty, and Walter Kaufman, aged thirty-four, who escaped Wednesday evening from the asylum for criminal insane.

Taking advantage of the absence of the guard, who was called to attend another patient, Shackleton and Kaufman scaled the walls and were not missed for some time. One other prisoner accompanied them, but was captured before getting clear of the grounds.

An Indigestion Remedy Free

Many people who are otherwise healthy suffer from indigestion, or dyspepsia. When you consider that the stomach and allied digestive organs are the most important organs of the body, it would seem that a disorder there is to be taken very seriously.

Dyspeptics cannot eat the things they like; food sours in the stomach; then chronic constipation begins, or so is often the case, you have been constipated all along, and the stools are forced and irregular.

But there is no use letting indigestion go until it becomes chronic and undermines your health. It is good advice to suggest to you that you go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, the wonderful cure for stomach, liver and bowel troubles. That is what C. Fowler, of Carson City, Mich., did and he is well today. Others who did the same and are cured are Ida A. Fortune, of Grand Junction, Tenn., H. F. Thompson, of Shenandoah, Ia., who actually considers that it saved his life. You can obtain a 50-cent or $1 bottle of the druggist, and, taken according to directions, it will probably be all you need. It is a liquid, acts gently, never gripes, and besides the laxative effect, contains exceptional tonic properties which tone the stomach, and that is what is especially needed in indigestion.

All sufferers from indigestion who have never used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can obtain a free test bottle by writing the doctor. It will be sent direct to your home without any charge. In this way thousands have proven to their own satisfaction Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the very remedy they needed to cure indigestion. When once you use this sweet remedy you will throw violent cathartics, tablets, pills, etc., away.

If there is anything about your ailment that you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 500 Caldwell bldg., Monticello, Ill.

LAUD HIM AS A HERO

Young Man Thought Only of Others In Burning Launch.

SHUT OFF GASNLINE TANK

Ray De Kay of Mt. Clemens Performed Heroic Deed While Boating With Large Party of Friends on Clinton River—Theodore Englender Drowns While Trying to Swim Ashore.

Mt. Clemens, Mich., Sept. 20.—His head, face, arms and the right side of his body to his waist, seared and blistered, Ray De Kay, part owner of the launch Saratoga, which burned at the mouth of the Clinton river Saturday night while loaded with high school students, lies at his home in a precarious condition. Physicians state that if he has inhaled flames death will probably follow. This, the doctors have as yet been unable to determine.

De Kay is being lauded as a hero in Mt. Clemens. When the excitement following the accident had quieted, members of the party told of his nervy task from his seat in the stern to shut off the valve in the 65-gallon tank of gasoline in the bow of the craft, which, if the flames had reached it, would probably have resulted fatally to the entire party. Should De Kay's condition warrant it, he will be taken to Grace hospital, in Detroit.

Leaky Pipe the Cause.

The cause of the explosion was a leaky feed pipe, and the flames shot up from under the engine, over which De Kay and his partner, Ray Grossbeck, were bending. Seated beside the pair was Theodore Englender, who was drowned in an effort to swim ashore.

Almost blinded by the flames, De Kay made his way to the bow. As he opened the door leading to the gasoline tank the fire burst into his face, having run along the bottom of the boat. To prevent it from entering the tank through the pipe, the valve had to be closed, and De Kay stuck until the pipe was disconnected, then went aft to aid the girls to leave the craft. Some refused to jump and had to be thrown overboard. When all had escaped De Kay leaped after them.

The bar, left after the work of dredging the channel two years ago, on which the boat grounded, is narrow, and the twenty-one passengers separated, half standing on one side of the boat and half on the other. Had the tank exploded, none of the party would have been at a safe distance.

Search parties have recovered the body of Englender. His right leg and arm were badly cramped, which accounted for his death. His body was also badly burned. He was the son of the Rev Theodore Englender of the local German Evangelical church.

Old Lady Burned to Death.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Sept. 20.—Mrs. Joanna Williams, sixty-five years old, was burned to death in her rooms on the second floor of a little hovel on Thompson court at 11 o'clock at night. The woman had epileptic fits and is believed to have tipped over a kerosene lamp during a spell.

DISHEARTENED ART STUDENT

Commits Suicide Because Health Did Not Improve.

Lansing, Mich., Sept. 20.—Fearing that he would be forced to give up his art studies because of ill health, A. E. Jason of this city, twenty years old, shot and killed himself. He had returned from a Chicago academy, where he had studied for a number of years, just a few weeks ago. His condition became gradually worse.

While in a state of melancholy he went to his room and shot himself.

No Old Maids.

"We'd have no old maids if we took a lesson from the ancient Babylonians," a spinster said. "In Babylon unmarried women were graded by the state according to their looks. For a beautiful young wife the state demanded a large number of gold pieces, a less desirable wife cost a smaller number of gold pieces, and this money was all paid out again as rewards to those who married elderly, unattractive girls. Thus it cost a fortune to marry beauty, but if you married ugliness a fortune came to you; hence all was happiness in Babylon, and old maids were unknown."

DETROIT CONFERENCE IS LARGEST NOW

Bishop Hamilton Ordains Large Class.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 20.—Although the Detroit conference of the M. E. church, in session at the Preston M. E. church, is on the program to close today, it was said last night that the adjournment may not take place until Tuesday, or even Wednesday. The choice of district superintendent for the Detroit district is now said to lie with Dr. George Elliott of Chicago.

It is said the settlement of the matter rests with Dr. Elliott, as it is reported the bishop has offered him the office if he wishes it. Dr. Elliott, however, has not decided.

In ordaining deacons, six elders and two deaconesses in the afternoon session of the M. E. conference yesterday afternoon, Bishop John W. Hamilton said the addition of the new members would make the Detroit conference, with about 360 charges, the largest conference in the United States.

The bishop also stated that it was the largest number of ordinations he had ever made at one time.

SECOND MYSTERIOUS KILLING

Man Dies From Fractured Skull In Calumet.

Calumet, Mich., Sept. 20.—The second mysterious death within a month resulting from assaults on pedestrians on Calumet business streets occurred Sunday morning, when Andrew Burk, aged fifty-five years old, died from a fractured skull and knife wounds.

The police are baffled. Burke was found lying in the street, and there is no clue to his assailant.

The first case was that of Hermann Mattson, who died from a fractured skull and other wounds recently and for whose death three men are now being tried in the Houghton circuit court. Burk leaves a large family.

PERHAPS FATALLY BURNED.

Woman's Clothing Caught Fire When She Attempted to Extinguish Flames.

Flint, Mich., Sept. 20.—Mrs. Florence Hurd, forty-five years old, of Detroit was perhaps fatally burned at the home of her nephew, Lovell J. Hurd, 611 South Saginaw street, in an effort to extinguish a blazing gasoline stove. She rushed down stairs to the street, her clothing a mass of flames, and was picked up on the walk by two men, who smothered the fire.

NEW TARIFF BOARD.

Will Likely Meet For First Time Within Ten Days.

Washington, Sept. 20.—The new tariff board which recently was appointed by the president under the authority of Sec. 2 of the tariff act of Aug. 5, 1909, will probably hold its first meeting in Washington within the next ten days, for the purpose of outlining a working plan of operations.

This board is charged with the duty of securing information to assist the president in determining whether or not this country is being discriminated against by foreign governments in the matter of tariff rates, charges and exactions. Upon the information received from it will largely depend the action of the president in issuing or withholding his proclamations imposing the minimum rates of duty provided for in the new act. The act provides that the maximum rates shall be applied to all countries on and after March 31, 1910, which "unduly discriminate" against the United States in the matter of tariffs, and in this wording the authority of the president is recognized to exercise his judgment as to what constitutes "undue discrimination."

HID MONEY IN STOVE.

New Flint Woman Tells Police Some One Stole It.

Flint, Mich., Sept. 20.—Mrs. T. J. Church, 411 East Sixth street, has reported to the police that some one had stolen $120 which she had hidden in a parlor stove. Mrs. Church said she would not trust her savings to a bank, so secreted it in the stove, thinking no one would find it.

CABIN BOY KNEW OF COOK'S DASH

Lad on Peary's Ship Had Kept Still All This Time.

HADN'T EVEN TOLD PEARY

Cook Told William Pritchard and Harry Whitney Details of His Dash to Pole on Reaching Annatook—Those on Roosevelt Would Say Nothing on What Whitney Said.

Battle Harbor, Labrador, by Marconi wireless, via Cape Ray, N. F., Sept. 20.—One of the men on the steamer Roosevelt at least knew long ago that Dr. Frederick A. Cook had claimed to have reached the pole. He is William Pritchard, cabin boy and assistant cook on the Roosevelt, who remained at Annatook with Boatswain Murphy to guard the stores. Pritchard had not spoken to anyone on board of Dr. Cook's achievement, but when confronted Saturday, just prior to the sailing of the Roosevelt from Battle Harbor, with a wireless message from mid-ocean that Dr. Cook said Pritchard knew the whole story of his dash to the pole, the youth admitted that he had learned from Dr. Cook the details of the final march and that Dr. Cook had explained to him the route followed.

Whether Boatswain Murhpy also was informed of Dr. Cook's success Pritchard did not know, but, unquestionably, Harry Whitney, who was at the storehouse when Dr. Cook returned from his dash with the two Eskimos, is conversant with all the facts. Whitney did not disclose this interesting piece of news to Commander Peary, and Pritchard kept it from Peary during the entire voyage of the Roosevelt to Battle Harbor.

Murphy Was at Etah.

Pritchard said that he was at the house at Annatook with Whitney and Cook, while Murphy was at Etah. He heard Dr. Cook describe to the New Haven sportsman how he went to the pole and remained there two days. He could not remember whether Dr. Cook said he remained there April 21 and April 22 or whether it was April 22 and 23. Dr. Cook used a map to illustrate the route followed.

Asked why he had not repeated this on board the Roosevelt, Pritchard said that Dr. Cook had told him to say nothing about his having been at the pole until the Roosevelt reached civilization.

Pritchard said the Eskimos told him that they had been "way, way, north."

None of the Peary party at Battle Harbor would discuss what information has been learned from Harry Whitney, as Commander Peary had given orders that the Cook controversy must not be mentioned. It was commonly reported at Battle Harbor, however, that Peary had some differences with Whitney, who decided that instead of returning to Sydney on the Roosevelt he would do some shooting in Greenland.

MURPHY TELLS OF COOK'S ARRIVAL FROM THE NORTH

Sydney, C. B., Sept. 20.—New light has been thrown on the controversy over the discovery of the North Pole by the arrival here of the steamer Tyrian from Battle Harbor, where the correspondents learned from two members of Commander Peary's expedition that Dr. Frederick Cook had met them at Etah and had mentioned nothing of discovering the pole.

When Harry Whitney, George Norton and Larned went to Etah on the Orik to bring provisions for Commander Peary, both Norton and Larned turned back, and Whitney obtained permission from Commander Peary to remain at the Etah station. Commander Peary stationed John Murphy, boatswain of the Roosevelt, and William Pritchard, assistant cook of the Roosevelt, at Etah to guard the stores. Murphy, telling of his experience at Etah, said to the newspapermen:

"Commander Peary told me to go ashore at Etah to guard the stores, which I saw taken from the Roosevelt and the Erik. Pritchard was with me. Some time last spring a white man came into camp, and Mr. Whitney told me that it was Dr. Cook. He did not stay long in camp, and soon went away. Cook looked tired and worn out and said he was hungry. I had an argument with him, as he claimed that some of the stores that we were guarding belonged to him. Heicely had two Eskimos with him, and, as all his dogs were dead, the doctor had to pull his own sledge."

When interviewed, before his departure, Peary did no fencing with his interviewers and prefaced the "inquisition," as he called it, with the statement that he had made his position clear in reference to the Cook controversy in earlier dispatches which had been sent by wireless to the Associated Press. To the bombardment of interrogations the commander replied in a sharp, clear voice, and he couched his answers in terms that left no mistake in their meaning.

"I shall pay no attention to fake stories or any side issues," said Commander Peary, "that are put out to distract from the main question, 'has Cook been at the pole?'"

"Do you think it possible for any man to fake observations to prove that he was at the pole?" he was asked.

"In the opinion of Admiral Melville, U. S. N.; Admiral Sir George Nares, H. N., and myself, yes," he responded quickly. Then he continued:

"I do not care to speak of other observations in view of what I claim, and I won't say anything more until the statement signed by another is offered, and then I will submit my statement."

COOK WILL REACH NEW YORK TUESDAY

Reception Committee Not Prepared For Today.

On board the Oscar II., Sept. 20, by United wireless and Marconi wireless telegraph.—"To the Associated Press:

"My desire to get on American soil increases with every mile laid behind by the Oscar II. The vessel is doing her best record, although delayed occasionally, making 400 miles in the last twenty-four hours.

"Commander Peary's unfortunate accusations have disclosed another side of his character. The specific records of my journey are accessible to everyone who reads, and all can decide for themselves when Peary publishes a similar report. (Signed)

"FREDERICK A. COOK.

Captain Hempel's dinner last evening was a highly enjoyable function, everybody being decked with fancy caps of paper and grotesque or picturesque ornaments, and the greatest good humor prevailed. In toasting the captain, Dr. Cook said:

"There is a man aboard the Oscar II. who protects the lives of many. His guardian hand is felt everywhere; his watchful eye is always wakeful to our comfort and safety. I am sure that every man, woman and child will agree with me when I say that this voyage has been a dream, and will always be an important page in our diary of adventure. The passengers have arranged themselves in a family circle, with brotherly and sisterly interest, and the mental and social atmosphere has been superb. Captain Hempel is the radiating center from which our joys are illuminated."

The Oscar II., with Dr. Cook aboard, will not arrive at New York until Tuesday morning. This is at the urgent request of the reception committee which is to meet Dr. Cook. The steamer could have reached Sandy Hook Monday afternoon, but a message from the reception committee, asking that the arrival be delayed, owing to the fact that it was impossible to change the committee's arrangements, was received by wireless, and the captain consented to comply with the request. The Oscar II. is, therefore, under decreased speed and will reach quarantine at about 7:30 Tuesday morning.

HIS RESIDENCE DYNAMITED

Man Concerned In Youngstown Strike Apparently Victim of Attack.

Youngstown, O., Sept. 20.—The residence of Charles I. Gibson, general manager of the Struthers plant of the American Sheet & Tin Plate company, was dynamited early in the day None of the occupants of the house were injured, but all of them were thrown from their beds by the force of the explosion.

A strike has been in progress at the mill for several weeks, and Mr. Gibson has been active in his efforts to secure the re-opening of the plant under the "open shop" plan. While Mr. Gibson has made no direct charges against any one, the county authorities believe that strike sympathizers are responsible for the dynamiting.

The escape of the Gibson family from injury was remarkable. A large brass shell, filled with dynamite and fitted with a cap and a fuse, was exploded in a cellar window directly under Mr. Gibson's room.

A social event of note has taken place at Saginaw. Miss Lulu Baum, oldest daughter of former Mayor William B. Baum, was united in marriage at the bride's home to Victor Mietens of St. Petersburg, Russia.

Admission has been made that Battle Creek's Business Men's association, one of the most noted "boards of trade" in the country, will have to suspend operations unless financially aided. Secretary John I. Gibson reports the association is $800 behind in its expenses and says it is due to lack of interest among retail merchants.

Truancy in Shiawassee county is becoming more prevalent than ever before, and the truant officer is being kept busy. In the country the principle cause is the shortage of help among the farmers, who are keeping their children out of school to help on the farms, and in the city it is the factories that are to blame.

"Jail is no place for a man," said Carl Schroeder, at Traverse City, as he paid his fine and costs of $65 and marched out a free man. Schroeder is the well-to-do Northport commercial fisherman who went to jail rather than pay out money for violating the fishing laws. Two days in jail convinced him that there might be a flaw in his reasoning.

Cosmetics and lotions will not clear your complexion of pimples and blotches like Foley's Orino Laxative, for indigestion, stomach and liver trouble and habitual constipation. Cleanses the system and is pleasant to take.

Don't expect to find your field of labor full of shade trees.

TESTIFIES AFTER FOUR YEARS.

Carlisle Center, N. Y., G. B. Burhans, writes: "About four years ago I wrote you that I had been entirely cured of kidney trouble by taking two bottles of Foley's Kidney Remedy, and after four years I am again pleased to state that I have never had any return of those symptoms, and I am evidently cured to stay cured." Foley's Kidney Remedy will do the same for you.

Some people never run into debt; they jump into it.

Many people delude themselves by saying "It will wear away," when they notice symptoms of kidney and bladder trouble. This is a mistake. Take Foley's Kidney Remedy, and stop the drain on the vitality. It cures backache, rheumatism, kidney and bladder trouble, and makes every trace of pain, weakness, and urinary trouble disappear.

As the mind is bent so is the tongue inclined.

WARNING

Do not be persuaded into taking anything but Foley's Honey and Tar for chronic coughs, bronchitis, hay fever, asthma, and lung trouble, as it stops the cough and heals the lungs.

Dr. Abernethy, the great English physician, said, "Watch your kidneys. When they are affected, life is in danger." Foley's Kidney Remedy makes healthy kidneys, corrects urinary irregularities, and tones up the whole system.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

Edgar N. Bayliss, a merchant of Robinsonville, Del., wrote: "About two years ago I was thin and sick, and coughed all the time and if I did not have consumption, it was near to it. I commenced using Foley's Honey and Tar, and it stopped my cough, and I am now entirely well, and have gained twenty-eight pounds, all due to the good results from taking Foley's Honey and Tar."

SWINGING THE ARMS.

The Habit a Relic of the Time When Man Went on All Fours.

Sir Victor Horsley, lecturing before the Medical society of London, explained our habit of swinging the arms when walking, which he stated was quite unnecessary, as a relic of the days when we walked on all fours. Then we had to use arms as well as legs. Although their use serves no purpose when walking upright, we still keep on moving all four limbs alternately or in progression. Sir Victor set forth some new facts concerning the functions of the cerebellum, the mysterious and little understood hind part of the brain.

"Primarily the cerebellum must be regarded," said the lecturer, "as a sensory organ which has an important part in the correct performance of many of our automatic actions. Walking, standing and running are good examples of such actions, which cannot be accurately carried out without a normal, well balanced cerebellum. Newborn animals cannot stand. They sprawl, and before they can stand, walk or run they must acquire this power. For conveniences in life this ability to stand must be secured without the animal having consciously to think what he is doing. The fully developed cerebellum supplies this power unconsciously."

In proof of this Sir Victor pointed out that the cerebellum of a full grown cat showed fully developed cells and fibers, whereas in newborn kittens the brain in the cerebellar portion is not yet organized into active nerve tissues.—New York Times.

DIVING BELL SPIDERS.

Gathering Air For Use In Working Under Water.

The diving bell spiders gather air to use just as a soldier might draw water and dispose it about his person in water bottles. They do this in two ways, one of which is characteristic of many of the creatures which live both in and out of the water, as the spider does. The tail of the spider is covered with black, velvety hair. Putting its tail out of the water, it collects much air in the interstices of the velvet. It then descends, when all this air drawn down beneath the surface collects into a single bubble, covering its tail and breathing holes like a coat of quicksilver. This supply the spider uses up when at work below until it dwindles to a single speck, when it once more ascends and collects a fresh store.

The writer has seen one of these spiders spin so many webs across the stems of water plants in a limited space that not only the small water shrimps and larvae, but even a young fish, were entangled. The other and more artistic means of gathering air employed by the spider is to catch a bubble on the surface and swim below with it. The bubble is then let go into a bell woven under some plant, into which many other bubbles have been drawn. In this diving bell the eggs are laid and the young hatched under the constant watch of the old spider. —London Saturday Review.

How Turner Painted.

If we are to believe Thornbury, the wonderful "Burning of the House of Lords and Commons" was almost entirely painted after the canvas was hung on the walls of the Royal academy. So certain was Turner of himself at that period that he would send to the exhibition just a laid in sketch, trusting entirely to varnishing days to complete the scheme. He would arrive at the academy as early as 4 o'clock in the morning and be among the last to leave in the evening.

Unlike Lawrence, who had to step back constantly to judge of effects, Turner would work, so to say, with his nose to the canvas. When Lord Hill at too close quarters looked at the houses of parliament picture he condemned it as "nothing but dabs." Catching its magical effect from a just distance, however, he exclaimed enthusiastically: "Painting! God bless me! So it is!" According to Thornbury, Turner made a number of sketches of the fire, but produced two pictures only.—London News.

Stolen Place Names.

There are many stolen place names outside Lancashire, the most flagrant instance of theft being afforded by Etruria, in Staffordshire, which annexed this name because Wedgwood's copies of Etruscan pottery were manufactured there. Then in Wales we find Bethesda and Hebron, and in Scotland Joppa, Alexandria and Portobello. Valentia, off the Irish coast, is named after the Spanish town, but this is hardly a case of theft, as the Spaniards themselves bestowed the name on the island. Aspatria, in Cumberland, looks like a name filched from Italy, but is in reality a corruption of Gospatrick.—London Chronicle.

Curious Old London Clubs.

The days of quaint and queer clubs are days of the past. We do not hear at present of a "No Nose club," or "Club of Beans," or a "Man Killing club," whose titles are suggestive; of the "Surly club," whose object was the practice of contradiction and of foul language, so that the members might not be wanting in impudence to abuse passengers on the Thames; or of the "Man Hunting club," established once by young limbs of the law; or of the "Lying club," every member of which was required to wear a blue cap with a red feather in it; or of the "Scatter Wit society," consisting of wits; or of the "Hum Dum club," whose members were to say nothing till midnight; or of the "Twopenny club," a member of which, if he swore, was to be kicked on the shins by the other members; or of the "Everlasting club," which has not lasted long; or of the "Kit Cat club," known after its toasts of "Old Cats and Young Kits;" or of the "Beefstead club," of which the following amusing description was written by one of its illustrious members:

Like Britain's island lies our steak.
A sea of gravy bounds it.

Woman's Power Over Man

Woman's most glorious endowment is the power to awaken and hold the pure and honest love of a worthy man. When she loses it and still loves on, no one in the wide world can know the heart agony she endures. The woman who suffers from weakness and derangement of her special womanly organism soon loses the power to sway the heart of a man. Her general health suffers and she loses her good looks, her attractiveness, her amiability and her power and prestige as a woman. Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N.Y., with the assistance of his staff of able physicians, has prescribed for and cured many thousands of women. He has devised a successful remedy for woman's ailments. It is known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is a positive specific for the weaknesses and disorders peculiar to women. It purifies, regulates, strengthens and heals. Medicine dealers sell it. No honest dealer will advise you to accept a substitute in order to make a little larger profit.

A CLEVER RECTOR.

How He Got All the Young Men to Church on Sunday.

"Many interesting stories are told of Bishop Wilmer of Alabama, who was noted for his wit and sharp repartee," said a clergyman. "A story which is considered characteristic of the man was told by a Virginia minister:

"When Bishop Wilmer was rector of the little Protestant Episcopal church at Upperville, Va., he was much worried by the nonattendance at service on Sundays of the majority of the young men of the community. On inquiry he found that instead of going to church they were in the habit of playing marbles for stakes. Marbles in those days, it must be remembered, was a much more serious game than it is now, occupying much the same position in the realm of sports as do billiards and pool in these days.

"Bishop Wilmer, then a parson not well known, determined to break up this practice. He himself had been an expert marble player in his boyhood. Accordingly one Saturday he came across a number of the young men engaged in a game. The good bishop asked several questions and finally challenged the lot to play him for "keeps." They readily consented.

"Much to their astonishment, the young minister won steadily, and soon they had to go to the stores to replenish their stock. Toward the close of the afternoon Mr. Wilmer had won every marble in the town of Upperville. Putting his "winnings" in a bag, he remarked as he walked away, "Now, gentlemen, since you can't play marbles tomorrow I hope to see you all at church." And he did.'"—Washington Herald.

SERVED THE TERRAPIN.

Crossed the Ocean to Supervise One Course of a Dinner.

George W. Harvey, the inventor of steamed oysters and a famous restaurant keeper, was once the hero of an incident that in some respects made the exploits of Lucullus and other noted gourmets of ancient Rome look cheap and commonplace. He made a 6,000 mile journey to cook or supervise the cooking of a single course of a dinner.

A wealthy Englishman noted for his love of good living while on a visit to Washington was given a dinner at Harvey's, at which terrapin formed the piece de resistance. It was the first time the Englishman had encountered the famous Maryland delicacy, and it made an instantaneous and profound hit with him. He decided that he would introduce the dish to his London friends and at once entered into negotiations with Harvey to come to London and do the cooking.

Harvey named his price, and it was accepted without a murmur, although it was a stiff one, as he was a very portly man and did not like to travel. At the appointed time he engaged his passage for England, took a sufficient number of live terrapin along with him and sailed for London. He supervised the preparation of the turtles in the kitchen of his generous employer, saw that they were cooked and served properly, collected his £200 honorarium and his expenses and took the next steamer back to New York.—Exchange.

The New Kind.

Among the passengers in a parlor car attached to a southern train leaving Washington were a reticent individual desirous of reading his paper and a talkative person equally desirous of engaging the reserved one in conversation. At first the reticent man took the questions of his neighbor in good part, returning short but polite answers. Finally, however, he grew somewhat irritated at the persistence of the other.

"The grass is quite green, eh?" was the idle query that next came from the garrulous one as he gazed through the window.

"Quite!" said the bored one, with a smothered growl. "But, then, consider what a change it is from the pink and mauve grass we've been having lately!"—Harper's Weekly.

Encouraging.

It was Bilkin's wedding day, and he was teasing his young brother-in-law.

"Well, Johnnie," he said solemnly, "I'm going to take your sister a long way off and have her all to myself, where you won't see her any more."

"No; really, are you?" said the lad curiously.

"Yes, I am. What do you think of it?"

"Nothin'. I can stand it if you can." —Pearson's Weekly.

Generous.

"What's your fare?" asked old Flintskin of his cabby the other day and was met with the stereotyped reply:

"Well, sir, I will leave that to you."

"Thank you; you're very kind," said old F., buttoning up his pockets and walking off. "You're the first person who ever left me anything yet."—London Fun.

Status of the Deadbeat.

No man is wholly free from sin, but so many lesser evils are tolerated that a man should hesitate long before becoming a deadbeat. Criminals are despised and abhorred, but to the deadbeat all that is coming, as well as the contempt of his fellow men. There is something at once so mean and so little in taking advantage of the confidence which comes with friendship that the hand of every man is turned against a deadbeat as soon as his reputation is well established. The deadbeat may fondly imagine he is living easy and making money without work, and of course he takes no account of the confidence he violates and the hardships he inflicts on others. But, that aside, he really has a harder time than the man who is honest and fair. He is compelled to move a good deal and peace of mind he knows not. Like other types of crooks, he doesn't prosper, and his finish is more unpleasant than the beginning.—Atchison Globe.

THE PRICE OF GENIUS.

What It Means to Man to Be a Pioneer In Thought.

To be a pioneer in thought is to stand alone with nature, not for a few minutes, but for life. The isolateness of the few great minds of each generation of men is utterly undreamed of, for want of understanding, by those about them. Yet think what it is to pass one's days in a thought world where the thinker roams alone; to grapple with problems the very terms of which are beyond ordinary comprehension and the solution appreciated only in years to come; to contemplate in lonely ecstasy, after still lonelier despair, the revelation that comes with months and more of pondering. When some one asked Newton how he came to make his wonderful discoveries he replied, "Simply by always thinking about them." Consider Kepler toiling year after year fruitlessly for some ratio that should link the planet's motions by a general law, calculating assiduously and putting hypothesis after hypothesis aside as he found it would not work until at last, after almost inconceivable toil, he hit upon the one that would.

As if this loneliness by nature were not enough, it must needs be accentuated by man, for he rises in such cases in chorus to condemn. Consider Darwin, in patient study, testing the working out of natural selection and adding fact to fact, only to have the whole denounced as ridiculously absurd. Think you the denunciations of the master while living are wholly compensated by the plaudits after he is dead? The loneliness of greatness is the price men make the genius pay for posthumous renown.—Percival Lowell in Atlantic.

THE COOK'S FAULT.

No Wonder the Bird Was Not Tender When Served.

One of the most annoying things about swans is that they live to an extremely great age and that it is impossible for the ordinary observer to guess what their years may be. President Grover Cleveland once had an amusing experience with some swans, according to a writer in the American Magazine. He had been in the south shooting and brought home a number of wild swans, one of which he sent to each member of his cabinet and to some other associates.

"All the boys," said Mr. Cleveland, "thanked me politely for having remembered them, but none of them seemed to have much to say about how they enjoyed the birds.

"Carlisle, I found, had his cooked on a night when he was dining out. Another, when I asked him, said he hoped I wouldn't mind, but he had sent his home to his old mother. Thurber didn't mention his bird at all for two days. Finally I asked him about it.

"'Thurber, did you get that swan all right?'

"'Yes, sir—oh, yes, I got the swan all right, thank you,' and he bent over his desk and seemed very busy.

"'Fine bird,' I said.

"'Yes, sir, fine bird,' and he went on working.

"'Enjoy eating him, Thurber?'

"He waited a minute, and then he said: 'Well, sir, I guess they didn't cook him right at my house. They cooked him only two days.' And he went on working without cracking a smile."

Edible Flowers of India.

Many edible flowers, it appears, are to be found in India. One of the most appreciated grows on a tree about which we have very little information, but which in the country itself is named the "mbowad." The natives consume an enormous number of these flowers, whose pale yellow corollae are pulpy and thick, and they prepare them in various ways.

When they are fresh they are put in cakes, to which they give a sweet flavor, but they are more especially used for making bread after they have been dried and reduced to flour. By allowing them to ferment a kind of wine is produced, and by distilling them a brandy is obtained of which the Hindoos are very fond.—Vulgarisation Scientifique.

Success of One Piece of Music.

Very few know anything about Suppe, the composer of "Fatinitza" and several other operas and the father of the "Poet and Peasant" overture. The latter was composed to an entirely different piece and fell flat. The author then tried it at intervals of six months and a year with two other plays and no one found it pretty. Lastly, because there was not time to write a new overture, it was used with a long forgotten farce called "Poet and Peasant." The farce was successful and people endured the overture. Then somebody asked permission to publish it in a journal, arranged for the piano. Soon everybody was playing it. Then a music firm bought of Suppe for $25 the right and published the score. They made a clear $40,000 with it.

Euphonious Female Names.

Referring to a recent note on euphonious female names, it may be said that the eccentric Christian name attains its ripest vigor in the highlands. There the natives have a few names natural to the sex, such as "Barbac"—though Barbac may be the name of the family cow—"the dear one, the dun one." The great majority of female names are, however, frackly compounded from male equivalents. "Wilhelmina" is known in the south, and on the same principle Andrew finds its female counterpart in "Andrewina," while "Malcolminas" and "Donaldinas" are as thick as blackberries. One unhappy child among the relations of the present writer was mercifully known as "Ava," and Ava she will be all her life. Her real name, when magnificently set forth, is "Alexandrina Victoria Andrewina," and the abbreviation is formed from the initial letters.—London Standard.

STUDENT LIFE IN THE Leipzig Coservatorium of Music.

I have no doubt that life in the Leipzig Conservatorium, is similar in all institutions of learning, as well as it is in the German music school. There you will find the lazy and the diligent, the talented, and the dull stupid student, sent there by fond parents, believing in the genius of their children.

In the Leipzig school, I found that the majority of the pupils consisted of steady, plodding workers, that doubtless would make excellent teachers and good musicians. There were also some that had talent of the greatest order, destined to fill the highest positions in the world, and leave behind them a trail of glory, that time will never allow to fade, and strange to write, some of those that seemed to have the brightest prospects before them, failed to attain their much wished-for goal.

One case I remember was that of a young man named Vogerich. He had a beautiful refined face, was a favorite pupil of Moscheles, and a wonderfully talented pianist. Everyone predicted a great future for him. But many years after he left school, I met him in Chicago, and he told me with tears in his eyes, that he had not fulfilled the hopes of his friends.

In writing of student life in the Leipzig school, I intend passing over the excessive drinking habits of some of the students, which were simply disgusting, and spoiled what would otherwise have been useful lives. There were also worse evils in Leipzig, that ruined both body and soul. These also, I purposely leave out, as it would neither be profitable, nor pleasant to write about.

But I wish to relate first of all some of the characteristic features of both teachers and students, and first of all some students loved to play tricks on their teachers, and dear old Moscheles, was the subject of many of these pranks, just because his weakness consisted in a love for his own composition.

When some of Moschele's pupils did not wish to play for him, on account of poor lessons, they would come early, one was appointed to sit down at the piano, and begin to play one of Moschele's pieces, and when the Professor entered the class room, the student at the piano would ask Moscheles who was the composer of the piece he was trying to remember, then Moscheles—quite innocent of the trick being played on him, would exclaim: Don't you know my opus, so and so! And then would step over to the piano and begin the whole piece. This was just what the students wanted. They then led him from one piece to another of his own composition, and the first thing Moscheles knew, was, that the lesson hour was gone, and the next class was waiting for their lesson, and the class that had fooled him, was dismissed without having played their poor lessons, and that was what they planned and plotted for.

But there was one teacher in that school that could not be so easily fooled, and that was Ferdinand David. He was called by the students, The LION, and he was known as the greatest teacher of violin in the world. His greatest pupil, Joackim, died only a short time ago in Berlin. David had an ensemble class in the small hall once a week, in which all the advanced pupils played together. David would bring the Orchestral score of some Overture or a movement of some Symphony, and after giving out the violin parts to the young players, would then call some young composer to sit down at the piano and play the wood-wind parts, it required one to have knowledge of orchestral scores, and of course ability to read the orchestral parts at sight, but woe to the young man who attempted to do this, and failed in playing his part perfectly.

An incident harpened one day that made me feel badly for a young man, his name was Herr Grammon, evidently wealthy, he dressed, and wore his beard like an Englishman, and had the nick-name of the Dandy. Well, one day, at this ensemble class, Herr Grammon had the temerity to accept David's invitation to play the orchestra parts, and after the rehearsal began, I noticed David casting looks at Grammon, but he did not say a word. As the rehearsal proceeded, David's looks grew more and more ominous until suddenly David evidently could not stand it any longer, stopped the players, reached forward, pushed Grammon from the chair with such force that chair and Grammon landed on the floor and poor Grammon's face was scarlet, when he got up on his feet. David told him never to attempt playing orchestra parts in public until he could do so in private practice.

Grammon never played again for David, and perhaps the lesson he received was the best he ever had in his life.

I was destined a short time after this to receive my lesson from this same master, and it happened in this way: I had been asked to sing an Aria from Hayden's Creation with orchestral accompaniment, and David was to be the conductor. Now, I was in mortal terror of David, not a member of the Gewandhans Orchestra, (and this was considered one of the greatest orchestries in the world) but stood in awe of him, even Carl Reinecke the conductor of the orchestra, had to keep silent when David found fault with any of the players.

Now, when I found out that David was to conduct the orchestra, when I sung, I determined to do everything possible to gain his good opinion. I thereupon thought out a little plan of my own to accomplish this result, and that was to stand on the concert stage in such a position that I could keep my eye on David's baton, and so sing my piece in good time.

Well, the night came when I stood beside David on the stage. I had chosen my position, and everything was just as I wanted it. I could see the conductor every moment I sung, and I was delighted that my little scheme was going to be a success. I was waiting with my music open at the page, and expecting every moment to see David open the prelude with the orchestra, when suddenly something seemed to touch me in the small of my back, and I was being pushed forward on the stage while David leaned over me at the same time and whispered in my ear, "I FOLLOW YOU" not "YOU FOLLOW ME." Then he left me standing several feet in front of the stage. I sing my aria well, and from that time, I never forgot the lesson he taught me.

I will give one more incident of this great man before concluding.

When I engaged with Dr. Ziegfeld to come to the United States, and teach in his college, he brought with him several delightful American ladies, and after being introduced to them, they were eager to have me obtain some autographs for their albums. I was successful in getting a few, but I was specially asked to obtain the autograph of David. So, early one morning I wended my way to David's residence, and arriving there knocked at his door. While waiting for the servant to open the door, I could not help hearing violin music in the house and I began to fear that I would not be able to see him, but the servant came at last, and after telling her that I wished to see Herr Concetmeister David, she conveyed my message, and almost immediately, David came to the door with his violin in his hand, and a smile on his face, for I felt proud that I had gained his respect and friendship. Then I told him I wished his autograph for an American lady's album. He looked at me for just one moment, as much as to say—how dare you interrupt my work for such a reason, and then shut the door with a tremendous bang, and I was left staring at a closed door, with a sore heart, that I had offended MY DEAR FRIEND DAVID.

The King of Rome.

To teach his son obedience to nursery rules Napoleon gave strict orders that he never be admitted to his apartments if he came thither alone. One morning the little king of Rome came trotting along the corridor and, looking up at the tall officer on guard, imperiously ordered: "Open the door for me. I want to see papa."

The officer, true to his instructions, answered gently, but firmly, "Sire, I cannot open the door to your majesty."

"Why not?" demanded the little autocrat. "I am the little king."

At the gentle reminder, "But your majesty is all alone," the golden haired cherub seemed somewhat nonplused, but, his governess appearing a moment later, he seized her hand and, thus protected, stamped his tiny foot and cried: "Open the door! The king wishes it!"

This time, all being in order, the tall officer flung the door wide open, solemnly announcing, "The king of Rome."

BROKE IT GENTLY.

The Reason the Brakeman Quit Railroading For Awhile.

Danny Wilmarth was a brakeman. One day while his train was on a sidetrack at a town in Ohio another train that was doing some switching on the same track suddenly bumped into the caboose on the rear platform of which Danny was standing, and he was severely bruised. He was taken to a local hospital, where it was found that his injuries were so serious as to necessitate his remaining several weeks for treatment. At the end of a month he surprised his mother at her home in Pittsburg by walking into the house on crutches.

"Why, Danny," she exclaimed, "what is the matter? What has happened to you?"

"Why, I wrote and told you, mother," he answered with a grin.

"No, son, you didn't. All you wrote was that you were going to quit railroading for awhile, that you had found something else to do and that it was an indoor job. You didn't say a word about getting hurt or anything of that kind."

"I surely did, mother. I told you what happened to me."

"You surely didn't!"

"How did I say I came to be staying in that town?"

"You said you happened to be caught there between trains."

OUR MILLIONAIRES.

American Money Kings From a German Point of View.

In a satirical article entitled "The Natural History of American Millionaires" a writer in the Berliner Tageblatt says: "They all came to New York, Chicago or Philadelphia with one shirt and with one cent in the pocket of the only other garment. All served as bootblacks, errand boys or even in more humble positions and in the second week had saved enough to buy a waistcoat. After one month they appeared before their respective employers clad in new clothes and told them with imposing self confidence that the organization of their business was defective and required reorganization. A year later the boy has become a partner, in two years he has outstripped the former boss in wealth, and a year later he has grown smart enough to kill off the benefactor of other days. All American millionaires arise at 3 in the morning, eat and drink almost nothing, cease their work at midnight and allow only those to live whom they think are good enough to invite. Every dollar king founds a university, an opera, a museum or a picture gallery. Life becomes a burden to them when there are no more competitors in their branch worthy of destruction. Then they lie down and die of ennui."

Almost Heavenly.

"That is Saturn you see now," explains the astronomer, while the visitor to the observatory peers through the telescope at the mysterious orb with its rings and with its moons showing as little points of light.

"It's away off, isn't it?" asks the visitor.

"Oh, yes. Saturn is so far off that it requires thirty of our years to make the circuit around the sun."

"Thirty years!"

"Yes."

"My! Saturn must be pretty close to heaven."

"I couldn't say as to that."

"I should call it almost heavenly not to have to buy spring dresses and hats for my wife and daughters not more than once in thirty years."

For fear the visitor would have something to say about the summer engagements on Saturn being responsible for the rings, the astronomer quickly pointed the telescope toward Jupiter.—Chicago Post.

Doing a Man's Work.

The Widow Skinner has been twice bereaved, and she was telling me about her two husbands over a cup of tea.

"Boggs was the first," she said dreamily, "a ornery hound wot usued to git drunk and come home and lambaste me all over the place. After Boggs died I married Skinner. He was a good for nothin', ornery critter wot 'ud turn up full, and I'd lam him till he couldn't see."

She chuckled with quiet amusement.

"Well," said a listener, "the last was better than the first, at least."

But the widow shook her head.

"No, 'tw'an't," she said. "I'd kinder got used to Boggs' little ways, and in Skinner's case I never cottoned to the idea of doin' a man's work about the house."—Exchange.

Drifted Into It.

"Yes, I've managed to get into debt pretty deeply," said Kayrliss.

"Indeed," remarked Wise. "I gave you credit for more sense than you seem to have."

"H'm! The trouble was that my tailor gave me credit for more dollars than I seem to have," said Kayrliss.—Catholic Standard and Times.

Nothing to Offer.

"Have you," asked the judge of a recently convicted man, "anything to offer the court before sentence is passed?"

"No, your honor," replied the prisoner. "My lawyer took my last farthing." —London Mail.

Wise Posts.

"Do poets ever write poems in their letters to their sweethearts?" asked the sweet young thing.

"No," replied the near famous bard. "We've got more sense than to queer the game in that manner."—Milwaukee Journal.

Stumped.

"Why, Puss, you people here don't know anything about fruit. Out in Oregon we raise apples as big as your head."

"Do you raise peaches as big as I am, Uncle Phil?"

"Why—er—uh!"—Chicago Tribune.

Progress Impeded.

First Member—Mrs. De Streak didn't have her way at the dress reform meeting this afternoon, did she? Second Member—No; her gown fitted her so tightly that she couldn't make a motion.—Puck.

Egotistical.

Blobbs—What an egotistical fellow Talkalot is! When you are with him he expects you to be all ears. Slobbs—Yes; and you find him to be all "I's." —Philadelphia Record.

Judgment.

Never judge a town by the size of the type with which its name is printed on the map of a railroad that doesn't pass through it.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Assist yourself and heaven will assist you.—Latin Proverb.

LEGALLY A CORPSE.

Therefore He Could Not Possibly Have Been Murdered.

It was the custom in the good old days in Great Britain and Ireland to hang condemned men for half an hour and then hand them over to their friends. A man named Mahoney was hanged in this way. At the end of half an hour his body was given to his friends, who put him in a coffin they had brought with them and galloped off with him on a cart. But before they were out of sight of the gallows authorities the corpse in the exuberance of his joy sat up in the coffin and shouted, "Hooroo!" A "pal," terrified lest this exhibition of vitality should cause the executioner to come after them, hit the hanged man playfully on the head with his stick, remarking, "Kape quiet, ye spalpeen." The silencing was so effectual that the victim of it never woke again, but was well and truly "waked" that same evening.

There was no doubt that the blow on the head killed him. The facts came to the knowledge of the authorities, and a justice was appealed to for a warrant for the culprit's arrest on a charge of murder, but the justice refused it, explaining that as the man was dead, having been hanged for half an hour and given up to his friends legally a corpse, it was impossible that he could have been murdered.—London Tit-Bits.

THE AFRICAN MARKET.

Prices That Wild Animals Bring in the Interior.

The prices of wild animals naturally fluctuate with the demand. An excessive supply of rhinoceroses would soon reduce the market value. Five for sale at any time in the world would glut the market, for one cannot sell a rhinoceros every day. The maintenance of wild animals is costly and they soon eat their value in food, so that every day they are on the hunter's or the dealer's hands he is losing money.

After the animals are captured they have to be transported to the coast. This adds greatly to the cost. Delivered at Nairobi or Fort Florence, which are inland and practically on the African hunting field, a baby rhinoceros of the prehensile lipped species will bring from $375 to $500, a giraffe from $250 to $500 and a baby hippopotamus from $250 to $450. elands and most of the large antelope from $125 to $200, elephants from $375 to $875, lions and leopards, with the exception of the black species of the latter, from $100 to $425, according to size and condition. The gorilla and the square muzzled (or so called white) rhinoceros can be sold at auction by telegraph. Their value might run from $5,000 to $30,000, according to the bidding.—Hampton's Magaine.

Diplomacy.

Sunday passed, Tuesday rolled around, and still his tail form did not loom in the vestibule when the cuckoo clock was sounding 8. Thursday he came, and the beautiful girl was burning with wrath.

"So this is the way you neglect me!" she hissed. "What have you to say for yourself? Why didn't you come?"

"I couldn't." faltered the young man. "I had the dyspepsia, and the doctor advised me not to come."

"What—the doctor told you not to come to see me because you had the dyspepsia?"

"Well, he told me to keep away from all sweets."

The next moment she had him seated on the parlor sofa, telling him he was the nicest young man in the world. —London Express.

Little Willie Knew.

Little Willie, the son of a Germantown woman, was playing one day with the girl next door when the latter exclaimed:

"Don't you hear your mother calling you? That's three times she's done so. Aren't you going in?"

"Not yet," responded Willie imperturbably.

"Won't she whip you?" demanded the little girl, awed.

"Naw!" exclaimed Willie in disgust. "She ain't goin' to whip nobody! She's got company. So, when I go in, she'll just say, 'The poor little man has been so deaf since he's had the measles!'"—Lippincott's.

Fully Appreciated.

Raymond, aged five, returned from Sunday school in a state of evident excitement. He strutted around the room as if about to burst with importance. The sympathetic eye of his mother was not slow to observe this.

"What's the matter, Raymond?" she asked.

"Oh, mother," exclaimed the small boy, his eyes sparkling, "the superintendent said something awful nice about me in his prayer this morning."

"What did he say?"

"He said, 'O Lord, we thank thee for food and Raymond.'"—Woman's Home Companion.

A Strong Guarantee.

"Are you sure these eggs are fresh?" asked the woman, eying them suspiciously.

"Yes, ma'am," replied the grocer, with emphasis. "I guarantee those eggs. If any of them aren't good I'll make 'em good!"—Lippincott's.

Good Advice.

He—But I tell you what it is, Maud, if your father is at all unreasonable I shall put my back to the wall and—She—Keep it there. That would be the safest position.—Kansas City Journal.

A word to the wise is not only sufficient; it is altogether too much.—Life.

From Game to Game.

He was afraid to tell her right out and out that he loved her, so he began in a roundabout way, hoping she would catch his drift, then betray, by her confusion, her own feelings. He didn't dream but that she loved him, but thought that she, like himself, was afraid to demonstrate it.

"Heart trouble," she repeated. "Are you sure you've heart trouble, Alfred. You know indigestion is very like it at times."

"Oh, I know I've got heart trouble, all right. I—can't you see it yourself?"

"Why, how silly, Alfred! No one can see heart trouble. They have to feel it. Have you taken anything for it?"

"No, not yet. But I—I want to, don't you know."

"Then why don't you?"

"I—I would—that is, if I could get it."

"Can't you get it, Alfred?"

"I—I don't know."

"Have you tried?"

"No, not yet."

(Silence for two provoking moments.)

"Alfred!" (coldly).

"Y-yes."

Charges have been made against Secretary Ballinger's administration of his office from a source which the President cannot afford to ignore. There should be a prompt and full investigation.

The Webster Anderson dry goods store is undergoing extensive repairs this week and in a short time Tecumseh will have an up-to-date dry goods store. Two arch ways have been cut between the two stores, one at the rear and one at the front. The Foster Sisters' Millinery department will occupy the front part of the room over the S. W. Anderson store, and Miss Sena Hosmer's Art department will be arranged later.

Rugs, carpets and curtains will be found upstairs in one department, which is being arranged for that purpose.

New goods are arriving daily in every department of the store, and it will be only a matter of a few days before the store is complete and in readiness for the fall trade.

THIS IS YOUR VERY LAST CHANCE.

Everything in the store must be sold out this week at the T. C. Harris closing out dry goods store as the room is rented to other parties and we must vacate. Bargains will be bigger than ever for this is the last week of the closing out sale of the T. C. Harris dry goods store, Tecumseh, Mich.

A PLEASANT WAY TO CURE CATARRH.

Poor deluded victims!

Continually sprinkling and spraying and stomach dosing.

What are you doing it for?

Trying to kill the catarrh germs?

Might just as well try to kill a cat with fresh milk.

Sticking a piece of chewing gum in the upper left hand corner of the right ear would slaughter just as many germs.

You can't kill the germs that cause catarrh unless you get where they are.

You can get where the germs are by breathing Hyomei, the powerful yet soothing antiseptic, which is prepared especially to kill catarrh germs.

THE CHILDREN LIKE IT

It's a pity when sick ones drug the stomach or stimulate the heart and kidneys. That is all wrong! A weak stomach means weak stomach nerves, always. And this is also true of the heart and kidneys. The weak nerves are instead crying out for help. This explains why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is promptly helping stomach, heart and kidney ailments. The Restorative reaches out for the actual cause of these ailments—the failing "inside nerves." Anyway test the Restorative 48 hours. It won't cure so soon as that, but you will surely know that help is coming. Sold by all druggists.

Teacher: "You have named all domestic animals save one. It has bristly hair, it is grimy, likes dirt and is fond of mud. Well, Tom?" Tom (shamefacedly); "That's me."

Tickling or dry Coughs will quickly loosen when using Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. And it is so thoroughly harmless that Dr. Shoop tells mothers to use nothing else even for very young babies. The wholesome green leaves and tender stems of a lung healing mountainous shrub give the curative properties to Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. It calms the cough and heals the sensitive bronchial membranes. No opium, no chloroform, nothing harsh used to injure or suppress. Demand Dr. Shoop's. Accept no other. Sold by all druggists.

Don't give your boy a knife unless he will first promise not to swap. Swapping leads to cheating, and that is bad for the boy and worse for him when he grows up.

And herein lies the popularity of this Remedy. It is winning defenders everywhere. Tablets or Liquid. Sold by all druggists.

NEEDFUL KNOWLEDGE.

TECUMSEH PEOPLE SHOULD LEARN TO DETECT THE APPROACH OF KIDNEY DISEASE.

The symptoms of kidney trouble are so unmistakable that they leave no ground for doubt. Sick kidneys excrete a thick, cloudy, offensive urine, full of sediment, irregular of passage, or attended by a sensation of scalding. The back aches constantly, headaches and dizzy spells may occur and the victim is often weighed down by a feeling of languor and fatigue. Neglect these warnings and there is danger of dropsy, Bright's Disease, or diabetes. Any one of these symptoms is warning enough to begin treating the kidneys at once. Delay often proves fatal.

You can use no better remedy than Doan's Kidney Pills. Here's Tecumseh proof:

George D. Chaplin, Ottawa St. Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I used Doan's Kidney Pills, procured from C. A. Wright & Son's drug store and they lived up to the claims made for them. When I procured this remedy I was feeling miserable but after a short use my health was greatly improved. I have no hesitation in recommending Doan's Kidney Pills, as I know they are a reliable kidney remedy." For Sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Bismarck and 3.

Bismarck had an intense aversion to 13, but a veneration for the number 3. His reasons for his predilection were that he served three masters; he was responsible for and fought in three great wars; he signed three treaties of peace; he arranged the meeting of three emperors; he established the triple alliance; in the Franco-Prussian war three horses were killed under him; he had three names (Bismarck, Schoenhausen and Lauenburg); he acquired three titles (count, prince, duke); the ancient arms of his family are a leaf of clover and three oak leaves. His family motto, "In trinitate robur" ("Strength in trinity"), was surely in itself sufficient to give a leaning in this particular direction. So closely were his feelings associated with the triple number that the caricaturists represented him with three hairs on his head. He had three children.

MISERABLE DYSPEPTICS!

"MI-ON-A was used by me for a stomach difficulty of long standing, and a cure obtained before I had used the remedy two weeks. I had hard, dull pains and cramps in my stomach, and this organ became tender, sore and weak. The trouble made me nervous and miserable. MI-O-NA put me on my feet in good shape, and entirely dispelled the stomach trouble; for this reason, it has my recommendation and hearty endorsement." William Lanning, Adrian St., Tecumseh, Mich. Oct. 15, 1908.

If you have dispepsia or any distressing ailment of the stomach, Mi-o-na tablets will give you relief in a few hours.

In nearly every case Mi-o-na will effect a permanent cure in two weeks.

Not by digesting the food artificially, mind you, for that method never did and never will cure dispepsia, but by building up and putting strength and energy into the flabby, overworked walls of the stomach so that it can easily digest its own food.

Mi-on-a is a greatest of all stomach tonics. Take it two weeks and you will feel better, healthier, happier; your skin will be clearer; your eyes brighter.

C. A. Wright & Son sell Mi-o-na at 50 cents a large box, under a guarantee from the makers to cure dyspepsia, sea or car sickness, vomiting of pregnancy, and effects of the night before, or money back.

C. A. Wright & Son are pleased to announce to their customers that they have secured the agency for Zemo, the best known remedy for the positive and permant cure of Eczema, Pimples, Dandruff, Blackheads, Piles and every form of Skin or Scalp disease. Zemo is a clean liquid for external use, gives instant relief and cures any form of skin or scalp diseases by destroying the germ that causes the disease, leaving a clean and healthy skin. TREMENDOUS WASTE.

Less Than One-third of Trees Felled Is Ever Used.

Washington, Sept. 20.—A startling situation has developed as the result of a taking of stock of the forestry resources of this country, according to Treadwell Cleveland, Jr., expert in the bureau of forestry, in a bulletin just made public, entitled, "The Status of Forestry in the United States."

It has shown, Mr. Cleveland declares, that we are still destroying the forest as we use it; that we are taking from it every year three and a half times as much wood as is added by the new growth. It has shown that less than one-third of the growing trees felled by the lumberman is ever used at all, so that two-thirds of all the timber cut is simply destroyed.

Heroic Treatment.

In Guiana if a child is slow in its movements the parents apply an ant to the child instead of a whip to make it move faster. This little ant bites more cruelly than a mosquito, and its bite is apt to be troublesome afterward. As you can imagine, this treatment does not make the child kind to others, and the children of Guiana are said to be particularly cruel to animals. The little boys in Guiana do not reckon their age by years, but by their ability to endure pain. Until he gets to the point where he can let the Hucu ant bite him without wincing he is considered merely a baby.

Ostrich Feathers of Tripoli.

The usual kinds of ostrich feathers known to the trade come into the Tripoli market. These are whites, blacks, feminas, byocks, spadonas, boos, drabs and floss. The Arab dealers bring them in unsorted packages containing feathers in various qualities of each kind, and it therefore requires expert knowledge to buy advantageously from the natives. The goods are sold by the "rotl." (The Tripoli rotl is about eighteen ounces.)

The feathers are washed and sorted, but not dyed or curled. They are washed in soapy water, and when still wet are beaten. A handful of them are taken by the stems and slapped against the floor with a force that to the uninitiated would seem to be enough to break them to pieces. This is done to bring out the fines or barbules, the miniature feathers extending from the barbs, and gives the plumes a fluffier, richer appearance. A good ostrich plume will have two or three layers of feathers; its tip should be perfect, and it should have no transverse cuts along the vane. For the retail trade two plumes are usually mounted together.

Many people who are otherwise healthy suffer from indigestion, or dyspepsia. When you consider that the stomach and allied digestive organs are the most important organs of the body, it would seem that a disorder there is to be taken very seriously.

Dyspeptics cannot eat the things they like; food sours in the stomach; then chronic constipation begins, or, as is often the case, you have been constipated all along, and the stools are forced and irregular.

But there is no use letting indigestion go until it becomes chronic and undermines your health. It is good advice to suggest to you that you go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, the wonderful cure for stomach, liver and bowel troubles. That is what C. Fowler, of Carson City, Mich., did and he is well today. Others who did the same and are cured are Ida A. Fortune, of Grand Junction, Tenn., B. F. Thompson, of Shenandoah, Ia., who actually considers that it saved his life. You can obtain a 50-cent or $1 bottle of the druggist, and, taken according to directions, it will probably be all you need. It is a liquid, acts gently, never gripes, and besides the laxative effect, contains exceptional tonic properties which tone the stomach, and that is what is especially needed in indigestion.

All sufferers from indigestion who have never used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can obtain a free test bottle by writing the doctor. It will be sent direct to your home without any charge. In the way thousands have proven to their own satisfaction Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the very remedy they needed to cure indigestion. When once you use this grand remedy you will throw violent cathartics, tablets, salts, etc., away.

If there is anything about your ailment that you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 500 Caldwell bldg., Monticello, Ill.

JAP COMMISSION MET PRESIDENT

Chief Executive Extends Them Welcome at Minneapolis.

HIGH COMPLIMENTS FOR JAPAN

Taft Praises Their Military Valor and Scouts Idea of Trouble With This Nation—Jap Party In Turn Toasts Chief Executive and Gives Three Rousing "Banzais."

Minneapolis, Sept. 20.—President Taft Sunday met the fifty members of the Japanese commercial mission to the United Saltes, bade them a hearty welcome to the country, assured them of the lasting friendship of the American people, paid a tribute to their qualities of industry and patriotism and in conclusion drank a toast to the emperor of Japan as "the warm and sincere friend of America, amid great enthusiasm among both his Japanese and American hearers.

The meeting with the Japanese was at a luncheon at the Lafayette club, on the shores of beautiful Lake Minnetonka, twenty miles of the city, tendered by the Commercial club of Minneapolis.

President Taft scouted the idea that there had ever been the slightest danger of trouble between Japan and America. He paid high compliment to the military valor of Japan when the country was "fighting in defense of her rights and the maintenance of her prestige on the field of battle."

"But," he declared, "Japan today is fighting for victories of peace, and we all hope she will succeed. We are not going to yield ourselves in that contest, however, if we can help it."

President Taft's address, which throughout was filled with expressions of the warmest admiration for the Japanese emperor and the Japanese people, followed a speech by Baron Shibusawa, a prominent banker of Tokio and chairman of the visiting commission, in which, speaking in his native tongue, he referred to President Taft "as one of the foremost men of the age, and a warm and true friend of Japan."

He proposed the health of the president and led his fellow countrymen in three resounding "banzais." Mr. Taft proposed the health of the emperor with a "banzai," which was caught up and re-echoed by the American guests.

Mr. Taft also received the ladies of the party, declaring to Baroness Shibusawa, that America wanted to see more of the ladies of Japan and to encourage their coming to this country with the men.

"It isn't fair," said the president, "that Japan should keep back the most charming of her creatures."

To Baron Shibusawa the president said he was sorry he could not receive him at the White House at Washington.

"But a prettier spot than this," added Mr. Taft, pointing out over the deep blue waters of the lake, "could hardly be found outside of Japan."

Before going to the Lafayette club to meet the Japanese commissioners, President Taft attended services at the Westminister Presbyterian church conducted by Dr. J. E. Bushnell.

The president and party left for Des Moines, Ia., over the Chicago & Great Western railroad at 8 p. m. last night.

Bolingbroke's Retort.

When Bolingbroke, who was at Aix-la-Chapelle during the treaty of peace at that place, at which time his attainder was not removed, was asked by an impertinent Frenchman whether he came there in any public character, his lordship answered: "Not at all. I came like a French minister, with no character at all."

COOK'S MEMORY DOESN'T FALTER

Explorer Undergoes Severe Quizzing by Newspapermen.

BELIEVES PEARY STILL FRIEND

Arctic Traveler Tells Why He Gave His Instruments to Whitney—Details of Each Observation Will First Go to Copenhagen University Before Being Given to Public.

New York, Sept. 23.—Dr. Frederick A. Cook, in his suite at the Waldorf-Astoria, last evening, submitted to one of the severest cross-examinations since he announced his discovery of the North Pole. The ordeal of the interview, which was conducted by forty newspaper representatives, including several from foreign newspapers, proved at least that he was not afraid to meet the public.

Incidentally, the city of New York officially recognized Cook's achievement Wednesday, when the board of aldermen passed a resolution commemorating his discovery and providing for a public welcome at the city hall. The date of the reception will be announced later.

The material points of Dr. Cook's answers did not differ in a great degree from his original recital. Some slight details were cleared up, however, which throw light on the way in which the polar dash was affected. As the questions asked were put by laymen, they did not go deeply into the scientific aspect of the expedition. But Dr. Cook was ready to answer anything pertinent to the issue.

Brings Out Diary.

The most interesting phase of the interview was reached when Dr. Cook was asked if he would object to showing his diary. He immediately consented, and, after retiring to his room, returned with a small octave note book, which he showed freely to all. It was a thin book, containing 176 pages, each of which was filled with 50 or 60 lines of pencilled writing in the most minute characters. The book, he said, contained considerably more than 100,000 words, while he has besides other books embracing his observations and other data. He did not show them, however.

As question after question was asked, whether it was of a trivial nature or a more serious trend, Dr. Cook answered in a low voice, without hesitancy, as though in full possession of all his facts.

The interviewers were rather severe in regard to details, but nothing indicated that the polar traveler's memory was at fault even in the most minute particulars. Not once did he refuse to reply except when the name of Commander Peary was broached. Even then he said that he has always and did now consider Peary as his friend; but controversial subjects with his rival he avoided entirely, saying that they could wait.

Wanted to Tell World.

When requested to say what had occurred at his meeting with Harry Whitney, the New Haven sportsman, he said he preferred to let Whitney tell his own story, as Whitney was quite unbiased. His reasons in imposing secrecy on Whitney, on Pritchard, Commander Peary's cabin boy, and the Eskimos were prompted by his desire to be the first to tell the world his discovery. He had done the work, he said, and was entitled to relate how it had been carried out. Some of the more important questions put to Dr. Cook during the interview and his replies thereto follow:

Q.—Did anything ever occur in the life of yourself and Mr. Peary that would create an enmity or bitterness between you?

A.—No, nothing whatever that I know of.

Q.—Do you look upon Commander Peary as a friend or as an enemy?

A.—I must say I do not know. I have treated Mr. Peary as a friend, and until I know more about the situation I shall continue to do the same.

Q.—Would you be willing to meet Peary in debate when he gets here?

A.—As far as I am concerned the Peary incident is closed. Mr. Peary is not the dictator of my affairs, and I do not care to say anything further about him.

Q.—Did you know Mr. Whitney when you had met him on your return to Etah?

A.—No; he introduced himself, but I did not catch his name and did not know it until the following day.

Q.—Did you know that Peary was going to start up at that time?

A.—No, I did not know.

Q.—What caused you to have such confidence in Mr. Whitney that you entrusted your instruments to him?

Had Confidence in Whitney.

A.—I knew him by name, and circumstances that arose while I was with him justified my confidence. I gave him the instruments to bring back because I though they would be less liable to injury on board his vessel than if I took them across glaciers and rough ice-covered country.

Q.—Knowing that a ship was coming north this summer for Whitney why did you not wait for that ship and come direct to New York instead of going to south Greenland and sailing from there to Copenhagen?

A.—I knew that the Danish government ship would get me home before Whitney's ship.

Q.—What instruments did you have with you from Cape Thomas Hubbard and back?

A.—Sextant, artificial horizon, three compasses, thermometers, barometers, three chronometer watches and a pedometer.

Q.—What compass course did you take from Cape Thomas Hubbard north?

A.—Well, that changes every day. If you follow the course of a map you have got the compass course.

Sun Shone All Time.

Q.—Was your determination of the pole solely by an observation of the sun's altitude, or did you make observations of the pole star twelve hours apart, and by the determination of celestial midway between the positions prove the accuracy of your position on the terrestial pole?

A.—How are you going to take an observation by the Polar star when you have a continuous sun? There is no night; you cannot have any stars; there is no darkness.

Q.—What kind of observations did you make at the pole, and how many? And what was the altitude of the sun?

A.—We have told that the altitude of the sun gave us our positions; that is all there is to say about that. We made regular astronomical observations, such as would be made by the compass and other instruments. We merely made the nautical observations that a captain would have made aboard a ship.

DR. COOK AND MRS. COOK.

Q.—Will you describe in detail any single observation taken by you at the North Pole, with the exact figures of the results and the corrections applied?

A.—Not at this present time. We will describe every one of them in detail when they go to the university of Copenhagen. They will go there within two months. The entire records will be delivered to the university, and after that they will go to everybody that wants to examine them.

Deluged With Telegrams.

A deluge of telegrams and cable messages continue to pour in upon him. All these are turned over to his secretary. The visitors, too, came to the hotel by the score. They came on all sorts of errands, with all sorts of urgent messages, calculated to get an interview. There has been a regiment of publishers' agents. They all got only as far as Dr. Cook's secretary.

It has been announced that Thursday, Sept. 30, has been selected as the date of the banquet of the Danish Societies of Greater New York in Dr. Cook's honor. The banquet of the Arctic Club of America will be held at the Waldorf tonight.

Always Picking.

An amusing story is told of the answer given by a London waif to a Salvation Army captain. The zealous officer had asked the boy what work he did to provide him with food, etc., and the reply was, "I pick strawberries in the summer, I pick hops in the autumn, I pick pockets in the winter, and cakum for the rest of the year."

MEN HAVE NARROW ESCAPE

Steamer Monteagle Meets Her Doom In Mud Lake, Whither She Went After Losing Her Course—Captain and Crew Were Hours In Boats Before Being Picked Up.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Sept. 23.—The steamer Monteagle, which got off its course when entering the upper end of Mud lake late Sunday afternoon in sixteen feet of water and sunk near the Pilot island ranges after puncturing her port side on a submerged crib, has caught fire and burned to the water's edge. The fire broke out in the after cabins.

Awakening from his sleep, Captain S. M. Murphy discovered the fire, and, hastily gathering a few of his possessions together, summoned the crew of fourteen men, and all made their escape from the burning vessel in small boats, the blaze having assumed such alarming proportions that the idea of remaining and attempting to extinguish the flames was deemed imprudent. Owing to the fact that the entire crew was sleeping, all that was saved was a small amount of clothing.

They were picked up many hours later by the tug Russell Stevenson and brought to this city. A small boat containing all that was saved from the wreck, which was being towed in the wake of the rescue tug, was capsized and sank before the eyes of the sailors.

After the lighter Reliance completed removing the cargo of 4,700 bushels of wheat, the Monteagle raised sufficiently so that she could proceed to Detroit, where repairs will be made.

Captain Murphy nor the crew can give any information as to what caused the blaze, the engineer being below placing the machinery in condition. It is thought, however, that the blaze started in the kitchen, but this is not definitely known.

MEDAL AND WARRANT

These Two Things Await Finding of Arthur Walsh.

Lansing, Mich., Sept. 23.—Insurance Commissioner Barry, who is one of the important members of the International Association of Accident Underwriters, furnishes the interesting report that representatives of the association are looking for a young metal worker, Arthur Walsh, to hand him a $100 gold medal for an act of heroism, and at the same time the New York police department report that they are looking for said Walsh to answer a charge lodged by a young woman. Edson S. Lott, president of the United States Casualty Company of New York, tells Commissioner Barry that he has the medal in his office safe and that he cannot find Walsh. Also, the New York police tell, so Mr. Lott reports, that they can't find the young fellow.

BOYNTON OPERATED ON.

Maccabee Leader Undergoes Removal of Cancer.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 23.—Major N. S. Boynton, leader of the Maccabees, has been operated on for cancer at St. Mary's hospital, Dr. H. O. Walker performing the operation.

The afflicted part was near the upper lip, and this was cut away. Major Boynton has been bothered with it for the past nine years.

He came through the operation successfully, and the doctors are in high hopes for his complete recovery.

NEWSBOY KILLED.

Trapped by Doors of Street Elevator in Detroit.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 23.—Anthony Sarckess, a lad about fourteen years of age, known to the downtown newsboys as "Tony," became curious as to the workings of one of the street elevators of the Fort building and, as a result of his curiosity, suffered injuries from which he died a few minutes after.

The apparatus opens and closes horizontal sidewalk doors. Beneath these the boy put his head in looking down the shaft, when the doors were closed.

LOSS OF LIFE WAS ENORMOUS

Hurricane Probably Claimed Over 100 Lives.

PROPERTY LOSS IS HEAVY

Will Run Into Millions of Dollars. Dwelling Houses, Cotton Gins and Mills Destroyed—Railroads and Telegraph Lines Badly Affected—Thrilling Tales of Escapes and Rescues.

New Orleans, Sept. 23.—Gradually New Orleans and the territory surrounding the Crescent City is recovering from the first effects of the tropical hurricane which, starting Sunday, continued throughout Monday and Monday night. Forty-six human lives are now positively known to have been claimed as victims of the storm, and fifty-five others are reported to have been lost in lower Terrebonne parish, but as yet this report has not been authenticated. The property loss will run into the millions. Miles of territory have been laid waste, and crops have practically been ruined. Dwelling houses, cotton gins and sugar mills have been levelled.

New Orleans is still sadly crippled in the way of railroad facilities and telegraph and telephone communication with the outside world.

For two days the city's only outside communication has been over an improvised long distance telephone circuit of the Associated Press. Both the Illinois Central and the Louisville & Nashville railroads have suffered heavy loss, miles of their tracks having been washed away.

Thrilling tales of narrow escapes and daring rescues came from the storm swept area.

THOUSANDS VIEW GOVERNOR'S BODY

Taken to St. Peter This Morning For Burial.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 23.—More than 50,000 people, it is estimated, viewed the body of Governor Johnson as it lay in state in the rotunda of the state capitol nearly all of Wednesday and part of the evening. There is no exaggeration in the statement that never has the city of St. Paul, or indeed the state of Minnesota, been so profoundly affected by the death of one man as by the death of Governor Johnson.

The building was closed between 6 and 7 p. m. to everyone but Mrs. Johnson and a few friends. Mrs. Johnson remained in the building a full hour taking her last farewell. After she had departed the doors were again flung open to the public.

The body was taken to St. Peter this morning in a special train over the St. Paul road. Interment will take place in the family burial plot in St. Peter.

Begin Plans For Pure Water.

Bay City, Mich., Sept. 23.—Mayor Evans has appointed a committee to investigate a proposed plan to furnish this city with pure water. Ever since the consolidation of the Bay Cities in 1905 there has been more or less talk of increasing the capacity of the waterworks system, consolidating the plants and extending the intake pipe far enough out into Saginaw bay to insure a much better quality of water.

Saginaw Splits With Benton Harbor.

Saginaw, Mich., Sept. 23.—The first break in interscholastic athletics this season came Wednesday, when the Saginaw high school severed relations with the Benton Harbor eleven. Eligibility rules and inability to decide on a date was the cause. The Saginaw players claim that for the past three years Benton Harbor has been playing ineligible men on the eleven.

TESTIFIES AFTER FOUR YEARS.

Carlisle Center, N. Y., G. B. Burhans, writes: "About four years ago I wrote you that I had been entirely cured of kidney trouble by taking two bottles of Foley's Kidney Remedy, and after four years I am again pleased to state that I have never had any return of those symptoms, and I am evidently cured to stay cured." Foley's Kidney Remedy will do the same for you.

Some people never run into debt; they jump into it.

Many people delude themselves by saying "It will wear away," when they notice symptoms of kidney and bladder trouble. This is a mistake. Take Foley's Kidney Remedy, and stop the drain on the vitality. It cures backache, rheumatism, kidney and bladder trouble, and makes every trace of pain, weakness, and urinary trouble disappear.

As the mind is bent so is the tongue inclined.

WARNING

Do not be persuaded into taking anything but Foley's Honey and Tar for chronic coughs, bronchitis, hay fever, asthma, and lung trouble, as it stops the cough and heals the lungs. Dr. Abernethy, the great English physician, said, "Watch your kidneys. When they are affected, life is in danger." Foley's Kidney Remedy makes healthy kidneys, corrects urinary irregularities, and tones up the whole system.

Whiskey straight makes a man crooked.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

Edgar N. Bayliss, a merchant of Robinsonville, Del., wrote: "About two years ago I was thin and sick, and coughed all the time and if I did not have consumption, it was near to it. I commenced using Foley's Honey and Tar, and it stopped my cough, and I am now entirely well, and have gained twenty-eight pounds, all due to the good results from taking Foley's Honey and Tar."

The Lure of the Mask

By HAROLD MAC GRATH

What humans are chiefly hunting for nowadays is inspiration in one form or another. This story cannot fail to give its reader inspiration, and therefore its value can hardly be overestimated. The magic of the love of man for woman, that, aroused simply by the sound of a voice, causes a young millionaire to cross oceans and traverse foreign lands to find his fate was never better pictured. The story is intensely romantic and alluringly mysterious. The insidious evils of unwise marriage with foreign "noblemen" are cleverly shown, and the familiar Italian brand of intrigue is laid bare. The author shows that the reward of patience and purity is happiness and that the wages of sin is death. He makes you laugh when he pictures the adventures of an American comic opera troupe stranded in foreign lands. He makes you thrill with the wanderlust when he describes La Bella Napoli and the vine covered slopes that rim the Mediterranean.

CHAPTER I.

THE VOICE IN THE FOG.

Out of the unromantic night out of the somber blurring January fog, came a voice lifted in song, a soprano, rich, full and round, young, yet matured, sweet and mysterious as a night bird's, haunting and elusive as the murmur of the sea in a shell—a lilt from "La Fille de Mme. Angot," a light opera long since forgotten in New York. Hillard, genuinely astonished, lowered his pipe and listened.

The voice rose and sank and soared again, drawing nearer and nearer. It was joyous and unrestrained, and there was youth in it, the touch of spring and the breath of figwers. The music was Lecocq's—that is to say, French—but the tongue was of a country which Hillard knew to be the garden of the world. Presently he observed a shadow emerge from the yellow mist, to come within the circle of light, which, faint as it was, limned in against the nothingness beyond the form of a woman. She walked directly under his window.

As the invisible comes suddenly out of the future to assume distinct proportions which either make or mar us, so did this unknown cantatrice come out of the fog that night and enter into Hillard's life, to readjust its ambitions, to divert its aimless course, to give impetus to it and a directness which hitherto it had not known.

"Ah!"

He leaned over the sill at a perilous angle, the bright coal of his pipe spiling comet-wise to the areaway below. He was only subconscious of having spoken, but this syllable was sufficient to spoil the enchantment. The voice ceased abruptly, with an odd break. The singer looked up. Possibly her astonishment surpassed even that of her audience. For a few minutes she had forgotten that she was in New York; she had forgotten the pain in her heart; there had been only an irresistible longing to sing.

Though she raised her face, he could distinguish no feature, for the light was behind. However, he was a man who made up his mind quickly. Brunette or blond, beautiful or otherwise, it needed but a moment to find out. Even as this decision was made he was in the upper hall, taking the stairs two at a bound. He ran out into the night bareheaded. Up the street he saw a flying shadow. Plainly she had anticipated his impulse. She was gone. He cupped his ear with his hand in vain. There was nothing but fog and silence.

"Well, if this doesn't beat the Dutch!" he murmured.

He laughed disappointedly. It did not matter that he was three and thirty. He still retained youth enough to feel chagrined at such a trivial defeat. Here had been something like a genuine adventure, and it had slipped like water through his clumsy fingers.

"Deuce take the fog! But for that I'd have caught her."

But reason promptly asked him what he should have done had he caught the singer. Yes, supposing he had, what excuse would he have had to offer? Who could she be? What peculiar whimsical freak had sent her singing past his window at 1 o'clock of the morning? A grand opera singer returning home from a late supper? But he dismissed this opinion even as he advanced it. He knew something about grand opera singers. They attend late suppers, it is true, but they ride home in luxurious carriages and never risk their golden voices in this careless if romantic fashion. As for being a comic opera star, he refused to admit the possibility, and he relegated this well satisfied constellation to the darks of limbo. He had heard a voice.

A policeman came lumbering over to add or subtract his quota of interest in the affair. Hillard wisely stopped and waited for him.

"I heard a woman singin'," the guardian of the law said roughly.

"So did I."

"Huh! See her?"

"For a moment," Hillard admitted.

"Well, we can't have none o' this in the streets. It's disorderly."

"My friend," said Hillard, rather annoyed at the policeman's tone, "you don't think for an instant that I was directing this operetta?"

"Think? Where's your hat?"

Hillard ran his hand over his head. The policeman had him here. "I did not bring it out."

"Too warm and summery, huh? It don't look good. I've been watchin' these parts fer a leddy. They call her Leddy Lightfinger, an' she has some o' the gents done fo a pulp when it comes to liftin' jools an' trinkets. Somebody fergits to lock the front door, an' she finds it out. Why did you come out without yer lid?"

"Just forgot it, that's all."

"Which way'd she go?"

"You'll need a map and a searchlight. I started to run after her myself. I heard a voice from my window; I saw a woman; I made for the street; nients!"

"Huh?"

"Nients, nothing!"

"Oh, I see—dago. Seems to me now that this woman was singin' I-taly-an too." They were nearing the light, and the policeman gazed intently at the hatless young man. "Why, it's Mr. Hillard! I'm surprised. Well, well! Some day I'll run in a bunch o' these chorus leddies, jes' fer a lesson. They git lively at the restaurants over on Broadway, an' thin they raise the dead with their singin', which often as not is anything but singin'. An' here it is after 1."

"But this was not a chorus lady," replied Hillard, thoughtfully reaching into his vest for a cigar. "The lady had a singing voice."

Out of the somber fog came a voice lifted in song.

"Huh! They all think alike about that. But mebbe she wasn't bad at the business. Annybow"—

"It was rather out of time and place, eh?" helpfully.

"That's about the size of it. This Leddy Lightfinger is a case. She has us all thinkin' on our nights off. Clever an' edjicated an' jabbers in half a dozen tongues. It's a thousan' to the man who jugs her. But she don't sing; at least they, ain't any report to that effect. Perhaps your leddy was jes' larkin' a bit. But it's got to be stopped."

Hillard passed over the cigar, and the policeman bit off the end, nodding with approval at such foresight. "Didn't get a peep at her face?"

"Not a single feature. The light was behind her."

"An' how was she dressed?"

"In fog, for all I could see."

"On the level now, didn't you know who she was?" The policeman gave Hillard a sly dig in the ribs with his club.

"On my word!"

"Some swell, mebbe."

"Undoubtedly a lady. That's why it looks odd—why it brought me into the street. She sang in classic Italian. And, what's more, for the privilege of hearing that voice again I should not mind sitting on this cold curb till the milkman comes around in the morning."

"That wouldn't be fer long," laughed the policeman, taking out his watch and holding it close to the end of his cigar. "Twenty minutes after 1. Well, I must be gittin' back to me beat. Been to Italy?"

"I was born there," patiently.

"No! Why, you're no dago?"

"Not so much as an eyelash. The stork happened to drop the basket there, that's all."

"Ha, I see! Well, Amerikv is good enough fer me an' mine," complacently.

"I dare say!"

"An' if this story continues to behave we'll say no more about the vanishin' leddy." The policeman strolled off, his suspicions in reverse removed. He knew many rich young bachelors like Hillard. If it wasn't a chorus lady it was a prima donna, which was not far from being the same thing.

Hillard regained his room and leaned with his back to the radiator. He had an idea. It was rather green and salad, but as soon as his hands were warm he determined to put this idea into immediate use. The voice had stirred him deeply, stirred him with the longing to hear it again, to learn what extraordinary impulse had loosed the song.

Never the winter came with its weary round of rain and fog and snow that his heart and mind did not fly over the tideless southern sea to the land of his birth if not of his blood—Sorrento, that jewel of the sun bathed cliffs!

With a quick gesture of both hands—Latin, always Latin—he crossed the room to a small writing desk, turned on the light and [illegible]

several attempts he realized that the letter he had in mind was not the simplest to compose. There were a dozen futile efforts before he produced anything like satisfaction. Then he filled out a small check. A little later he stole downstairs, around the corner to the local branch of the postoffice and returned. It was only a blind throw, such as dicers sometimes make in the dark. But chance loves her true gamester, and to him she makes a faithful servant.

He picked up a novel. "I should be sorely tempted to call any other man a silly ass. Leddy Lightfinger—it would be a fine joke if my singer turned out to be that irregular person."

He fell to reading, but soon yawned. He shied the book into a corner, drew off his boots and cast them into the hall. A moment after his valet appeared, gathered up the boots and waited.

"I want nothing, Giovanni. I have only been around to the postoffice."

"I heard the door open and close four times, signor."

"It was 1. If this fog does not change I shall want my riding breeches to morrow morning."

"It always rains here," Giovanni remarked.

"Not always. There are pleasant days in the spring and summer. It is because this is not Italy. The Hollander wonders how any reasonable being can dwell in a country where they do not drink gin. It's home, Giovanni. Rain pelts you from a different angle here. There is nothing more. You may go. It is 2 o'clock, and you are dead for sleep."

But Giovanni only bowed. He did not stir.

"It is seven years now, signor."

"So it is—seven this coming April."

"I am now an American citizen and may return to my good Italia without danger."

"That depends. If you do not run across any official who recognizes you."

Giovanni spread his hands. "Official memory seldom lasts so long as seven years. The signor has crossed four times in this period."

"I would gladly have taken you each time, as you know."

"Oh, yes! But in two or three years the police do not forget. In seven it is different."

"Ah!" Hillard was beginning to understand the trend of this conversation. "So, then, you wish to return?"

"Yes, signor. I have saved a little money," modestly.

"A little?" Hillard laughed. "For seven years you have received fifty American dollars every month, and out of it you do not spend as many copper centesimi. I am certain that you have 20,000 lire tucked away in your stocking—a fortune!"

"I buy the blacking for the signor's boots," gravely.

Hillard saw the twinkle in the black eyes. "I have never," he said truthfully, "asked you to black my boots."

"Penance, signor, penance for my sins, and I am not without gratitude. There was a time when I had rather cut off a hand than black a boot. But all that is changed. We of the Sabine hills are proud, as the signor knows. We are Romans opt there. We despise the cities, and we do not hold out our palms for the traveler's pennies. I am a peasant, but always remember the blood of the Caesars. Who can say? Besides, I have held a sword for the church. I owe no allegiance to the puny house of Savoy!" There was no twinkle in the black eyes now. There was a ferocious gleam. "Pardon, signor. I grow boastful. I am old and should know better. But does the signor return to Italy in the spring?"

"I don't know, Giovanni; I don't know. But what's on your mind?"

"Nothing new, signor," with eyes cast down to hide the returning lights.

"You are a bloodthirsty ruffian!" said Hillard shortly.

"I am as the good God made me. Besides, the holy father will do something for one who fought for the cause."

"He will certainly not countenance bloodshed, Giovanni."

"He can absolve it."

"I was in hopes you had forgotten."

Patriotism

The stomach is a larger factor in "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" than most people are aware. Patriotism can withstand hunger but not dyspepsia. The confirmed dyspeptic "is fit for treason, stratagems and spoils." The man who goes to the front for his country with a weak stomach will be a weak soldier and a fault finder.

A sound stomach makes for good citizenship as well as for health and happiness.

Diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition are promptly and permanently cured by the use of YOUNG DUCKS.

They Have No Instinctive Impulse to Enter the Water.

It has turned out, under the searching experimentation of recent years, that much that we have supposed to be instinct in animals is not instinct at all. For example, the young duck proves to have no instinctive impulse to enter the water, does not recognize the element by sight and is, in short, in precisely the same situation as a chick until, by happy chance, it gets its legs wet. Wet legs, however, and the lift of the water on the body at once start up the swimming reaction, and away sails the duckling, as chickens and children do not.

The chick, on its part, has a definite instinct to peck at any small object that catches its eye. That takes care of its feeding. But the chick has no corresponding instinct to drink and would die of thirst before it would recognize water by sight alone. Drinking it has to learn for itself by pecking at dewdrops or spots of light on the surface of the water or particles at the bottom of its cup. Even the hen, contrary to general belief, proves to have no instinctive fear of the water for her offspring. A hen that has raised a few broods of ducks and seen them take to the water becomes highly distressed when a subsequent hatch of chickens do not swim. In fact, hens have been reported under these circumstances to lead their chicks to the waterside and push them in.—McClure's Magazine.

Walking.

The ordinary man who is employed indoors throughout the day does not walk enough. He needs the fresh air and sunshine of the outdoors, and, no matter how tired he may be, a short time in the open air will rest him. If he has no opportunity to walk during the evening, he ought to do it in the morning. There is no better tonic than a two mile walk before going to work. Some business men who live some distance from their offices or stores walk down regularly every morning and are greatly benefited thereby. No matter how sluggish they may feel on arising, the morning walk puts them in good trim for the day's work. Exercise in the open air starts the blood to circulating in every artery and vein in the entire system, opens up the pores of the skin, so that the waste matter in the body may be set free, limbers up the joints and muscles and puts one in shape for the duties of the day.—St. Joseph Gazette.

The Meredith Cocoanut.

George Meredith may not have been an altogether familiar author to the ordinary reader who craves for quick sensation. He never came down to the simplicity of Sherlock Holmes or Captain Kettle. Meredith required an acute and trained intellect before he could be appreciated.

It was once mentioned, in referring to the difficulty which some people experience in reading Meredith's novels, that the Meredith "cocoanut" was very hard, but that the milk when reached proved to be very sweet. This joke got into the papers.

Two days afterward a well known firm of fruiterers had an inquiry after these cocoanuts from a country customer! The letter was to the effect that, having read somewhere that Meredith's cocoanuts have had a large sale lately and that the milk was fashionable, the writer would like to have a few to try.—London Tatler.

Queer Postal Training.

In China whoever wishes to enter the postal service must give evidence of courage, robustness, power of endurance, ability to traverse great distances over mountains and valleys and through dangerous forests frequented by wild beasts and robbers. After this the applicant is sent into uncanny places, which are considered to be the abodes of evil spirits. When the Chinaman has satisfied the authorities in regard to these matters he is appointed a letter carrier.

A Matter of Mind.

"I have a great mind to go to the club tonight," said Mr. J. to his wife.

"What?" she replied with surprise.

"I have a great mind to go to the club tonight."

"Whose?" she asked.

"Whose what?"

"Whose great mind?"

"Why, my own, of course, madam."

"Oh!" and the rising inflection she gave the ejaculation was very provoking to a man of fine feeling.

Taxless Towns.

No fewer than 1,500 towns and villages in Germany still own, and have owned, down from the middle ages, so much common land that their inhabitants pay neither rates nor taxes. Five hundred of these townships and villages derive so great a rental from their lands that they are able, in addition, to pay every citizen on New Year's day, a bonus of from $25 to $100 as his share of the surplus revenue.

Had No More Time.

"I can't wait any further for you. What are you reading, anyhow?"

"Henry James. Wait until I finish this chapter."

"I'll wait until you get to the next comma and no longer."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

They Adjourned.

"Since you have insisted on trying on my hat, Miss Mabel, I shall certainly claim the forfeit."

"I don't know what you mean, sir; and besides, this isn't a good place; they can see us from the hotel."—Life.

Quite Rare.

Gus—What did you think of our amateur theatricals, Miss Mamie? Rather a rare entertainment, was it not? Miss Mamie—Well—er—yes; it wasn't very well done, to be sure.—Harper's Bazar.

Burke as a Bore.

The most eloquent essay carefully prepared beforehand when delivered by one wanting the orator's gifts may as a speech be an utter failure. Burke is perhaps the most striking example of this. He simply drove everybody away. This is well and amusingly described by Lord Erskine to the American ambassador, Mr. Rush, who had asked him about Burke's delivery.

"It was execrable," said he. "I was in the house of commons when he made his great speech on American conciliation, the greatest he ever made. He drove everybody away. I wanted to go out with the rest, but was near him and afraid to get up. So I squeezed myself down and crawled under the benches like a dog until I got to the door without his seeing me, rejoicing in my escape. Next day I went to the Isle of Wight. When the speech followed me there, I read it over and over again. I could hardly think of anything else. I carried it with me and thumbed it until it got like wadding for my gun."—Westminster Gazette.

Her Preference.

"Which," asked the artistic youth, "has your greater admiration, poetry or music?"

"Music," answered Miss Cayenne. "It is impossible for the melody of any popular song to be as absurd as the words."—Washington Star.

Heredity.

"Scaddsworth's grandfather was a barber."

"Was he? Then Scaddsworth's habit of tucking his napkin under his chin as if he were going to be shaved must be a relic of barberism."—Chicago Record-Herald.

PEARY SHARES HONORS.

Bridal Parties Board His Train on Homeward Journey.

Truro, N. S., Sept. 23.—Commander Robert E. Peary has had no further statements to make regarding the polar controversy and while traveling westward to his home in Eagle bay from Sydney spends the time going over his correspondence. The explorer, with his family, reached Truro last night. Later the Peary party departed for Portland. The trip to Truro occupied the entire day, and at the station en route groups of people gathered to catch a glimpse of the explorer.

An enthusiastic crowd, which had gathered at New Glasgow to enliven the departure of two wedding couples, cheered Commander Peary and threw rice at his car windows. The explorer was given a round of applause when he appeared on the platform, thinking that the demonstration was in his honor alone, but he hastily retreated when he observed that he was in the midst of a wedding party. Another bridal crowd at Stellarton also gave the explorer a hearty round of cheers.

Roosevelt is Delayed.

Eight Were Drowned.

Jackson, Miss., Sept. 23.—Advices have reached the Illinois Central railroad office in this city that a relief train sent south on the main line had reached Pass Manchac and that the bodies of eight persons, including the station agent, his wife and children, had been recovered at that point. The other victims were drowned during the tidal wave which swept up Lake Manchac.

CHRISTENS COUNTRY ESTATE.

Taft Guest of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Walsh Near Denver.

Wolhurst, Colo., Sept. 23.—Leaving Denver early Wednesday morning under a brilliant sky, and motoring for fourteen miles, President Taft arrived here shortly before 10 o'clock and was the breakfast guest of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Walsh.

The president's visit was made the occasion of a rechristening of the beautiful Walsh estate, which heretofore has retained the name of Wolhurst, given by the former owner, the late Senator Wolcott. President Taft rechristened the estate "Cloumel."

Special trains from Denver brought several thousand people to Wolhurst, and the president held a public reception on the lawn.

The president left here at noon for Colorado Springs, where he spent an hour, and then proceeded to Pueblo.

AROUND STATUE OF LIBERTY

Curtiss Proposes to Make Flight In Aeroplane.

New York, Sept. 23.—A flight from Governor's Island across the lower bay and around the statue of liberty probably will be the first aviation event during the Hudson-Fulton celebration.

Glenn H. Curtiss, winner of the first international aviation contest, has announced that he would attempt to make this flight as soon as possible after he has assembled his machine.

Wilbur Wright, who has his machine almost in flying shape, met Curtiss Wednesday for the first time since the latter returned from his European trip. The meeting, which took place in Wright's shed on Governor's Island, was cordial.

PAINTS ENAMELS THE ACME QUALITY KIND STAINS VARNISHES

If it's a surface to be painted, enameled, stained, varnished or finished in any way, there's an Acme Quality Kind to fit the purpose.

5 Strong Reasons for Fall Painting

1. The wood is thoroughly dry.
Summer's sun has removed all moisture.

2. Paint penetrates deeper into dry wood.
The deeper it goes the better it holds.

3. Fall weather is warm, dry and dependable.
Little danger of cold, damp, rainy days, which endanger the durability of the paint.

4. Wet weather decays and destroys unprotected surfaces.
Lack of paint means unsightly and less valuable property.

5. Fall painting keeps out winter moisture.
The greatest enemy to the life and beauty of all structures.

Ask us about ACME QUALITY HOUSE PAINT (New Era). It insures the greatest protection and beauty at the least cost per year of service. Questions cheerfully answered.

A SALUTATION FROM REV. D. STANLEY SHAW.

Methodist preachers are appointed one year at a time. As a consequence possibility of a change arises annually. The Detroit conference has just closed its fifty fourth session and I am appointed to labor among you for another year. Our association during the past year was most happy and another year among so good a people is pleasant to anticipate. We are ready for business at the outset. You have wintered me and summered me and now understand me. My year's residence with you has enabled me to compass the situation and know something of your excellences and your foibles, your graces and your weaknesses. Also the opportunities and the difficulties the field presents. I am optimistic and hopeful look foward to a year of gracious prosperity.

My ambition is that the Methodist society of this village shall become such that when people speak of the Methodist church they shall not merely say "it is a place where Methodist folk worship" but rather "the Methodist church is a fellowship of men and women who are interested in the welfare of the community and really anxious for the personal salvation from sin of every man and woman in Tecumseh. "We want this church to stand as a refuge where every sorrowing, sinsick, or hungry soul can find the way to Christ and peace. We want not so much to bring men to Christ through church membership, as to bring men to church membership through Christ. I am at the service of the whole community. I want to help you all and I desire the co-operation of you all. Let any hungry heart who reads these words hesitate not to come or call me for personal interview and I shall be so happy to introduce you to Jesus Christ and through him into fellowship with the church of your choice.

I have greatly appreciate the fellowship of my brother pastors during the past year and hereby extend to them my fraternal greetings and invite closer fellowship for the year to come.

HOME CURE FOR ECZEMA

Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol, Glycerine, Etc., Used as a Simple Wash.

It really seems strange that so many people suffer year in and year out with eczema when it is now no longer a secret that oil of wintergreen mixed with thymol glycerine, etc makes a wash that is bound to cure.

Old obstinate cases it is true cannot be cured in a few days, but absolutely no sufferer from eczema who ever used this simple wash and did not find immediately that wonderful soothing calm, cool sensation that come when the itch is taken away. Instantly upon applying a few drops of the wash and did not find immediately that wonderful soothing, calm cool sensation that comes when the itch is taken away. Instanty upon applying a few drops of the wash the remedy takes affect, the itch is allayed. There is no need of experiment the patient knows at once.

Instead trying to compound the oil of wintergreen, thymol, glycerine, etc., in the right proportion ourselves we are using a prescription which is universally found the most effective. It is known as the D. D. D. Prescription, or oil of wintergreen Compound. It is made by D. D D. Co of Chicago and our long experience with this remedy has given us great confidence in its merits.

RECEPTION.

GIVEN AT THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH TUESDAY EVENING

For Teachers and New Pupils of the High School

Tuesday evening a reception was given by the young people of the Presbyterian church to the teachers and foreign pupils of the High school. About 125 were present and a very delightful evening was spent in getting acquainted and playing games. Among the various games played, during the evening, was one in which the guests were divided into groups of six each. Each group were requested to compose limericks, using the names of each person in the group, the reading of these verses affording much merriment. The following verses were considered excellent by the judges:

"We are a bunch of school teachers,
With smiling and classical features—
We make goo-goo eyes,
But to our surprise;
We get mixed-up with the preachers.

There's one whose name is Wimple,
Sweet and exceedingly simple—
And little Miss Palmer,
Let's not alarm her
Or she will lose all of her dimples.

Miss Caldwell, tall and stately,
Has changed her vocation lately,
And little Mrs. Slayton,
Has ceased her waitin',
And settled down very sedately.

Of course you have heard of Miss Springer,
It didn't take much to bring 'er—
But along came Miss Brown,
In her brand new gown—
Now isn't this poem a blinger?

At 9:30 the party was invited to the auditorium of the church, where stereoptican pictures, loaned by Mr. Fitzsimmons were shown. The scenes were both local and foreign, and were greatly enjoyed. After punch and wafers, had been served, the new topic cards of the society were handed out and explained by the pastor. The gathering broke up at 10 o'clock, voting the party a successful and delightful occasion.

MISERABLE DYSPEPTICS.

"MI-ON-A was used by me for a stomach difficulty of long standing, and a cure obtained before I had used the remedy two weeks. I had hard, dull pains and cramps in my stomach, and this organ became tender, sore and weak. The trouble made me nervous and miserable. MI-O-NA put me on my feet in good shape, and entirely dispelled the stomach trouble; for this reason, it has my recommendation and hearty endorsement." William Lanning, Adrian St., Tecumseh, Mich. Oct. 15, 1908.

If you have dispepsia or any distressing ailment of the stomach, Mi-o-na tablets will give you relief in a few hours.

In nearly every case Mi-o-na will effect a permanent cure in two weeks.

Not by digesting the food artificially, mind you, for that method never did and never will cure dispepsia, but by building up and putting strength and energy into the flabby, overworked walls of the stomach so that it can easily digest its own food.

Mi-on-a is a greatest of all stomach tonics. Take it two weeks and you will feel better, healthier, happier; your skin will be clearer; your eyes brighter.

C. A. Wright & Son sell Mi-o-na at 50 cents a large box, under a guarantee from the makers to cure dyspepsia, sea or car sickness, vomiting of pregnancy, and effects of the night before or money back.

THE CHILDREN LIKE IT KENNEDY'S LAXATIVE COUGH SYRUP

It is a pity when sick ones drug the stomach to stimulate the heart and kidneys. That is all wrong! A weak stomach means weak stomach nerves, always. And this is also true of the heart and kidneys. The weak nerves are instead crying out for help. This explains why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is promptly helping stomach, heart and kidney ailments. The Restorative reaches out for the actual cause of these ailments—the failing "inside nerves." Anyway test the Restorative tomorrow. It won't cure so soon as that, but you will surely know that help is coming. Sold by all druggists.

It calms the cough and heals the sensitive bronchial membranes. No opium, no chloroform, nothing harsh used to injure or suppress. Demand Dr. Shoop's. Accept no other. Sold by all druggists.

NEEDFUL KNOWLEDGE.

TECUMSEH PEOPLE SHOULD LEARN TO DETECT THE APPROACH OF KIDNEY DISEASE.

The symptoms of kidney trouble are so unmistakable that they leave no ground for doubt. Sick kidneys excrete a thick, cloudy, offensive urine, full of sediment, irregular of passage, or attended by a sensation of scalding. The back aches constantly, headaches and dizzy spells may occur and the victim is often weighed down by a feeling of languor and fatigue. Neglect these warnings and there is danger of dropsy, Bright's Disease, or diabetes. Any one of these symptoms is warning enough to begin treating the kidneys at once. Delay often proves fatal.

You can use no better remedy than Doan's Kidney Pills. Here's Tecumseh proof:

George D. Chapiln, Ottawa St. Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I used Doan's Kidney Pills, procured from C. A. Wright & Son's drug store and they lived up to the claims made for them. When I procured this remedy I was feeling miserable but after a short use my health was greatly improved. I have no hesitation in recommending Doan's Kidney Pills, as I know they are a reliable kidney remedy." For Sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. A Getting Better.

Before dinner, at the house of a rich banker in Minnesota, Cockrill (afterward the first of Dubois) had said some pretty things about the troubles of Anderson. Not without malice, the rudeness it fell to his lot to take about Hesperus (Hesperus was Anderson's nickname) in to table, the banker's pretty wife. Mme. Bonaparte (she had read Basil Hall's book on America in which he pronounced all Americans mulattoes).

"Yes, Colonel Dubois," she answered, "but it did not surprise me in the least. If my compatriots were descended from the Italians or Spanish, any display of low breeding might astonish me; but, being the direct descendants of the Britishers, it is natural enough that they should be vulgarians!"

Liver Trouble Remedy Free

Any intelligent person can be his own doctor in the ordinary case of liver trouble, for the symptoms cannot be mistaken. If the white of the eye becomes yellowish, if the skin becomes sallow, if pimples and blotches appear, if the bowels do not move, if you have sick headache, if you are bilious, you may be sure that your liver is torpid or inactive.

The quickest and surest remedy yet found for the cure of liver trouble or any of its symptoms is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, the great herb laxative compound. This wonderful remedy is not only a laxative, but a tonic as well. It will start the flow of gastric juice, thereby soon enabling the liver to do its work naturally. A bottle of this great liver remedy can be bought of any druggist for 50 cents or $1, and in many cases a single bottle has cured a chronic case.

For example, John W. Lee, 817 S. Pennsylvania ave., Indianapolis, Ind., had a stubborn and very long-standing case of liver trouble, with pimples, blotches, jaundice, etc., and it cured him. Mrs. S. Flinchum, Jackson, Ky., says the same of it. Thousands of families keep it in the house against just such an emergency, as you can never tell when some member of the family will need a good laxative.

In order to have you or any other sufferer from the liver make a test of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin without personal expense, Dr. Caldwell will send you a free test bottle if you will send your name and address. The sample will show you how pleasant it is to take, how quickly it works. It will start you on the cure of your trouble and convince you that you have found a cure. That is the effect of the sample, and the doctor urges you to send for it today.

If there is anything about your ailment that you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 501 Caldwell bldg., Monticello, Ill.

OLD GENTLEMAN BADLY BURNED

Insisted on Fighting Fire That Was Destroying Home.

Pontiac, Mich., Sept. 23.—While fighting fire in his home at Clintonville, William Walkers, eighty-eight years old, a pioneer millwright of this county, was perhaps fatally burned. His wife, aged eighty-two years, and his sister, Mrs. Phoebe Stockwell, ninety-two years old, who was staying with the old couple, barely escaped death. The three old people were the only persons in the house at the time.

An oil stove in the kitchen sprang a leak, and when a fire was started the drapings caught and the flames spread with great rapidity. Neighbors who arrived about the time the two old ladies made their escape found the old man bravely fighting the blaze. They tried to persuade him to leave the building, but he refused. In order to save his life, several men seized him and carried him out of the burning building, but not until he had been badly burned.

KILLS AN INDIAN.

Game Warden Deputy Has Trying Experience.

Bessemer, Mich., Sept. 23.—Cut off from the officers who accompanied him, and surrounded by a gang of Indians who were brandishing axes and firing at him, Deputy State Game Warden John Rowett of this city shot and killed one of the Indians he had gone to arrest for illegal hunting, and succeeded in himself escaping.

A large posse has been formed here and went to the camp at Blue Line, near the state boundary. The violators will be brought to jail. It is feared that there will be more blood shed before the Indians are captured.

ROBBERS AT WORK.

Attempt to Blow Two Safes at Pottersville.

Charlotte, Mich., Sept. 23.—Safe-crackers attempted to rob the Grand Trunk depot and general store of N. O. Merrill at Pottersville, seven miles north of here. The safes in both places were blown, but the force was not great enough to wreck them.

They contented themselves with taking some cheap jewelry and escaped.

NEW SUPERINTENDENT.

Mary C. Johnson Will Take Charge of Adrian Home For Girls.

Adrian, Mich., Sept. 23.—The board of guardians has named Mrs. Mary C. Johnson to succeed Mrs. Lucy M. Sickles, who resigned a week ago, as superintendent for the State Home For Girls.

Mrs. Johnson was formerly assistant superintendent. Mrs. Willard Stearns has been appointed assistant.

Child Swallowed Acid.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 23.—While toddling around a bedroom in his home, Johnnie Magar, one-year-old son of August Magar, 426 Grandy avenue, found a bottle of carbolic acid. The little fellow managed to pull the cork and swallowed a draught. A physician was hurriedly summoned, but he could do nothing, and the child died in agony a few hours after.

MICHIGAN BRIEFS.

Entering a downtown clothing store, at Lansing, George West, an inmate of the Industrial school who had just escaped, put on a new suit of clothes he picked out, slipped out the back door and escaped.

The funeral of the late Dr. E. E. Richardson, who died Saturday, was held in Dundee Tuesday, and was largely attended. Dr. Richardson was fifty years old and one of the most prominent residents of this county.

Taking an overdose of chloroform, which she has been using as medicine for some time, Mrs. Christopher Hartner, aged thirty-five years, of Saginaw nearly died before a physician arrived. She will recover.

The first public wedding ever celebrated in the Holland Methodist church, which has been built more than fifty years, was celebrated the other day, when Miss Rose Jenkins of that place became the wife of Rev. F. W. Field of Flint.

It has been learned that a serious wreck was averted on the Michigan Central just outside Marshall early Sunday morning. A westbound freight was flagged just in time to save it from running into a washout, caused by the water trought in the center of the tracks overflowing, carrying away three irods of the rails.

LEAVES WIFE AND CHILDREN TO STARVE

Saginaw Man Deserts Family of Seven.

Saginaw, Mich., Sept. 27.—When the police, summoned by neighbors, went to the home at 909 South Fayette street they found Mrs. Thomas Nash, aged sixty-eight, ill in bed and her six children, the two youngest of whom are twin babes, nearly starved. The woman told the officers that in her old age her husband deserted her, leaving them had nothing to eat for two days. An investigation showed that even this meager supply had been exhausted.

The family was supplied with groceries and food by the city poor commission, and the police are looking for John Nash, who is a painter and earns good wages when working. Mrs. Nash told the officers that her husband had been talking of deserting the family and that she would never see him again.

FINANCIAL GENIUS

Stole Wheels and Rented Them to Fellow Messenger Boys.

Flint, Mich., Sept. 27.—William Dilverty, aged seventeen, lately an inmate of an orphan asylum in New York city, but for several weeks a messenger for Flint, has been carrying on a business deal that is a wonder. Arrested late Saturday night on a charge of stealing a bicycle belonging to a doctor, which had been borrowed by a local business man, William cheerfully admitted that he had stolen this and three other wheels to rent to fellow messengers. With the commissions received from the regular work and this rent money Dilverty was living high.

The boy lived many years in the streets of New York, according to his confession. The life in the orphanage did not appeal to him, and he decided to strike out for himself. Accordingly he ran away several months ago and came to Flint.

End of World Did Not Come as Predicted.

West Dummerston, Mass., Sept. 27.—The time set for the end of the world, as revealed in visions to some of the more ardent of the Primo Immersionists, that sect who have been gathered at Ashfield for several days, has passed, and to the little chapel of the faithful a service of prayer and song is being held to ask the Goddess of God why the great revelation

Doubtless the faithful have given up for the present all hope of the "great glorification" and have gone to their homes. But others have arrived to take their places.

MICHIGAN BRIEFS.

Harrison J. Hollister, a pioneer banker of Grand Rapids, aged nearly eighty years, is dead.

Mrs. Martha M. Axford, who was born in Orion and lived in Oakland county all her life, is dead at her home in Rochester, after a long illness.

The Hudson-Fulton celebration in New York recalls the fact that in Riverside cemetery, in Hastings, lies buried Maskell Baird, an engineer and machinist who helped Robert Fulton build the first steamboat.

Sheriff Cline of Mason arrested William Burgess and Charles Jones of Grand Rapids, and they are in the county jail on suspicion of having thrown the safe in a Potterville general store into the river last week Thursday night.

Fire of unknown origin totally destroyed St. Rose's Catholic church at Hastings. The flames were not discovered until the whole interior of the building was ablaze. The Sacramental vessels were rescued by Father Lindsay.

After observing Yom Kippur, the Jewish day of atonement, at Sha'are Zedek synagogue, on Winder street, in Detroit, by fasting for more than twelve hours, Jacob Finkelstein, seventy-six years old, went home and committed suicide.

An axe in the hands of a playmate decapitated the left hand of George, the twelve-year-old son of Frank Polasek, near Owosso. The first two fingers were cut off and the skin so badly smashed that a physician amputated it near the knuckle.

William Mitchell, aged eighteen, was arrested at Flint on complaint of Albert Wilkins, also eighteen, who claims that the other had threatened him. When searched at the county jail a rusty pistol and a big Italian dirk were found on the person of the latter. Wilkins said the dirk was given him by Mitchell.

CURTISS AND WRIGHT READY

Will Attempt to Make Flights For Hudson-Fulton Visitors.

SAILORS FILL CITY STREETS

Steamers Laden With Sightseers Mingle With Battleships in Hudson River—New York's Churches Hold Special Hudson-Fulton Services—Hotels and Boarding Houses Filled.

New York, Sept. 27.—The sailor men of eight nations—England, Germany, France, Italy, Holland, Mexico, Argentine and the United States—shuffle along the streets of New York today, mingling with vistors from the north, south, east and west.

Riverside drive, which affords a magnificent view of the anchored armada, is daily filled up, and at times uncomfortably crowded.

The aeroplanes of Wilbur Wright and Glenn H. Curtiss, which will bring a touch of modernism into the historic picture of the Hudson-Fulton celebration, rest in their sheds on Governors Island, practically ready to soar forth to demonstrate the conquest of the air, as Hudson and Fulton overcame the perils of water navigation.

Both aviators may attempt flights today, but, as the two aeroplanes are of different type, there will be no contest between them. Their pilots will seek rather to demonstrate that they have perfect control of their machines. Curtiss in one of his first flights will attempt to cross the bay and circle the Statue of Liberty.

U. S. S. CONNECTICUT.
[Flagship of American fleet at Hudson-Fulton celebration.]

Wright said that in addition to essaying sharp turns of more or less of a scientific nature, he would, if the opportunity presented itself, try to glide with the motor stopped.

The Half Moon and the Clermont lay quietly at their anchorages, where they will remain until the naval parade of Friday, Oct. 1, when both little pioneers, escorted by the light draft warships and followed by the merchant fleet, again will sail upstream to Newburg, where they will be turned over to the Albany upstate divison of the celebration, and the festivities in New York city will end.

But circling about the fleet of battleships there was almost an unbroken line of deep sea excursion steamers, jammed to the rails with spectators and listing heavily. At the same time a scurrying flotilla of motor boats was bobbing about on the roughened waters of the river, carrying vistors to and from those battleships which were receiving for the day.

American officers speak of the splendid appearance presented by the British flagship Inflexible, whose illumination last night was conspicuously brilliant. Spic and span in her new paint, and dressed from stem to stern in white awnings, her graceful lines of speed and power combined are more remarked than those of any other ship on the river.

Many Visit Fulton's Grave.

Special Hudson-Fulton services were conducted in all the churches Sunday. A form of prayer prescribed for the occasion by Bishop Greer of the Episcopal church and Archbishop Farley of the Roman Catholic church was read in every parish of the dioceses. Many who could not get into old Trinity crowded the church yard to view the garlanded grave of Robert Fulton.

Twenty-five million dollars, competent people estimate as the sum in round figures that out of town visiors to the celebration will leave in New York. Hotel proprietors familiar with the general situation set 1,000,000 for the number of guests now housed under roofs in the city.

KEPT FROM PEARY'S SHIP

He Would Not Bring Back Cook's Records.

WORD FROM HARRY WHITNEY

Brooklyn Explorer's Valuables Are In Cache at Etah—Declines to Say Anything Derrogatory to Rival—Denies Report He Will Sue Peary For Slander.

New York, Sept. 27.—Commander Robert E. Peary refused absolutely to allow any of the records or instruments of Dr. Frederick A. Cook to be brought aboard the steamer Roosevelt, and he was thus instrumental in causing these records to remain in a chache at Etah, Greenland, according to Harry Whitney, the New Haven sportsman, in a dispatch just received in this city by Dr. Cook. The message, which came in a response to one sent by Dr. Cook, is as follows:

"Strathcona, via Indian Harbor and Cape Ray, N. F., Sept. 26:

"Dr. F. A. Cook, Waldorf, New York:

"Started for home on the Roosevelt. Nothing arrived for me. Peary would allow nothing belonging to you on board. Said to leave everything in cache at Etah.

"Met Captain Sam, North Star. Did not go back after going on the schooner, bound for St. Johns, take steamer home. Hope you are well. See you soon. Explain all. Good shooting.

"HARRY WHITNEY."

Dr. Cook Is Mum.

Dr. Cook was questionel as to his view of the situation created by the action ascribed to Commander Peary, but he declined to say anything derogatory of his rival.

"It may be that the instruments will arrive this year, after all, and as for the records and observations, their non-arrival here makes no difference whatever, as I have complete duplicates, so that there will be no delay in compiling my story with all its details."

Dr. Cook did not appear to be greatly perturbed by the news he had received from Mr. Whitney. He hopes to see him in a very short time and hear a complete explanation of the occurrences at Etah.

Dr. Cook denied the report that he was to bring suit for slander against Peary. "There is no truth in the report," he said. "I have no intention of bringing suit. Naturally I am taking measures to have everything in order in case of necessity; but I have never even thought of filing a suit, and I wish to contradict such reports at once."

If they are still at Etah, Dr. Cook's instruments may not arrive in New York until the spring months of 1910. There is a possibility, however, of their reaching here this year, as another vessel may have touched at Etah after the Roosevelt left.

WHY PEARY DIDN'T CARRY COOK'S RECORDS.

Portland, Me., Sept. 27.—The Peary Arctic ship Roosevelt arrived at Eagle Island, Commander Peary's summer home, at noon Sunday and, after landing some of his personal effects, left for New York. Commander Peary said that if the boat reached New York in time, it would take part in the Hudson-Fulton celebration and that he would be on the bridge.

It has been learned from a source close to Commander Peary that the commander justifies his act of refusing to allow Dr. Frederick A. Cook's instrumenis or records on board the homeward bound steamer Roosevelt on the theory that he had been aware for some time of Cook's intention to claim the discovery of the North Pole and that Peary, therefore, would do nothing to sanction this project. Peary's forthcoming statement concerning Cook, it was learned, will charge that the Brooklyn explorer cannot produce shoes, sledges or other equipment which will show, the wear and tear that comes from travel over the Arctic ice. This is the first intimation of any specific evidence that the commander will produce, although he has said from time to time that he has evidence enough to discredit Dr. Cook.

It seems evident that Peary is desirous of issuing his statement in the near future, especially since the arrival of Harry Whitney at Indian Harbor.

TAFT PREACHES IN MORMON TABERNACLE

Takes Text From Bible, Then Delivers Sermon.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Sept. 27.—In the pulpit of the famous Mormon tabernacle in this city, where, four years ago, Theodore Roosevelt, then president, preached a long sermon on right living and the duties of good citizenship, President Taft Sunday faced an audience which he said inspired him to try to follow in the footsteps of his predecessor and deliver a preachment.

Mr. Taft did preach a sermon, text and all. The immense audience in the flag-draped edifice, the splendid musical program of operatic and patriotic selections, the enthusiastic cheering as President Taft appeared and the quick response of the audience to points which he endeavored to impress upon his hearers, inspired him, the president declared, with higher thoughts of country and patriotism.

The president's sermon was an appeal for amity between the people for attributing the best rather than the worst motives to the actions of others when possible to do so, and not to harbor hatred or animosity.

"A soft answer turneth away wrath, but grievous words stir up anger," was the text Mr. Taft selected from the book of proverbs. The sermon was a homely utterance, largely made up of a relation of stories to give emphasis to the points.

From the tabernacle the president was driven to review about 20,000 school children. At one point along the line a thousand or more children had been arranged in a living flag, red, white and blue caps and capes serving to outline the national emblem.

Thence the president proceeded to the Young Mens' Christian association, where he made a brief address to men. Lastly the president attended services especially arranged for him at the Unitarian church. After this unusually busy Sunday morning, he left Salt Lake at noon for Ogden, where he enjoyed an eighteen mile ride through Ogden canon and made his third address of the day at Lester park.

When Senator Smoot introduced the president to the audience in the Salt Lake tabernacle the cheering was so great that Mr. Taft could not begin his address for several minutes.

Cursory.

"Eddie," said the teacher, "can you give a definition of cursory? The word is generally used in connection with public speaking. For example, we often read that somebody 'made a few cursory remarks.' Please write a sentence containing the word, cursory."

After a brief struggle Eddie evolved this masterpiece:

"Yesterday my pa helped my ma to hang pictures, and when the ladder fell after pa had climbed to the top of it he bumped his head against the corner of the dining room table and then made a few cursory remarks."—Chicago Record-Herald.

TESTIFIES AFTER FOUR YEARS.

Carlisle Center, N. Y., G. B. Burhans, writes: "About four years ago I wrote you that I had been entirely cured of kidney trouble by taking two bottles of Foley's Kidney Remedy, and after four years I am again pleased to state that I have never had any return of those symptoms, and I am evidently cured to stay cured." Foley's Kidney Remedy will do the same for you.

Some people never run into debt; they jump into it.

Many people delude themselves by saying "It will wear away," when they notice symptoms of kidney and bladder trouble. This is a mistake. Take Foley's Kidney Remedy, and stop the drain on the vitality. It cures backache, rheumatism, kidney and bladder trouble, and makes every trace of pain, weakness, and urinary trouble disappear.

As the mind is bent so is the tongue inclined.

Do not be persuaded into taking anything but Foley's Honey and Tar for chronic coughs, bronchitis, hay fever, asthma, and lung trouble, as it stops the cough and heals the lungs.

Dr. Abernethy, the great English physician, said, "Watch your kidneys. When they are affected, life is in danger." Foley's Kidney Remedy makes healthy kidneys, corrects urinary irregularities, and tones up the whole system.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

Edgar N. Bayliss, a merchant of Robinsonville, Del., wrote: "About two years ago I was thin and sick, and coughed all the time and if I did not have consumption, it was near to it. I commenced using Foley's Honey and Tar, and it stopped my cough, and I am now entirely well, and have gained twenty-eight pounds, all due to the good results from taking Foley's Honey and Tar."

The Lure of the Mask

By HAROLD MAC GRATH

"Forgotten! The signor will never understand. She was so pretty and youthful and innocent! She sang like the nightingale. Up with the dawn, to sleep with the stars. We way into the United States. After due time he applied for citizenship, and through Hillard's influence it was accorded him. He solemnly voted when elections came round and hoarded his wages, like the thrifty man he was. Some day he would return to Rome or Naples or Venice or Florence, as the case might be, and then!

When the boots shone flawlessly he carried them to Hillard's door and softly tiptoed back. He put his face against the cold window. He, too, had heard the voice. How his heart hurt him with its wild hope! But only for a moment. It was not the voice he hungered for. The words were Italian, but he knew that the woman who sang them was not.

"Seven years! It is a long time to wait."

were alone, she and I. The sheep supported me, and she sold her roses and dried lavender. It was all so beautiful—till he came. Ah, had he loved her! But a plaything, a pastime! The signor never had a daughter. What is she now? A nameless thing in the streets?" Giovanni raised his arms tragically. The boots clattered to the floor. "Seven years! It is a long time for one of my blood to wait."

"Enough!" cried Hillard, but there was a hardness in his throat at the sight of the old man's tears. Where was the proud and stately man, the black bearded shepherd in faded blue linen, in picturesque garters, with his reedlike pipe, that he, Hillard, had known in his boyhood days? "I can give you only my sympathy for your loss," said Hillard, "but I abhor the spirit of revenge which cannot find satisfaction in anything save murder."

Giovanni bowed gravely and made off with his boots. Hillard remained staring thoughtfully at the many colored squares in the rug under his feet. It would be lonesome with Giovanni gone. The old man had evidently made up his mind. But the woman with the voice, would she see the notice in the paper? And if she did would she reply to it? What a foundation for a romance! Bah! He prepared for bed.

To those who reckon earthly treasures as the only thing worth having John Hillard was a fortunate young man. That he was without kith or kin was considered by many as an additional piece of good fortune. Born in Sorrento, in one of the charming villas which sweep down to the very brow of the cliffs, educated in Rome up to his fifteenth year, taken at that age from the dreamy, drifting land and thrust into the noisy, bustling life which was his inheritance; fatherless and motherless at twenty, a college youth who was forever mixing his Italian with his English and being laughed at, hating tumult and loving quiet, warm hearted and impulsive, yet meeting only habitual reserve from his compatriots whichever way he turned, it is not to be wondered at that he preferred the land of his birth to that of his blood.

The old house in which he lived was not in the fashionable quarter of the town, but that did not matter. Nor did it vary externally from any of its unpretentious neighbors. A cook, a butler and a valet were his retinue.

Giovanni sought his own room at the end of the hall, squatted on a low stool and solemnly began the business of blacking his master's boots. He was still as lean and tall as a Lombardy poplar, this handsome old Roman. His hair was white; there was now no black beard on his face, which was as brown and creased as Spanish levant, and some of the fullness was gone from his chest and arms, but, for all that he carried his fifty odd years lightly. He worked swiftly, tonight, but his mind was far away from his task.

There was a pitiful story, commonplace enough—a daughter, a loose living officer, a knife flung from a dark alley, the sudden flight to the south. Hillard had found him wandering through the streets of Naples, hiding from the carabinieri as best he could. Hillard contrived to smuggle him on the private yacht of a friend. He found a peasant who was reconsidering the advisability of digging sewers and laying railroad ties in the Eldorado of the west. A few pieces of silver and the passport changed hands. With this Giovanni blandly tied his

CHAPTER II.

OBJECT, MATRIMONY.

WINTER fogs in New York are never quite so intolerable as their counterparts in London, and while their frequency is a matter of complaint, their duration is seldom of any length. So by the morrow a strong wind from the west had winnowed the skies and cleared the sun. There were an exhilarating tingle of frost in the air and a visible rime on the windows. Hillard, having breakfasted lightly, was standing with his back to the grate in the cozy breakfast room. He was in boots and breeches and otherwise warmly clad and freshly shaven. He rocked on his heels and toes and ran his palm over his blue white chin in search of a possible slip of the razor.

Giovanni came in to announce that he had telephoned and that the signor's brown mare would be at the park entrance precisely at half after 8. Giovanni still marveled over this wonderful voice which came out of nowhere, but he was no longer afraid of it. The curiosity which is innate and childlike in all Latins soon overcame his dark superstitions. He was an ardent Catholic and believed that a few miracles should be left in the hands of God. The telephone had now become a kind of plaything, and Hillard often found him in front of it patiently waiting for the bell to ring.

The facility with which Giovanni had mastered English amazed his teacher and master. But now he needed no more lessons. The two when alone together spoke Giovanni's tongue. Hillard because he loved it and Giovanni because the cook spoke it badly and the English butler not at all.

"You have made up your mind to go, then, amico?" said Hillard.

"Yes, signor."

"Well, I shall miss you. To whom shall I talk the tongue I love so well when Giovanni is gone?" with a lightness which he did not feel. Hillard had grown very fond of the old Roman in these seven years.

"Whenever the signor goes to Italia he shall find me. It needs but a word to bring me to him. The signor will pardon me, but he is like—like a son."

"Thanks, Giovanni. By the way, did you hear a woman singing in the street last night?"

"Yes. At first"— Giovanni hesitated.

"Ah, but that could not be, Giovanni; that could not be."

"No; it could not be. But she sang well," the old servant ventured.

"So thought I. I even ran out into the street to find out who she was, but she vanished like the lady in the conjurer's trick. But it seemed to me that, while she sang in Italian, she herself was not wholly of that race."

"Buonissima!" Giovanni struck a noiseless brava with his hands. "Have I not always said that the signor's ears are as sharp as my own? No; the voice was very beautiful, but it was not truly Roman. It was more like they talk in Venice. And yet the sound of the voice decided me. The hills have always been calling to me, and I must answer."

"And the unforgetting carabinieri?"

"Oh, I must take my chance," with the air of a fatalist.

"What shall you do?"

"I have my two hands, signor. Besides, the signor has said it—I am rich." Giovanni permitted a smile to stir his thin lips. "Yes, I must go back. Your people have been good to me and have legally made me one of them, but my heart is never here. It is always so cold, and every one moves so quickly. You cannot lie down in the sun. Your police, bah! They beat you on the feet. You remember when I fell asleep on the steps of the cathedral? They thought I was drunk and would have arrested me?"

"Everybody must keep moving here. It is the penalty of being rich."

"And I am lonesome for my kind. I have nothing in common with these herds of Sicilians and Neapolitans who pour into the streets from the wharfs." Giovanni spoke scornfully.

"Yet in wartime the Neapolitans sheltered your pope."

"Vanity! They wished to make an impression on the rest of the world. It is dull here besides. There is no joy in the shops. I am lost in these great palaces. The festa is lacking. Nobody bargains; nobody sees the proprietor. You find your way to the streets alone. The butcher says that his meat is so and so, and you pay. The grocer marks his tins such and such, and you do not question, and the baker says that, and you pay, pay, pay! What? I need a collar; it is quindici—fifteen you say! I offer quattordici. I would give interest to the sale. But, no! The collar goes back into the box. I pay quindici or I go without. It is the same everywhere—very dull, dead, lifeless."

Hillard was moved to laughter. He very well understood the old man's lament. In Italy if there is one thing more than another that pleases the native it is to make believe to himself that he has got the better of a bargain. A shrewd purchase enlivens the whole day. It is talked about, laughed over and becomes the history of the day.

Hillard presently left the house and hailed a Fifth avenue omnibus. He looked with negative interest at the advertisements, at the people in the streets, at his fellow travelers. One of these was hidden behind his morning paper. Personals! Hillard squirmed a little. The world never holds very much romance in the sober morning. What a stupid piece of folly! The idea of his sending that personal inquiry to the paper! Tomorrow he would see it sandwiched in between samples of shopgirl romance, questionable intrigues and divers search warrants. Ye gods! "Will the blond who smiled at gentleman in blue serge, elevated train, Tuesday, meet same in park? Object, matrimony." Hillard fidgeted. "Young man known as Adonis would adore stout elderly lady independently situated. Object, matrimony." Pish! "Girlie. Can't keep appointment tonight. Willie." Tush! "A French widow of eighteen, unincumbered," and so forth and so on. Rot, bally rot, and here he was on the way to join them! "Will the lady who sang from 'Mme. Angot' communicate with gentleman who leaned out of the window? J. H., Burgomaster Club." Positively asinine!

There was scarce one chance in a thousand of the mysterious singer's seeing the inquiry, not one in ten thousand of her answering it. And the folly of giving his club address! That would look very dignified in yonder agony column. He would cancel the thing.

He dropped from the omnibus at the park entrance, where he found his restive mare. He gave her a lump of sugar and climbed into the saddle. He directed the groom to return for the horse at 10 o'clock, then headed for the bridle path. It was heavy, but the air was so keen and bracing that neither the man nor the horse worried about the going. Only one party attracted him, a riding master and a trio of brokers who were verging on embonpoint and were desperate and looked it. Hillard went on. The park was not lovely; the trees were barren, the grass yellow and sodden.

"She is so innocent, so youthful!"

He found himself humming the refrain over and over. She had sung it with abandon, tenderness, lightness. For one glimpse of her face! He took the rise and dip that followed. Yards ahead a solitary woman cantered easily along. Hillard had not seen her before. He spurred forward, faintly curious. There was nothing familiar to his eye in her charming figure. She rode well. As he drew nearer he saw that she wore a heavy gray veil. And this veil did everything but the single flash of a pair of eyes the color of which defied him. Then he looked at her mount. Ha! There was only one rangy black with a white throat—from the Sandford stables, he was positive. But the Sandfords were at this moment in Cairo, so it signified nothing. There is always some one ready to exercise your horses. He looked again at the rider. The flash of the eyes was not repeated, so his interest vanished, and he urged the mare into a sharp run.

So he went back to his tentative romance. She had passed his window and disappeared into the fog, and there was a reasonable doubt of her ever returning from it. The singer in the fog—thus he would write it down in his book of memories and sensibly turn the page. At length he came back to the entrance and surrendered the mare. He was about to cross the square when he was hailed.

Hillard wheeled and saw Merrihew. He, too, was in riding breeches.

"Why, Dan, glad to see you. Were you in the park?"

"Riverside. Beastly cold too. Come join me in a cup of good coffee."

The two entered the cafe.

"How are you behaving yourself these days?" asked Merrihew.

"My habits are always exemplary," answered Hillard. "But yours?"

Merrihew gulped his coffee.

"Kitty Killigrew leaves in two weeks for Europe."

"And who the deuce is Kitty Killigrew?" demanded Hillard.

"What!" reproachfully. "You haven't heard of Kitty Killigrew in 'The Modern Maid?' Where have you been? Pippin! Prettiest soubrette that's hit the town in a dog's age."

"I say, Dan, don't you ever tire of that sort? I can't recall when there wasn't a Kitty Killigrew. What's the attraction?" Hillard waved aside the big black cigar. "What's the attraction?"

"The truth is, Jack, I'm a jackass."

IN STORM'S PATH.

People Who Formerly Lived in Coldwater Lost Their Property.

Coldwater, Mich., Sept. 23.—Word has been received here from Llano Grande, Tex., that Mr. and Mrs. Paul Holz and son, and Mr. and Mrs. Homer Wickes and three children, who left Coldwater eighteen months ago to settle in the southwest, narrowly escaped with their lives when the terrific storm which recently swept over the southwest washed away their home.

All of the victims' household goods were destroyed, but they were rescued and removed to a place of safety.

True valor lies in the middle, between cowardice and rashness.—Cervantes.

HOUSES IN FEZ.

The Roofs in the Early Evening Are Exclusively For Women.

In Fez, the capital of Morocco, most of the houses consist of several stories, each being provided with a light veranda running round it and connecting the rooms. All the windows and doors open out into the patio, or courtyard, the window openings in the upper stories being covered with close trellis-work. All the houses have flat roofs, with a wall some four to six feet high running around, and from 4 p. m. until sunset the roofs are given over to the ladies exclusively, who can then walk about and take the fresh air without being seen by any of the opposite sex. This reservation is a law which is never broken, and no man would be guilty of being seen on his or on any other roof during the forbidden hours. Owing to the fact that the women of the house are not allowed to be seen by any other man than their lord and master all domestic offices are situated away from the house proper. In many of the larger houses, besides the water fountains, others playing scent or scented water are to be found. Sections of the courtyard also are slightly sunk, and these portions are filled with scented oil, which is used to perfume the rooms. The Moors are exceptionally particular in discarding their foot gear before entering a room or crossing a rug or carpet. They even change slippers before entering the courtyard from the street. Thus the houses are kept beautifully clean and sweet and are not, as many people would suppose, musty or close.

WATER SPLASHERS.

A Swedish View of English Life and Manners.

A sharp tongued correspondent of a Swedish paper, the Svenska Dagbladet, thus comments on some of the peculiarities of English life and manners.

English cleanliness is much spoken of. The Englishman must have a great deal of water to wash with. A quantity must be splashed all over the room, and in particular there must be a great pool near the washstand. When an Englishman washes his face, in seventy-eight cases out of a hundred he simply takes the water in his hands and blows it all over the floor.

Englishmen are mad over fresh air. The expression may seem ironical to those who know how in London one does not so much breathe the air as swallow it. Tramway car windows stand open the whole year round, and there is no country like England for the prosperity of dealers in cough and cold medicines.

Hygiene may appear to be perfect in London, but they still say that much remains to be done. Spitting is not allowed in the parks, at least not near the seat. I have found that one of the cheapest and best places for spitting is the British museum, where it costs only $10. On the Great Eastern railway it does not cost more the first time, but afterward the price is $25 a time, in direct opposition to the usual business principles of discount.

Inhaling Water.

Undoubtedly the majority of bathers who are drowned meet their deaths from cramp. Cramp is liable to seize anybody at any moment, and when it comes in deep water few swimmers have sufficient presence of mind to turn on their backs and wait quietly until the attack has departed. So they go under. But there is another danger quite as imminent as cramp, though it is probably less known. This is water inhaling. A swimmer or even a wader is always liable to inhale spray through his nostrils, which, passing through the pharynx and behind the epiglottis or windpipe guard, gets into the windpipe and causes death. As one would expect, water inhaling is almost wholly confined to the sea and very rarely occurs in fresh water. All the same, it may happen anywhere.—Exchange.

Dolphin and Flying Fish.

A ship was lying at anchor at Boca Grande, says the Punta Gorda Herald, lately when the crew observed a dolphin chasing a flying fish, both coming directly toward the ship. On nearing the vessel the flier arose in the air and passed over the bow just abaft the foremast. As it did so the dolphin went under the ship and, coming up on the other side, sprang from the water and caught the flying fish on "the fly" just as it was curving gracefully down in its descent to the water.

Fooled His Doctor.

The late Rev. H. R. Haweis, who was equally notable as preacher, journalist, lecturer and musician, suffered from a dangerous hip disease when a boy of nine. The celebrated Sir Benjamin Brodie, who was asked if a change of scene would benefit the afflicted youth, answered, "Take him anywhere—it does not matter."

Haweis lived to laugh at his doctor, and half a century later, after a life of exceptional industry, he was in vigorous health.

Practical.

Walking leisurely around the Egyptian sphinx, the traveler from America inspected it from all points of view.

"It's a shame," he exclaimed, "to leave the thing in that shape. If I had it out in Chicago I could clap a good cement nose on that face so quick it would make its head swim!"—Chicago Tribune.

Grass Baskets.

To restore the fragrance of baskets made from sweet scented grass after they have apparently lost it, plunge them into boiling water, removing them almost instantly.

Greatness is the ability to meet the unexpected.—Stowell.

Avarice increases with the increasing pile of gold.—Juvenal.

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD

OBITUARY.

Emmitt E. Richardson was born at Lewiston, N. Y., Sept. 23, 1859, and departed this life at Dundee, Mich., on Sept. 18, 1909, aged 49 years, 11 mo. and 25 days.

He was the youngest of a family of ten children.

At an early age he began the study of medicine, spending ten years in college and hospital, and graduating in 1893.

He has since that time resided in Dundee, where he has had an extensive practice in medicine and surgery.

On Feb. 19, 1896, he was united in marriage to Miss Della D. Slayton, also of Dundee, Mich.

To this union was born one child, Alton D. Richardson, now nine years of age.

The doctor was of noble character, his principal effort being, to do unto others as he would that others should do unto him. Often sacrificing his own comfort for the comfort and welfare of his fellow beings.

He was an active member in the orders to which he belonged, viz: The Masonic, Elks and Knights of Pythias.

The same noble spirit that characterized his daily life, shone forth and won for a time a warm place in the hearts of all and those who knew him best, loved him most. The positions of public trust which he held were many and varied, giving universal satisfaction in them all.

While his ever increasing host of friends were a source of delight to him, he was ever ready with kind words and willing hands to lighten their burdens and help them along over life's rough pathway, and his cheery words and manner were like rays of sunshine to all those with whom he came in contact.

A little less than six months ago, his aged mother, who had lived in his home for the past five years and whom he loved so dearly, was called to the great unknown. Soon after this, his health began to fail, but through his great self sacrifice and his sympathy for suffering humanity, he continued to use every means that lay within his power to alleviate human suffering until he, himself was seized in the grasp of the dread monster, and suffered untold agony until death finally came to his relief and he was called to that brighter world where we feel assured, there's a "Mansion not made with hands" awaiting his coming, and where might join the aged mother and other loved ones gone before, and where perhaps he also may wait and beckon other loved ones to follow.

He leaves to mourn his loss a wife, who has been a great help to him in the care of his patients, and has always been his book-keeper, one son, Alton D., four brothers, David, and Jackson Richardson of Sanborn, N. Y., Henry C. of Columbus, Wash., G. W. Richardson of Dundee, Mich., one sister, Mrs. Lucy Howe of Brown City, Mich., also several other relatives and many, many friends who, if they will but follow in the footsteps of his noble life, perhaps may somewhere, sometime, meet with him on eternity's bright shore.

As the Dr. lay in state in his office, a feeble old lady walking with a cane came to see him. She said she had heard of his death, that she couldn't attend the funeral, but that she wanted to view his remains alone. She wept and while on her way home and near the park, she met a lady and told her she had lost one of her best friends and at the same time was sobbing like a child.

It was only one of the Dr's good traits to treat and be good and kind to the poor—the poorer the more kind he was to them and many has he helped in the same way. He did not use tobacco in any way, and never used liquors in any way except in medicine. Tea or coffee he never touched, was truly a temperate man in every way.

He trained his horses so that they would leave their oats, no matter how hungry they were, to come to him when he called them from their stalls.

There are 11 certificates or diplomas hanging in his office from the different colleges that he attended.

The funeral was in charge of the K. P. order, attended in a body and the Rev. Beaty of the M. E. church gave a fine discourse. He also officiated at the funeral of the Dr's mother in Apr. last, also the same ladies sang the same hymns on both occasions. The house and grounds were crowded with friends, patients and relatives at the time of the funeral. The flowers were rare and in abundance.

Last Saturday Dr. Richardson arose at 4 a. m., drove into the country and visited a patient, and on the road home he joked and even speeded his horses, of which he was very proud, made two town calls, gave a man a bath and at 11 a. m., while he was receiving calls in his office, he was taken sick and died at 12:45. The time was so short that it was a shock to the whole community.

FROM WASHINGTON.

The worst attack ever made against Speaker Cannon, is the one recently made by Congressman Fowler of New Jersey, an able representative and leading republican. Cannon's reply was a column of vile profanity, as might be expected. It is a disgrace to a christian nation to have such a man as Joseph G. Cannon preside over our House of Representatives.

We have been asked to give our serious opinion on the peach-basket hat. Well we must confess that we do not like 'em, but if there is a real "peach" beneath 'em, we will not kick about the hat.

We rise to maintain that the Payne law will make the American consumer the champion bill footer of the universe.

An Iowa paper announces that it favors prohibition but opposes its enforcement." That would surely seem to "catch" 'em a-gwine and a-comin'.

"Nobody ever hears of a Democrat clambake", says the Buffalo News. And nobody ever hears of a Republican barbecue.

So Mr. Taft has been "advised not to talk tariff while touring the west," has he? Fancy "advising" Mr. Roosevelt not to talk anything he felt inclined to talk.

"What is rest?" inquire the Charleston News and Courier. Old judge Beckley, of Georgia, once designated rest to be "motion at maximum velocity."

AMUSEMENTS.

B. C. Whitney's famous Broadway success, "The Show Girl" which will be seen at the Bradley opera house Monday, Oct. 4, is described as pursuant concord of exquisite colors, fascinating music, rythmic dancing, brilliant lighting, delightful fun and revelry of all sorts, enveloped and crowned with a wealth of young bewitching feminine loveliness. It is a production of the most spectacular sort. This attraction abounds with refined and clever specialties among which are Mylie & Orth, Rodney & Bartel, Stella Rinehart, Helen Stuart and Burt Eaton. Twenty new song hits have been especially written for the production, the more prominent amongst them are: "That's the way of a Sailor", "I don't want to be a lady", "I'm the manager", "Psyche", "Champagne and Terrapin", "Reggie's family tree" and "One that he loves best."

Rev. F. A. Patterson of Kalamazoo, Wedded Last June.

MARRIAGE HAS JUST BECOME KNOWN.

Mr. Patterson is the son of James Patterson Formerly of Tecumseh.

The marriage has just been announced of Rev. Frederick A. Patterson of this city, to Miss Ethelyn Bearce of Benton Harbor, Mich., on Monday, June 21, 1909, at the residence of the officiating clergyman, Rev. Mr. Black of Dundee, Ill. The wedding was very quietly celebrated, both of the young people desiring to avoid the formality of a large church wedding.

Rev. Mr. Black is a classmate and personal friend of the bridegroom.

Rev. Mr. Patterson has succeeded in keeping his marriage a secret from all but his family and this annoucement will be a surprise to his many friends in this city. During his work as layreader and deacon in the Episcopal church of Benton Harbor, Rev. Mr. Patterson met Miss Bearce, who was the superintendent of Mercy hospital in that city.

Mrs. Frederick Patterson is a charming young southern woman and one who is exceedingly capable, especially in her line of professional work. Mrs. Patterson has resigned her position at Mercy hospital to accept the principalship of a training school for nurses at Dansville, Va., where she will remain until Rev. Mr. Patterson finishes his course of study at Western Theological seminary in Chicago, where he has been a student for the past two years. He was ordered to the diaconate in St. Luke's church on Sunday, June 6, 1909, by the Right Rev. John N. McCormick and is the first candidate for Holy Orders to be ordered to the diaconate in St. Luke's chnrch.

Rev. Mr. Patterson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Patterson of Kalamazoo and at the time of his decision to enter the priesthood, he gave up a very promising business career, being highly valued by the Commonwealth Power company, in whose employ he had been for some time.—Kalamazoo Gazette.

Mr. Patterson is the youngest son of James Patterson and wife, formerly of Tecumseh. The groom has many friends and relatives in this village, who extend congratulations.

COUNTY FAIR

MANY TECUMSEH EXHIBITORS IN ADRIAN THIS YEAR.

The Lenawee County Fair at Adrian was largely attended this year and the Fair association have every reason to feel proud of their success. The crowd on Thursday, the big day, was a record breaker, there being 35,000 paid admissions. It is said that 1500 tickets for Adrian over the Lake Shore and D. T. & I. from Tecumseh were sold on that day.

Among the Tecumseh exhibitors were Miss Bess Spayde, who carried off a large number of firsts and seconds on fancy work. Mrs. Floyd Heesen, Mrs. Will Fisher and Mrs. Rob Moore had fine displays of china and fancy work. Mrs. Hattie Brittan also had a large display in the art and domestic department. Miles E. Baldwin and John B. Smith had fine exhibits of garden produce. William Hayden Milling Co. with flour products, S. W. & L. E. Temple and Charles Slayton & Son had an excellent showing of farm implements. F. D. Teachout with Billy Foster and Short Order carried away some of the prize money during the races. The lower grades of the Tecumseh schools had some of their drawings on display. On the whole the fair was a big show and it is the wish of every one in Lenawee County that it will continue to prosper.

The Spinning Machine of a Spider.

The spinning machine is situated under the hinder part of the spider's body. It takes the form of a slight depression, which a close inspection shows to consist of six small bodies resembling tubes. Four of these contain an immense number of minute openings, as many as a thousand can be counted in each, and from every one of these openings a viscous fluid issues, which hardens on exposure to the atmosphere. The whole 4,000 threads are united into one line, which is sometimes so fine that 4,000,000 twisted together would not have a combined diameter greater than that of an ordinary hair from the human head. It is impossible to conceive the excessive slenderness of one of the 4,000 threads which compose such a line. The bare statement that each one has a thickness only one sixteen thousand millionth of that of a human hair does not in any way convey the impression of its wonderful fineness. The mind can no more grasp the meaning of such figures than it can understand the immense distance of which astronomers talk so glibly.

ADRIAN CLEANS UP ON TECUMSEH BY THE SCORE OF 22 TO 0.

Adrian Aggregation is in Better Form Than Ever Before and Players are Getting After the Ball in Regular High School Style.

The Indians from Tecumseh came over to Adrian Saturday to try their strength against that of the Adrian pigskin warriors and although the Tecumseh lads have been a serious proposition other years they were not in the game with Adrian and were defeated by the score of 22 to 0. Not an overwhelming score but a big enough tally to remind Tecumseh that Adrian commands the same respect it ever did.

Wesley and Hoch got one touch down apiece and Merle Ayers got two. Wesley kicked both goals.

PLEASANT WAY TO CURE CATARRH.

Poor deluded victims!

Continually sprinkling and spraying and stomach dosing.

What are you doing it for?

Trying to kill the catarrh germs?

Might just as well try to kill a cat with fresh milk.

Sticking a piece of chewing gum in the upper left hand corner of the right ear would slaughter just as many germs.

You can't kill the germs that cause catarrh unless you get where they are.

You can get where the germs are by breathing Hyomei, the powerful yet soothing antiseptic, which is prepared especially to kill catarrh germs.

Just breathe it in, that's all. It gives joyful relief in five minutes. It is guaranteed by C. A. Wright & Son to cure catarrh, or money back.

It is sold by leading druggists everywhere. A complete outfit, including inhaler, costs $1.00. Extra bottles, 50c. Cures sore throat, coughs and colds.

"I take especial pride in recommending Hyomei to asthmatic sufferers, as I know by experience that it is a remedy that cures. I have not since using Hyomei had any recurrence of asthma."—Mrs. Wm. Burton, Owosso, Mich., June 22, 1909.

THE CHILDREN LIKE IT

It's a pity when sick ones drug the stomach or stimulate the heart and kidneys. That is all wrong! A weak stomach means weak stomach nerves, always. And this is also true of the heart and kidneys. The weak nerves are instead crying out for help. This explains why Dr. Shoop's Restorative is promptly helping stomach, heart and kidney ailments. The Restorative reaches out for the actual cause of these ailments—the failing "inside nerves." Anyway test the Restorative 48 hours. It won't cure so soon as that, but you will surely know that help is coming. Sold by all druggists.

Teacher: "You have named all domestic animals save one. It has bristly hair, it is grimy, likes dirt and is fond of mud. Well, Tom?" Tom (shamefacedly); "That's me."

Tickling or dry Coughs will quickly loosen when using Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. And it is so thoroughly harmless that Dr. Shoop tells mothers to use nothing else even for very young babies. The wholesome green leaves and tender stems of a lung healing mountainous shrub give the curative properties to Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. It calms the cough and heals the sensitive bronchial membranes. No opium, no chloroform, nothing harsh used to injure or suppress. Demand Dr. Shoop's. Accept no other. Sold by all druggists.

Don't give your boy a knife unless he will first promise not to swap. Swapping leads to cheating, and that is bad for the boy and worse for him when he grows up.

It's deep down—it's constitutional. Getting rid of the pain, is after all, what counts. That is why Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy goes by word of mouth from one to another. And herein lies the popularity of this Remedy. It is winning defenders everywhere. Tablets or Liquid. Sold by all druggists.

NEEDFUL KNOWLEDGE.

TECUMSEH PEOPLE SHOULD LEARN TO DETECT THE APPROACH OF KIDNEY DISEASE.

The symptoms of kidney trouble are so unmistakable that they leave no ground for doubt. Sick kidneys excrete a thick, cloudy, offensive urine, full of sediment, irregular of passage, or attended by a sensation of scalding. The back aches constantly, headaches and dizzy spells may occur and the victim is often weighed down by a feeling of languor and fatigue. Neglect these warnings and there is danger of dropsy, Bright's Disease, or diabetes. Any one of these symptoms is warning enough to begin treating the kidneys at once. Delay often proves fatal.

You can use no better remedy than Doan's Kidney Pills. Here's Tecumseh proof:

George D. Chaplin, Ottawa St. Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I used Doan's Kidney Pills, procured from C. A. Wright & Son's drug store and they lived up to the claims made for them. When I procured this remedy I was feeling miserable but after a short use my health was greatly improved. I have no hesitation in recommending Doan's Kidney Pills, as I know they are a reliable kidney remedy." For Sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster & Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, Sole Agents for the United States.

The Sailor's Hands.

A visitor who prides himself on his knowledge of nautical affairs was chating with a friend outside the Flat iron building. "See that man coming?" he asked. "Can you tell what he is by the way he walks?"

"Why, no," replied the New Yorker who was with him.

"He's a sailorman of some sort. Look at his hands. No landsman ever walked that way. A sailor always walks with the palms of his hands turned behind him and the backs turned forward, the way he is walking. Look at that landsman over there. He swings his arms with the palms of the hands turned toward his body and the backs out. You can always detect a man who is accustomed to the sea that way."

"What's the argument?" inquired the other.

"Why, there isn't any that I know. It may be because the sailor gets the habit of balancing himself in rough weather by the use of his arms, but I don't believe that's the reason. It's just one of those things you can't account for.—New York Press.

DEFIES THE LAW.

Flint Man Proposes to Make Test Case of Giving Another a Drink.

Flint, Mich., Sept. 27.—The local option law cannot take a man's personal liberty. Here, take a little drink," said Joseph Miller, a Saginaw waiter, as he presented a quart bottle of whisky to a local restaurant keeper. The latter accepted. Then Miller called on Chief McCall and told what he had done, boasting that the law could not convict a man for that action, and that he was willing to be the martyr for his suffering fellow men in a test case.

Chief McCall was perfectly willing to accept the sacrifice, and Miller was locked up. He will be arraigned at once.

CRUSHED UNDER LOG.

Child at Bay City Meets Horrible Death.

Bay City, Mich., Sept. 27.—Missing for several hours, Felix, the seven-year-old son of Patrick DeLill, a saloonist, was finally found, crushed under a big log at the plant of the Beutel Woodenware works. The child had been dead several hours. Felix left the house with several companions. The children had evidently been playing on the logs, and when one of the timbers rolled on the DeLill boy, the others became frightened and ran away. The parents of the dead boy are nearly crazed by the tragedy.

MOORS DRIVEN BACK.

Spanish Fire Villages as They Advance.

La Restinga, Morocco, Sept. 27.—General Orosco's division advanced Saturday in the direction of Selouan, using a captive balloon to direct the movements. The Moorish villages were set on fire by the advancing troops.

SPANISH ARTILLERYMEN AT MELILLA.

Heavy resistance was encountered at several points, but the Spanish displayed great gallantry and, keeping the Moors under a rain of shells from the batteries, drove the enemy steadily back with considerable loss. General Marina, commander of the Spanish forces, personally followed the operations.

It is reported that the Moors are re-forming behind a strong rocky position to the west of Melilla.

Outrages of the Telephone.

That the telephone has blessed many a man, saved many lives and helped pile up fortunes is true, but has it not cursed some women, ruined many lives and hastened domestic misfortune? It has. Has it not become the favorite pastime of the women with nothing to do? It has. Does it not accelerate gossip and aid the idle and the wayward constantly? It does. Self indulgent women waste their husbands' money by ordering food over the too handy telephone rather than bother to dress for the street, thereby losing both their wholesome morning exercise and their chance thriftily to secure the best there is for the price at market or at stores from which the family larder is supplied. The time wasted by women in foolish phoning can never be offset by time gained by forehanded men in business, for what shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world if his "world" is lost through folly?

Telephoning, from a habit, finally becomes a vice and a menace to the courtesies. It has destroyed the fine art of social correspondence. It has crowned Haste with Courtesy's laurel.—Minna Thomas Antrim in Lippincott's.

Old Names For Guns.

As the use of artillery became more common and the advantages of portability and a greater rapidity of fire were recognized, guns, except among the orientals, became smaller, not of better workmanship and construction. Inventors began to try their hands at all sorts of improvements or attempts at improvement, and in the course of a hundred years or so the number of different pieces of cannon, large and small, muzzle or breechloading, was simply legion. There were cannon, cannon royal and demi-cannon, three of four classes of culverins, bombards, mortars, perriers, serpentines, carthouns, curtalls, passevolants or sebastanas, basilisks, organs, sakers, minions, mojanes, falcons and falconets, robinets, fowlers, bases, slings, portpieces, murderers, drakes, aspics, double dogs and lagtors, to say nothing of ribadoquins, flying dragons and partridge mortars.—Gentlemen's Magazine.

Useful Diversions.

There is an affection in every employment, and it gives the spirit energy and keeps the mind intent upon its work or study. This, if it be not relaxed, becomes dull, and its earnestness flags—as salt that has lost its savor, so that it has no pungency of relish; or as a bended bow, which, unless it be unbent, loses the power that it derives from its elasticity. Just so the mind, kept from day to day in the same ideas, without variety. So the eyes, when they look only at one object or continually upon one color. For, to look continually at a thing which is black, or continually at red or at white, destroys the sight. Thus if one looks continually at the sun the sight is destroyed, but it is enlivened if he looks in succession or at the same time upon many colors. Every form delights by its variation, as a garland of roses of different colors arranged in beautiful order. Hence it is that the rainbow is more charming than the light itself.—Emanuel Swedenborg.

Mild Laxative for Baby Free

The child of today is the parent of the future, and whether it grows up healthy and strong, or puny and weak, depends upon the intelligence of its parents, for most children are born into the world healthy, but thousands become future weaklings between birth and the age of ten, when the parents are still in greatest control.

The prime cause of trouble is in the stomach, and baby that is digesting its food seldom cries and always looks cheerful; the little child whose stomach is good romps and plays and never whines, the growing child learns well at school and is eager for fun. If the head is clear and the stomach light, and that means if it has no constipation.

The best kind of a way to cure any irregularity of the stomach and bowels in children is by the use of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. This is a liquid laxative wonderful in its effect, as Mrs. John W. Dunham, Apple Creek, Mrs. Jas. Cullam, Blackwell, Okla., and numerous others can testify who give it to their children with extraordinary results.

A bottle only costs 50 cents or $1 according to the size you want, and even one 50-cent bottle will do a wonderful amount of good in a family. It can be given to any member of the family in constipation, sour stomach, indigestion, torpid liver, dyspepsia, dizziness, sick headache and similar disorders of the bowels. It never gripes or sickens like pills, tablets, salts and cathartics, and may not be given to children, women and old folks.

If you have a child or other member of the family who needs help, try a 50-cent size this grand laxative today. Just send your name and address to the doctor and a trial bottle will be sent to your home, in this way you can find out what it will do without personal expense.

If there is anything about your stomach that you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 500 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill.

CUSHWAY IS AGAIN CAUGHT

Too Much Church Put Convict in Throes of Law.

POSED AS CHOIR SINGER

Man Who Escaped From Jackson Went to Village of Colon—Telephoned Back to Prison City For Comrade, Who Is Arrested on Charge of Aiding Cushway to Escape.

Colon, Mich., Sept. 27.—Too much church proved the undoing of James Cushway, highway robber, housebreaker and four times escaped convict. He was captured here Sunday morning while on his way to the Baptist church, where he was to sing with the choir, after less than three days' liberty from Jackson. Leo J. Rivett, a Jackson tailor and ex-convict, with whom Cushway was walking, was taken into custody on suspicion of having aided the former in his escape, and now the two are in jail at Centerville, awaiting the arrival of prison officials.

Cushway has displayed remarkable nerve in his escapades. On the trip to this place he acted even more bravely. Posing as a devout church-goer and a member of Baptist choirs in other places, he had made all arrangements to join the church choir here. Saturday evening, when rehearsing with the singers in the church here, Cushway gained the praise of many of the members.

Cushway arrived in Colon Friday night on the Michigan Central Air Line train from the east and secured lodgings at a local hotel, where he registered as James Conroy. He retired to his room early and was up early Saturday morning. All that day he sauntered about the village as though he had not a care in the world, and talked with several residents. During the afternoon he talked to Rivett, at Jackson, by long distance telephone.

Early in the evening Cushway went to the barber shop conducted by Deputy Sheriff Goodell and conversed with that official while the latter was shaving him. After the shave he remained in the shop nearly an hour, continuing the conversation with the unsuspecting deputy. Then he strolled down to the depot and met Rivett when the latter arrived with two big grips on the train from Jackson. The two went to the hotel and later left there for the Sides boarding house, where they engaged a room.

While taking an after supper walk the two passed the Baptist church and, attracted by the singing, entered the building. Telling the members of the choir that he was somewhat of a singer himself, Cushway received permission to join them, and for nearly an hour the hymns were rehearsed.

When the choir practice broke up, Cushway, all unsuspecting, arranged for assisting in the Sunday service and then bid the members good night. But one of the ladies of the choir who desires that her identity be kept secret recognized him from a picture she had seen in the papers following his escape. She notified her husband of her suspicions Sunday morning, and the latter, to make the identity positive, secured the services of a local citizen who several years ago served a term in Ionia reformatory when Cushway was in that institution.

The citizen stated that the suspect was the man wanted, and Goodell was notified. The latter and Deputy Dickinson started for the Sides boarding house to make the arrest, but met the men going to church. Neither Cushway nor Rivett made any resistance when arrested, but the former, with a half humorous grimace, mumbled something about how the singing would suffer because he wasn't there. The men were taken to Centerville.

Jackson, Mich., Sept. 27.—Acting Warden Wenger has gone to Centerville to bring back James Cushway. He stated that a complaint against Rivett, charging the latter with aiding Cushway in the escape, would be lodged with a justice of the peace there.

"It's the ball and chain for Cushway, now," said Wenger, before he took the train. "We are getting about tired of chasing all over the country after him, and he's much too 'slippery' to be given any liberties."

Play Two in New York.

New York, Sept. 27.—Detroit and New York will play two games here today, permission to pull Tuesday's contest forward having been granted by President Johnson of the American league. The change is made so as not to conflict with the Hudson-Fulton historical parade.

TWO KILLED ON CROSSING

Mother and Son Meet Death at Ypsilanti.

SKULLS OF BOTH FRACTURED

Accident Happens at Intersection of Cross Street and Tracks—Andrew McAdoo and Mother Were Driving into Town to Make Purchases—Witnesses Blame Crossing Man.

Ypsilanti, Mich., Sept. 30.—As a result of their rig being struck by Michigan Central fast mail train No. 31, at the intersection of Cross street and the tracks, Andrew A. McAdoo, aged forty-five, was instantly killed and his mother, Mrs. Eliza McAdoo, aged seventy, was so badly injured that she died fifteen minutes later. They lived on the Hammond farm, two miles south of this city, and were coming here to do some shopping.

McAdoo, who was driving, was slightly deaf and, while watching a work train which was coming toward the crossing from the west, did not notice the mail train approaching at a rate of thirty miles an hour, witnesses say, from the east. The horse saw the danger and made an effort to get clear of the track, but it was too late. The pilot of the engine struck the animal and the forward part of the rig, and the victims were dragged along the track for fifty feet.

Bodies Mangled.

The skulls of both were fractured and the bodies badly mangled. Mrs. McAdoo was badly hurt in the D. U. R. wreck of April 16, 1906, near Smith's switch, less than a mile from the scene of this tragedy. An inquest will be held, and it is possible that a complaint will be made against the railway employes and officials, as there is a city ordinance prohibiting the running of trains within the city limits at more than ten miles per hour. Witnesses say the gates were not lowered as soon as they should have been and that the rig was on the tracks before Watchman Henry C. Chase lowered the guards.

The McAdoos were well known residents of this county.

ATTACKED AT NIGHT.

Man Near Grand Rapids Badly Hurt by Footpads.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Sept. 30.—Lying in a state of partial coma from a terrible beating administered by an unidentified man, Nicholas Longstreet, aged twenty-four, is at the home of his father, Peter Longstreet, a short distance from the city, in a serious condition and may die.

About 7 o'clock at night his uncle, John Longstreet, found the young man in the road, crawling along on his hands and knees, muttering incoherently about an Italian. No attempt was made at robbery, and relatives are at a loss for a motive for the brutal attack. The weapon used was some blunt instrument.

LITTLE FELLOW LIVES.

Engineer Stops His Train Just in Time.

Saginaw, Mich., Sept. 30.—Engineer Fred Brenner of Detroit brought his big locomotive of the Detroit passenger flyer on the Michigan Central road to a stop here a foot from where the three-year-old child of James Mortimer played upon the rails.

Several women who saw the flyer swoop around a curve at Atwater street and bear down upon the playing child, a few rods away, shrieked and fainted at the tragedy which seemed inevitable. Brenner threw on his brakes, however, and brought his train to so quick a stop that the babe's life was saved.

DAMAGES ARE HEAVY.

Building Containing Two Detroit Factories Burned.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 30.—Fire has almost totally destroyed the long three story frame structure on Palmer avenue, between Moran street and Mt. Elliot avenue, containing the plants of the Palmer Manufacturing company, making tables for parlor and dining room, and the Pioneer Manufacturing company, makers of reed furniture. The loss, which is estimated at $100,000 by W. J. Streng, president of the Palmer concern, and co-partner in the Pioneer company, is partly covered by insurance.

The fire is believed to have started in the cabinet room of the Palmer

DAY FULL OF AVIATION EVENTS

Wright Makes Three Flights and Curtiss One-

BALLOONS ALSO IN THE AIR

Wright Gets In Ahead of Curtiss and Sails Out Around Statue of Liberty. Dirigible Balloons Start For Albany. One Falls Into River and Other Is Forced to Stop Twenty Miles Away.

New York, Sept. 30.—Wilbur Wright circled the great statue of liberty at the entrance of New York harbor in his aeroplane Wednesday, while in the upper part of the city two huge dirigible balloons failed ingloriously in their task. This, the first day of flight of the Hudson-Fulton celebration, was a victory for the heavier-than-air machine.

Both Wright and Glenn H. Curtiss soared successfully from the aerodrome of Governor's island in their motor-propelled biplanes; both great dirigibles, manned respectively by Captain Thomas Baldwin and George Y. Tomlinson and entered in the New York World's $10,000 New York to Albany race, were forced to descend because of mechanical difficulties before they were well under way.

Lands in Hudson River.

Wilbur Wright made three sensational flights, and Curtiss made one brief, thought successful, test spin of thirty seconds' duration. Baldwin, with his dirigible, landed in the Hudson river less than an hour after the start, while Tomlinson, after remaining in the air from 11:36 a. m. until 1:30 p. m., came to earth near White Plains, N. Y., twenty-two miles from his starting point. Neither of the dirigible pilots was injured, nor was either craft seriously damaged.

With a lull in the general Hudson-Fulton ceremonies, the eyes of all New York and her million visitors were turned toward Governors' Island, where the aeroplane flights were held, and toward Fulton Flight square, at One Hundred and Nineteenth street and Riverside drive, the starting point of the New York to Albany race.

In all three of his flights the Wright machine showed greater speed than that of Curtiss', but the Curtiss flier seemed to keep its equilibrium better and remained on an even keel.

Wright's action in circling the statue of liberty is taken as a challenge to Curtiss, for Curtiss, it will be recalled, was the first to mention such a flight. From now on, it is expected that the two aviators will strive to outdo the other.

GEORGE A BAD BOY.

Escapes From Industrial School and Turns Thief.

Alpena, Mich., Sept. 30.—"You can't talk, nor nuthin', an' they spank you, so I left," said George West, aged fourteen, late of the state reform school. George was sent to Lansing from the Soo in '08, escaped Sept. 20, under the officers' eyes. He broke into a Lansing store that night and changed his uniform for a brand new outfit.

Then he hoboed to Alpena and robbed Potter's hardware store Tuesday night of a revolver, some cartridges, a fishing outfit and a dozen knives. He was captured while shooting ducks on the bay shore. Workmen at local mills have missed their dinner pails for a week, and George has been living on them and sleeping in office buildings.

He goes back to Lansing today.

HAS SONS ARRESTED.

Farmer Accuses Them of Taking Money He Hid in Cellar.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 30.—On complaint of Mark Howcroft, lessee of the Bissel farm, near Hamtramck, his son, Samuel Howcroft, thirty years old, and his son-in-law, August Blaess, twenty-eight years old, have been arrested, charged with stealing about $3,000 which Mark Howcroft had secreted in his cellar. The money was drawn from the bank about six weeks ago, the elder Howcroft contemplating the purchase of land.

Howcroft's son and son-in-law run the farm, and he makes his home with them. Both men deny taking the hidden money.

JAP COMMISSION IN DETROIT TODAY

Puts In Busy Hours In Garnd Rapids Wednesday.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 30.—The Japanese commission arrived here this morning from Grand Rapids. Its members are putting in an exceedingly busy day, touring the city, visiting factories and attending luncheons.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Sept. 30.—The Japanese industrial commission was tendered a banquet last evening by the city of Grand Rapids at Hotel Pantelind, covers being laid for 150, at $10 a plate.

The post-prandial program was in charge of United States Senator William Alden Smith, who acted as toastmaster. The opening address was by Hon. Thomas J. O'Brien, American ambassador to Japan, and was followed by Baron Shibuswa, chairman of the Japanese commission. Hon. R. W. Butterfield then gave a brief history of Grand Rapids and the furniture industry and was followed by Baron Naibu Kanda, professor of Peers school, Tokio.

Short addresses followed by David R. Francis, ex-governor of Missouri; M. Midzuno, consul general at New York; Senator Julius C. Burrows, Governor F. M. Warner and Congressman G. J. Diekema.

Closer industrial relations between the United States and Japan was the trend of the remarks of every speaker.

During the day the Japanese visitors (who arrived in the morning), under the escort of the committee of the board of trade and the Furniture Manufacturers' association, visited many of the big furniture plants and other industries and points of interest about the city.

The members left after midnight for Detroit.

Professor Rebec of the philosophy department of the U. of M. has resigned. He states that he does not wish to bring discredit to the university. Rebec is the teacher whose wife procured a divorce some time ago and who, it was announced, had married a Kalamazoo young woman.

Fear that its water supply at Goguac lake would be contaminated has led the board of health of Battle Creek to turn down the proposed camp meeting at that resort of 25,000 Free Methodists. The local businessmen had sought the camp meeting, and it was expected the visitors would spend $30,000 a day there for a week.

JUDGE TAYLOR IS ARBITRATOR

Mayor Johnson Refers Street Car Fight to District Attorney.

END OF CONFLICT IN SIGHT

War For Cheaper Street Car Fares In Ohio City Promises Soon to End. Taylor's Recent Ordinance Apparently Looks Good to Both Parties. Will Call Special Election.

Cleveland, O., Sept. 30.—Settlement of the street car war which has waged here for the last eight years seems nearer today than it has at any time since the city and street railway's officials began fighting.

The council committee of the whole decided to permit United States District Judge Taylor to act as final arbitrator in the questions of valuatio and maximum fare. The decision followed a conference between Mayor T. L. Johnson and the Democratic members of the council, in the mayor's private office.

Judge Taylor was named by the street railway's officials several months ago as their choice for arbitrator in the warfare.

Following the decision of Judge Taylor on the two questions, the matter will be submitted to the people for a vote. A special election will be held, as it is now too late to vote on the question at the regular election.

Recently Judge Taylor submitted an ordinance for the settlement of the traction trouble to the city council at the request of the street car company. It provided for a three-cent fare for a period of eight months, and if this paid 6 per cent on the valuation of the property to continue it indefinitely. If the three cent fare did not pay he proposed to raise the fare to not more than seven tickets for a quarter, with a penny charge for a transfer. The maximum cash fare proposed in the plan was five cents.

JURY FOR RICH.

Nine of Them on Bay City Case Are Farmers.

Bay City, Mich., Sept. 30.—The jury which will determine the innocence or guilt of Roland Rich, charged with the wilful murder of his grandmother, Mrs. Christine Coryeon, on the 26th day of last May, has been completed. Nine of the twelve jurymen are farmers.

Adjournment was taken for the day when Mrs. Lizzie Frances of Detroit, a relative of Mrs. Coryeon, and who slept with her the night before the tragedy, failed to respond when she was called as a witness. Inquiry showed that she was confined to her room with illness, an attack of heart failure having taken place.

Doubt If Anna Killed Self.

Sturgis, Mich., Sept. 30.—Mystery still surrounds the disappearance of Anna Stropagel, aged fifteen, who left her home here more than a month ago, and from whom a postal card written in Chicago and mailed to her sister bore a threat of suicide. Despite the message of the postal, the family of the girl does not accept the theory that the missing girl has ended her own life.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for testimonials.

No Man is Stronger Than His Stomach

A strong man is strong all over. No man can be strong who is suffering from weak stomach with its consequent indigestion, or from some other disease of the stomach and its associated organs, which impairs digestion and nutrition. For when the stomach is weak or diseased there is a loss of the nutrition contained in food, which is the source of all physical strength. When a man "doesn't feel just right," when he doesn't sleep well, has an uncomfortable feeling in the stomach after eating, is languid, nervous, irritable and despondent, he is losing the nutrition needed to make strength.

Such a man should use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enriches the blood, invigorates the liver, strengthens the kidneys, nourishes the nerves, and so GIVES HEALTH AND STRENGTH TO THE WHOLE BODY.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic medicine of KNOWN COMPOSITION, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit. Ingredients printed on wrapper.

HIS LAST SERMON

Rev. Wm. B. Hartzog Leaves This Week for His New Home.

Rev. Wm. B. Hartzog closed his pastorate with the First Baptist church, of this city Sunday. The announcement that that would be his last day brought out a much larger audience than usual and the pretty edifice in which he has presided for the last three years, was well filled,

His closing message was cheerful in character. He spoke kindly of the manner in which the membership had co-operated with him in the work and a spirit of tenderness prevailed all through the day's service.

Rev. Mr. Hartzog and his family leave this week for Tecumseh, Mich., where Rev. Mr. Hartzog becomes pastor of the First Baptist church with a large membership. The citizens of Bowling Green will have general regret to lose Rev. Mr. Hartzog and his family, as each member has filled a niche in Bowling Green society in a most pleasing manner.

Coming here three years ago under the direction of the State Board of Missions, Rev. Mr. Hartzog went into the work of rebuilding the Baptist church membership with a vim.

Among the fruits of his efforts has been the addition of thirty members to the church and of a three fold increase of the Sunday school despite the fact that changes and deaths have affected the church to a marked degree. The beautiful church home has received several hundred dollars improvements, continuing it as one of the prettiest edifices in this section.

Ontside of the church work, the departing pastor has identified himself with good movements. He has been Secretary of the Local Option association of Wood county; Member of the Normal school committee; Member of the Executive committee of the Wood County Sunday School Association; Chairman of the Ministerial Union of Bowling Green; Clerk and treasurer of the Toledo Baptist association; Secretary of the Baptist Union, of Toledo. In addition to this he has wedged into his busy life, many special addresses and lectures and, being quite a fraternity man, has been a regular attendant at Masonic lodge.

He graduated at the Ohio Northern University and at Bonebrake Theological Seminary, taking a post graduate course under the direction of Centeral University of Indianapolis and there preparing his widely circulated book "Ancient Masters and Jesus" for which he received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy.

Since taking up his chosen work he has been pastor at Martin's Ferry, O., Hildreth Baptist church, Columbus, Ohio, and Immanual Baptist church, Cleveland, Ohio. For fourteen years he served on the State Executive Board of the Ohio Baptist convention. His wide experience, enthusiasm and executive ability will make him a welcome addition into Tecumseh religious and literary circles.

At Sunday's services a committee was appointed to look after the future welfare of the local Baptist church which becomes pastorless by his call to Michigan.—"The Daily Sentinel-Tribune", Bowling Green, O.

UNCANNY GUIDES.

When the Gallows Was Used as a Landmark In England.

The old time guidebooks in England were by no means cheerful reading. A journey from London to East Grinstead, a distance of five or six and twenty miles, would have taken the horseman past three gibbets, and it was just as likely as not that from one or the other of them a body would be swinging in the wind.

Up till the beginning of the nineteenth century the gallows was almost as frequent a landmark as finger posts or public houses have become now. The traveler approaching York is directed by the guidebooks to "turn round by the gallows and three windmills," and the road out of Durham is "between the gallows and Crokehill." Going out of Wells you "cross the brook and pass by the gallows."

Any number of such directions can be gleaned from the old books for the guidance of travelers a hundred years ago, and as these interesting objects were put up and the dead bodies of malefactors left upon them for the special edification of footpads and highwaymen there was a suggestiveness about them that must have given a special piquancy to cycle touring if it had been in vogue at that time.—London News.

OLD ENGLISH COOKERY.

A Lively Feast With Much Delight and Pleasure.

A study of Robert May's "Accomplisht Cook," published in 1665, will serve to dispel the delusion fostered by many foreign critics that English cookery lacks variety. One of May's recipes is for the construction of a ship of confectionery, with guns charged with actual powder, and a castle of pies, containing live frogs and birds. After giving directions as to the firing of the guns he proceeds:

"This done, to sweeten the stink of the powder let the ladies take the eggshells full of sweet waters and throw them at each other. All danger being seemingly over, by this time you may suppose they will desire to see what is in the pyes; when, lifting first the lid off one pye, out skip some frogs, which makes the ladies to skip and shriek; next after the other pye, whence come out the birds, who, by a natural instinct, flying in the light will put out the candles: so that, what with the flying birds and skipping frogs, the one above, the other beneath, will cause much delight and pleasure to the whole company."—London Chronicle.

The Ancient Greek Theater.

The performance at Athens, in ancient Greece, began at dawn, and, as several pieces were produced one after the other, these performances lasted the whole day. On the days the performances were given all work was suspended, business put off, imprisoned debtors were set free and arrests strictly prohibited. Long before sunrise thousands of people assembled, and outside of the theater noisy crowds of men, women and children congregated, all bent upon enjoying themselves and eager to obtain the best seats. Many of them brought their food with them, and in order to stimulate the enthusiasm of the people copious quantities of fiery Greek wine were given to impecunious citizens by wily authors, who endeavored thus to buy the applause of a discriminating public.

The Point of View.

"You sang off the key!" exclaimed the musical director reproachfully.

"Sir!" replied the young but haughty soprano. "What you mean to say is that your orchestra occasionally failed to harmonize with my voice."—Exchange.

WHITNEY SAYS PEARY WAS KIND TO HIM

New York, Sept. 30.—A dispatch has been received by the Associated Press from Harry Whitney, the New Haven Motor Cruiser, which has arrived at St. Johns, N. F., by the schooner Jeanie, on his way home. He said in part:

"Stephenville Crossing, N. F. Sept. 29.—So many questions are being asked of me by different papers that I desire to make the following statement through the Associated Press:

"My reasons for not going back to Etah after Dr. Cook's things were that the engine in the Jeanie, one of the smallest boats that ever went to the north Arctic, was not working satisfactorily and we were depending partly on sails, which later we had to do entirely. There was no reason why the Jeanie could not have gone back, but, not knowing that Dr. Cook's things left with me were of such importance as they have since turned out to be, I did not return.

"No one could have been kinder to me, or shown me more consideration, than Commander Peary did while I was on the Roosevelt.

"HARRY WHITNEY."

A Limited Brother.

No man can own any more than he can carry in his own heart.—Chicago Tribune.

"The Last Ditch."

A dignified origin can be given to the expression "to die in the last ditch." On the death of De Witt the Prince of Orange was made head of the Dutch republic. Despite his youth he displayed the courage and tenacity of his race. "Do you not see your country is lost?" asked the Duke of Buckingham, who had been sent to negotiate at The Hague. "There is a sure way never to see it lost," replied William, "and that is to die in the last ditch."

He Got Married.

Our cook, said the family man, had a beau who called on her often, but finally his visits ceased. I asked her one day what had become of her former attentive beau, and she said he had got married.

"Since he got married," said she, "he don't come around any more."

"Married," said I, surprised. "Why, I thought he would marry you?"

"So he did," said the cook.—Browning's Magazine.

Gibbon's Great History of Rome.

Although the idea was conceived when Gibbon was twenty-seven, he was thirty-one before he set himself seriously at work to study his material. At thirty-six he began the composition, and he was thirty-nine when in February, 1776, the first quarto volume was published. The history had an immediate success. "My book," he wrote, "was on every table; the historian was crowned by the taste or fashion of the day." The first edition was exhausted in a few days, a second was printed 1776, and next year a third. The second and third volumes, which ended the history of the western empire, were published in 1781, and seven years later the three volumes devoted to the eastern empire saw the light. The last sentence of the work, written in the summer house at Lausanne, is: "It was among the ruins of the capitol that I first conceived the idea of a work which has amused and exercised nearly twenty years of my life, and which, however inadequate to my own wishes, I finally deliver to the curiosity and candor of the public."—Scribner's Magazine.

ACME QUALITY

If it's a surface to be painted, enameled, stained, varnished or finished in any way, there's an Acme Quality Kind to fit the purpose.

5 Strong Reasons for Fall Painting

1. The wood is thoroughly dry.
Summer's sun has removed all moisture.

2. Paint penetrates deeper into dry wood.
The deeper it goes the better it holds.

3. Fall weather is warm, dry and dependable.
Little danger of cold, damp, rainy days, which endanger the durability of the paint.

4. Wet weather decays and destroys unprotected surfaces.
Lack of paint means unsightly and less valuable property.

5. Fall painting keeps out winter moisture.
The greatest enemy to the life and beauty of all structures.

Ask us about ACME QUALITY HOUSE PAINT (New Era). It insures the greatest protection and beauty, at the least cost per year of service. Questions cheerfully answered.

He has refunded money to all dissatisfied customers, and has thereby gained the confidence and respect of everyone.

Tecumseh Schools Advertised.

A Tecumseh citizen picked up a Hastings Herald the other day and seeing an advertisement of their schools in it turned to us and asked: "Why does not the board advertise our schools?" Of course, we gave it up. It might not be a bad idea. As other towns around us do it, they must see there is some benefit derived from it. Too late for this year, but there are other other years. Perhaps, though, it is better to hide our light under a bushel. We might get too many foreign pupils.—We clipped the above item from the notes and comments in the Tecumseh News, last Tuesday's issue. We quite agree with you, Brother Mingay, in regard to the advertising of our schools. We will say that the school board did advertise this year, and during all month of August took a space for display advertising in the Tecumseh Herald. Hence, the large number of foreign pupils.

WELCOME

EXTENDED TO REV. AND MRS. D. STANLEY SHAW LAST EVENING

IN THE PARLORS OF THE METHODIST CHURCH.

A Large Number Present to Welcome the Pastor and Family.

A very warm welcome was given last night at the M. E. church to Rev. Shaw and family on his re-appointment to this charge for the coming year. The church parlors were filled with friends, whose smiling faces and warm hand-clasp, told Mr. and Mrs. Shaw as no words could, of the rejoicing upon their return here for another year.

A short program was given, each department in the church extending a welcome to Rev. Shaw and family. Miss Harriet Hurry called the guests to order in a few well chosen words that showed her appreciation of the pastor and his church work.

Miss Fern Hanford, representing the Epworth League said, "That every member of the Epworth League was glad for the return of Mr. Shaw to this charge and the best way to show this appreciation, was to become a regular attendant at church as actions speak louder than words.

Mrs. Harriet Britton, in behalf of the Home Mission she represented, said they were very grateful for Mr. and Mrs. Shaw's return, for they had been a great help to the society in their work.

A duet by the Misses Kreidler, "Life's Long Dream is O'er," was much appreciated by everyone.

Mrs. Leeman Barnes was called upon to represent the Foreign Missionary Society. Mrs. Barnes, who has done so much for the church, and is beloved by every member, was listened to with deepest interest, as her words always carry weight, and it was the warmest of welcomes that she gave Rev. and Mrs. Shaw.

Mrs. F. J. Temple, speaking for the Sunday School, said, "As they were over 200 strong, it was a large welcome they could extend. She then went on to say each and every one had their share of work to do, illustrating her remarks with a bright, story showing that one or two could not do the work, but with a pull "all together" much could be accomplished.

A solo by Miss Brush, whose voice is sweet and clear, was listened to with pleasure.

The Men's class was represented by John Temple, whose bright, witty remarks were enjoyed by every one. He spoke of the inspiration this gathering was to him, and of the inspiration Rev. Shaw had been to the Men's class, and how they were all working for the up-lift of humanity, and in his witty way, touched up the characteristics of each member of the class, calling Mr. Tiffany, of whom they were very proud, The poet Lauriet; Mr. Smith's hobby being temperance, who would hold forth on all occasions; Mr. Russell, the all-around man, who could speak on any subject, especially on finance. Mr. Wightman, the legal light of the class, gave them good advice on all subjects. In fact, Mr. Temple seemed to think they were all fond of talking.

Mr. Temple was glad Mr. Shaw had passed by the Dist. Superintendency and Bishopric, for of course, Tecumseh was much better than either of these. In closing he said that each member was glad that Mr. and Mrs. Shaw had returned for another year.

A solo by Earl Coller, "Good Night, Beloved, Good Night," was beautifully rendered

Mrs. Fred Rosacrans represented the Ladies Aid Society, saying that as they generally represented the substantial side of the church they would show their welcome by inviting the guests out to lunch. But before adjourning Mr. Shaw said a few words. He spoke feelingly of the cordial welcome extended to them, saying in his enthusiastic way, that body and soul he would work for the good of the church the coming year, his remarks recalling that bit of Shakespeare, "One-half of me is yours, the other half yours, so all is yours." They sang, "Blest Be the Tie," and adjourned for the social hour.

ITS A TOP NOTCH DOER.

Great deeds compel regard. The world crowns its doers. That's why the American people have crowned Dr. King's New Discovery the King of Throat and Lung remedies. Every atom is a health force. It kills germs and colds and makes la grippe vanish. It heals cough-racked membranes and coughing stops. Sore, inflamed bronchial tubes and lungs are cured and hemorahages cease. Dr. Geo. More, Black Jack, N. C., writes: "It cured me of lung trouble, pronounced hopeless by all doctors." 50c, $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by C. A. Wright & Son.

A contemporary note that Mr. Roosevelt has preached two sermons in Africa. Only two? And he has been there six months.

Mr. Harriman was a mighty little man physically, but it will take something of a whale to fill his place in the financial world, nevertheless.

MISERABLE DYSPEPTICS.

"MI-ON-A was used by me for a stomach difficulty of long standing, and a cure obtained before I had used the remedy two weeks. I had hard, dull pains and cramps in my stomach, and this organ became tender, sore and weak. The trouble made me nervous and miserable. MI-O-NA put me on my feet in good shape, and entirely dispelled the stomach trouble; for this reason, it has my recommendation and hearty endorsement." William Lanning, Adrian St., Tecumseh, Mich. Oct. 15, 1908.

If you have dispepsia or any distressing ailment of the stomach, Mi-o-na tablets will give you relief in a few hours.

In nearly every case Mi-o-na will effect a permanent cure in two weeks.

Not by digesting the food artificially, mind you, for that method never did and never will cure dispepsia, but by building up and putting strength and energy into the flabby, overworked walls of the stomach so that it can easily digest its own food.

Mi-on-a is a greatest of all stomach tonics. Take it two weeks and you will feel better, healthier, happier; your skin will be clearer; your eyes brighter.

C. A. Wright & Son sell Mi-o-na at 50 cents a large box, under a guarantee from the makers to cure dyspepsia, sea or car sickness, vomiting of pregnancy, and effects of the night before or money back.

Go to the blood if you would drive out Rheumatism. A Wisconsin physician Dr. Shoop, does this with his Rheumatic Remedy—and with seeming success. Rub-ons, says the doctor, never did cure Rheumatism. It is more than skin deep—it is constitutional, always, because of this principle, Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy is perhaps the most popular in existence. It goes by word of mouth from one to another, everywhere. Grateful patients gladly spread results. It is an act of humanity to tell the sick of a way to health. Tell some sick one. Sold by C. A. Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the idea of treating the cause, rather than the effect, would come into practice. A tiny, inside, hidden nerve, says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branche also goes to the Heart, and one to the kidneys. When these "inside nerves" fail, then the organs must falter. Dr. Shoop's Restoratives is directed specifically to these failing nerves. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment patients say they realize a gain. Sold by C. A. Wright & Son,

TO AILING WOMEN

A Little Sound Advice Will Help Many a Sufferer in Tecumseh.

No woman can be healthy and well if the kidneys are sick. Poisons that pass off in the secretions when the kidneys are well, are retained in the body when the kidneys are sick. Kidneys and bladder become inflamed and swollen and worse troubles quickly follow. This is often the true cause of bearing-down pains, lameness, backache, sideache, etc. Uric poisoning also causes headaches, dizzy spells, languor, nervousness and rheumatic pains.

When suffering so, try Doan's Kidney Pills, a remedy that cures sick kidneys. You will get better as the kidneys get better, and health will return when the kidneys are well. Let a Tecumseh woman tell you about Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. George Burrough, W. Potawatamie St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "About a year ago my health began to fail and my whole body began to ache. My kidneys did not act as they should and my back ached a great deal. Knowing of persons who had used Doan's Kidney Pills for similar troubles with the best of results, I procured a box at C. A. Wright & Son's drug store. A few weeks after beginning their use I felt much better and at the present time I am free from the aches and pains. I willingly recommend Doan's Kidney Pills as I know that they are reliable." Sold by C. A. Wright & Son.

Weak Women

To weak and ailing women, there is at least one way to help. But with that way, two treatments must be combined. One is local, one is constitutional, but both are important, both essential. Dr. Shoop's Night Cure is the Local. Dr. Shoop's Restorative, the Constitutional.

The former—Dr. Shoop's Night Cure—is a topical mucous membrane suppository remedy, while Dr. Shoop's Restorative is wholly an internal treatment. The Restorative reaches throughout the entire system, seeking the repair of all nerve, all tissue, and all blood ailments.

The "Night Cure", as its name implies, does its work while you sleep. It soothes sore and inflamed mucous surfaces, heals local weaknesses and discharges, while the Restorative, eases nervous excitement, gives renewed vigor and ambition, builds up wasted tissue, bringing about renewed strength, vigor, and energy. Take Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—as a general tonic to the system. For positive local help, use as well

President Visits Big Seattle Fair For First Time.

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 30.—President Taft reached the Pacific coast last night, just two weeks after his start from Boston. He will leave Seattle for Tacoma on Friday and will leave that city at midnight, going south until Los Angeles is reached. Then comes the turn to the east. The president paid his first visit to the fair today.

The president and his party were met at the Union station on their arrival here at 8:15 o'clock by a reception committee of two dozen members. The visitors and the reception committee entered automobiles and, preceded by a troop of mounted police, proceeded to the Rainier club, where a reception in honor of the president was given by Mrs. Richard Ballinger, wife of the secretary of the interior.

After half an hour at the club the president and his escort went to the Hotel Washington, which is the home of the visitors until their departure for Tacoma. The president was permitted to retire early after greeting the Yale club, which was holding a dinner and reception at the hotel.

A great throng of people waited for the president at the station and along the brilliantly lighted streets through which he passed, and there was cheering at every step of the way.

After luncheon at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition today he will make an address in the natural amphitheatre. The president also will speak at a banquet at the exposition grounds during the evening.

PRESIDENTS WILL MEET ON NEUTRAL TERRITORY

Washington, Sept. 29.—As a result of considerable correspondence between Mexico and the United States, an understanding has been reached whereby the region between El Paso,

BRIDGE PRESIDENTS WILL CROSS.

Tex., and Juarez, Mex., which is in dispute, will be regarded as neutral territory, and the flags of neither nation will be displayed therein during the meeting of Presidents Taft and Diaz, which takes place next month.

ONE KILLED IN RACE.

Auto Was Smashing Road Record When Overturned.

Riverhead, L. I., Sept. 30.—The smashing of every existing American record for automobile racing on the open road and a spill which cost the life of Mechanican James Bates and serious injuries to another, Herbert Lytle, a well known racing driver, marked the running Wednesday of the Long Island automobile derby. The event was a stock car sweepstakes.

The casualties were caused by the skidding of the Apperson car, driven by Lytle, as it neared an easy bend in the road. The sixty horsepower engine, tearing down a slight declivity at a rate of sixty-five miles an hour, suddenly lurched to one side into deep sand and overturned.

Laxative for Women Free

There is a great difference in the purposes to which a laxative should be put. Tablets and pills, salts, etc., are usually violent purgatives or cathartics, and altogether too powerful for the average person.

A woman at all times needs only a mild laxative—in fact, none other is needed by anyone, weak or strong though they may be, for the object is simply to move the bowels, and if a gentle laxative will do it, what is the use of a violent one?

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has earned a well-deserved vogue among women and children and old folks—people who must necessarily be careful of what they take.

It is a liquid laxative tonic and admittedly the greatest stomach, liver and bowel remedy before the American people. The price is only 50 cents or $1 a bottle, as it comes in both sizes, and all druggists sell it. Its pleasant taste and gentle action make it an ideal remedy for women in constipation, torpid liver, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn and such like digestive complaints. Its use for a short time will remove the trouble entirely so that future medication will be unnecessary. Its tonic properties build up the stomach and intestinal muscles so that they act naturally again. That this is so is the experience of many heads of families, like Mrs. Brannan, of Alverado, Va., Mrs. K. L. Stout, of Louisville, Ky., and numerous others; in fact, may, old Mr. Williams, Cal., as Mrs. J. M. Blackmore, of that place, writes, the whole town seems to be using it.

If the remedy is new to you and you want to make a trial of it before buying, send your name to the doctor, address as below and a free test bottle will be sent you. Then, if results are satisfactory you can buy it of your druggist.

If there is anything about your ailment that you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 405 Caldwell bldg., Monticello, Ill.

Says He Is Evelyn's Brother.

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 30.—Charged with idleness, a man representing himself as Howard Nesbit, brother of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, is being held by the local police pending a hearing before the court. Nesbit was arrested in a local pawnshop while trying to dispose of a ring.

Colonel William Morrison Dies.

Waterloo, Ill., Sept. 30.—Colonel William Ralle Morrison, pensioner of the Mexican war, ex-member of congress from Illinois, and for years a recognized leader of the Democratic party in the country, is dead at his home here, after a long illness, aged eighty-five.

VICTIM OF STRANGE ATTACK

Woman Was Bound, Gagged and Strung Up by Wrists.

TWO MEN HER ASSAILANTS

Mrs. William Scott of Lansing Was Found in This Condition in Woodshed by Neighbor Who Was Passing and Heard Her Making Noise. No Clue to Assailants.

Lansing, Mich., Oct. 4.—Hearing a pounding in the woodshed of his neighbor, William B. Scott, a baker, at 816 Hickory street, early in the morning, Harry B. Ketchum, who arose at 4 o'clock to go hunting, knocked on the front door of the house and aroused Scott. They went to the woodshed and found Mrs. Scott, partially dressed, bound and gagged, and hanging by her wrists from a rafter. The woman's toes just touched the floor, and it was by swinging her body and striking her feet against the wall that she had attracted the attention of Ketchum.

When the woman had been cut down she told a story of having been attacked by two men. Leaving her bed at 3 o'clock, Mrs. Scott said she had started through the shed when the men seized her from behind, put the gag in her mouth and bound her with the clothesline, part of which had been used to tie her wrists to the rafter.

Lost Consciousness.

Mrs. Scott says she was so frightened that she lost consciousness. She did not revive until an hour later. Then, finding herself unable to call for help, she had conceived the idea of swinging her body. But it was only after another hour that Ketchum heard the noise and aroused her husband. Though suffering severely from the treatment, Mrs. Scott is recovering rapidly, and physicians say there will be no ill effects.

She stated that she was unable to see the faces of the men, but that one was short and the other tall and that both wore long coats and small caps. No evidences of robbery were found in the house, and the men evidently left soon after the woman was attacked. The clothesline was identified as one purchased Saturday night by Ketchum, and which the latter says was left in his woodshed.

The officers are working on the case and have telephoned descriptions of the men to surrounding cities and towns, but as yet no clue has been discovered as to the identity of the assailants, nor their whereabouts.

Mrs. Scott is about forty years of age and, with her husband, has lived in the neighborhood several years. They bear excellent reputations.

IMPALED ON LIMB.

Boy Hung For Fifteen Minutes by the Throat.

Oscoda, Mich., Oct. 4.—Medos Chapron, Jr., aged ten years, son of a sawyer in a local mill, may die as the result of a peculiar accident while gathering butternuts. The lad fell from the top of a tree, ten feet to a limb, and his right leg was broken. From there he fell to a broken limb ten feet lower and struck it in such a manner that the jagged end impaled his throat. For nearly fifteen minutes he hung there until his young companions climbed the tree and rescued him.

The boy will die.

American Geographics to Get Look at Cook's Data First.

EXPLORER CHANGES HIS MIND

Makes Announcement on Reaching Washington—Crowd Greets Explorer on His Arrival There—Theater Where He Lectured Was Filled. May Go to South Pole.

Washington, Oct. 4.—Dr. Frederick Cook, the Arctic explorer, announced last night, after his arrival from New York to deliver his lecture, that he will acquiesce in the proposition that the University of Copenhagen be asked to waive its claim to a prior examination of his records in order that American geographic societies and other scientific bodies in this country may be enabled to review his data. He said he would be satisfied to have the decision of all these tribunals announced simultaneously.

Dr. Cook reached Washington at 8:40 o'clock last evening and was driven immediately to the New Willard hotel, where he had dinner and talked with the newspapermen before going to a local theater to deliver his lecture.

Frankness characterized Dr. Cook's answers to every question asked by the newspapermen, although the explorer added but little to what he already has said and published since he returned to civilization. When asked if he would in the future fit up an expedition to go to the South Pole, Dr. Cook said he was not yet prepared to answer on that point.

An enthusiastic crowd of several thousand people greeted Dr. Cook upon his arrival at the Union station, and the throngs, in their eagerness to see or get near him, was kept back with difficulty by several score of police and detectives.

Dr. Cook was lustily cheered as he passed through the streets, and when he arrived at the hotel he received a cordial greeting from the crowd that had gathered there.

Every available seat was occupied and standing room capacity was taxed when Dr. Cook began his lecture at the theater.

PREACHES ANOTHER SERMON

President Lays Cornerstone of Universalist Church in Portland.

Portland, Ore., Oct. 4.—President Taft Sunday preached another sermon. The scene changed from the Mormon tabernacle at Salt Lake City on Sunday last to the cornerstone laying of the First Universalist church in East Portland. The president handled the silver trowel and worked hard to see that the stone was properly adjusted.

The president referred to his various church experiences and in concluding said:

"No church in this country, however humble it may be, that preaches the doctrine of true religion and true morality will lack my earnest support to make it more influential whenever opportunity offers."

The president's train left at 6:10 p. m. over the Southern Pacific railway for Sacremento, Cal.

George W. Ayres, aged thirty-eight, the Pere Marquette construction foreman who was struck by a passenger train near Milford last week and hurled, badly injured, into a creek, is dead in Saginaw.

The strike of 150 miners of the Bliss mine at Saginaw who left their work last week Wednesday because they claimed that the mine screens were so badly worn that they feared an accident, has been settled.

Following a family quarrel, Mrs. Lena Terry, aged twenty-five, of Jackson, who has been married to Charles Terry less than a year, tried to end her life by drinking a large quantity of chloroform. A stomach pump saved her.

Ten states in the Union have set aside Oct. 12 as Columbus day. The states are New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Colorado, Illinois, Montana, Missouri, California and Michigan. The commemoration will be general throughout Michigan.

DEATH ENDS TRAGIC STORY

Feudist Leader Who Killed Indian Wife Dies in Prison.

INSANE OVER LOSS OF MONEY

"Old Hatcher" of West Virginia Victim of Strange Circumstances. Postmaster Sought to Get Wad of His Money by Deception—Was Caught, but Finally Escapes.

Washington, Oct. 4.—A story, tragic in its intensity and romantic in its sentiment, has been disclosed by postoffice inspectors regarding Harrison Hatfield of the family of feudists of that name, who died recently in the penitentiary at Moundsville, W. Va.

The narrative is of the loss by Hatfield of $2,854, of the recovery of part of the amount, of the murder of Mrs. Hatfield by her husband in a fit of insanity caused by the loss of his money and of the circumstances which finally brought to an end the career of one of the most remarkable feudists in the history of the country.

Leader of the Hatfields.

Harrison Hatfield lived near Horsepen, in the mountains of West Virginia. He was widely known as "Old Hatcher," and was a leader of the Hatfields in the McCoy-Hatfield feud, which amounted almost to civil war and disrupted several counties on the borders of West Virginia and Kentucky. One of his eyes was shot out during a raid which the Hatfields made into Kentucky several years ago. The Hatfields owned large areas of land in West Virginia from which they realized considerable money.

"Old Hatcher" deposited $2,854 in the Guyan Valley bank at Logan, W. Va. Subsequently, having need of the money, he authorized Alexander H. Trent, postmaster at Horsepen, to direct the bank to forward to him the money by registered mail. Hatfield called at the postoffice repeatedly for the registered letter, but when it arrived, on April 24, 1907, he had left the office only a short time before to assist an intoxicated friend, who could not sit astride his mule alone. Hatfield directed Postmaster Trent to take special care of the letter, lest it be destroyed by fire in the postoffice.

Early on the following morning the postoffice was destroyed by fire, the contents of the safe alone being saved. Hatfield's letter was not in the safe. Postmaster Trent declared he had placed the letter with the ordinary mail, all of which was burned.

Uncle Sam Investigated.

An investigation of the fire and of the disapperance of the letter was made by postoffice inspectors. It was discovered that Postmaster Trent had obtained a typewriter from a Chicago concern by fraudulent representations, to which he confessed. Later, Postmaster Trent and his father were indicted for having stolen the registered letter. Postmaster Trent finally confessed to the theft and made propositions looking to the refunding of the money. He produced from a jar hidden under his barn the sum of $1,280, which with $500 obtained from his bondsmen was eventually turned over to Hatfield. Trent was convicted of the crime, but escaped from jail and now is a fugitive from justice.

Becoming insane from worry over the loss of his money and the sudden elation at the recovery of a considerable part of it, Harrison Hatfield poisoned his wife, who was an Indian woman. He was sentenced to the penitentiary for life, and there he died only a few days ago. It was not until his death that the postoffice inspectors felt justified in revealing all the facts respecting the case.

ST. LOUIS CELEBRATES.

Centennial Week Inaugurated With Noise of Whistles and Bells.

St. Louis, Oct. 4.—Centennial week was inaugurated here Sunday by the blowing of whistles, ringing of church bells and services in the churches. In the afternoon 15,000 children gathered in the Coliseum and sang patriotic and religious songs.

Twenty thousand Catholic children gathered at the same time for services at the statue of St. Louis in Forest Park, where Archbishop John G. Glennon made an address.

Many who did not attend the religious services flocked to the levee to inspect the torpedo boat flotilla, and the aero grounds drew thousands who viewed the airships and balloons which are ready for the races. Prizes have been offered for time and distance, and the entrants hope to win the Lahm cup by exceeding 475 miles.

BALLOONS SAIL AWAY FOR BENNETT CUP

Thousands See Them Leave Zurich.

Zurich, Switzerland, Oct. 4.—A beautiful sunny autumn Sunday made the start in the international balloon race for the Gordon Bennett cup a splendid success, and more than 200,000 persons watched the seventeen balloons soar skyward and disappear on the horizon in what is likely to prove a stirring battle to cover the greatest distance.

The wishes of the balloonists, as voiced by the American entrant, Edgar W. Mix of Columbus, O., were realized in a measure, for the southwest wind which was blowing at the start seemed certain to carry them towards Russia instead of to the sea, and thus a genuine test will be afforded of the endurance of the balloons and the skill of the pilots, instead of, as in the past, premature descents to avoid a plunge in the sea.

Perfect organization enabled the carrying out of the program without a hitch. Edgar Mix was the sole representative of the United States. He was elated at the prospects.

The Italian balloon, piloted by Signor Piacenza, was the first to leave, the others following at five minute intervals.

CAR AXLE BROKE.

Two Killed and Eight Hurt In Pittsburg Street Car Accident.

Pittsburg, Oct. 4.—Two men were killed and eight other passengers were seriously injured, three of them probably fatally, in a street car accident here. The dead are:

JAMES DUFFY, aged twenty-six.

MARTIN O'ROURKE, aged thirty-five.

The accident occured in the fashionable residence section of the east end, on the Butler and Negley avenues division of the Pittsburg Railways company. While a car on this line was rounding a corner at a fair rate of speed, one of the axles broke.

POPE IS ILL.

Audiences With His Holiness Have Been Suspended.

Rome, Oct. 4.—For several days past the pope has been sick, but he continued to see visitors, hoping to overcome what he considers a slight indisposition. He received in audience one of the archbishops, who noticed that the pope appeared tired and languid.

After the audience was ended the symptoms became aggravated, there being considerable pain and swelling in the leg, which indicated a recurrence of the gout. Although the attack is slight, the pope's doctors have insisted upon complete rest, and the audiences have been suspended.

[illegible] a number [illegible] who didn't seem to have [illegible] to do were lounging in the chairs in front of a leading hotel. Several traveling men came out of the hotel and, finding all of the chairs occupied, looked and spoke things that wouldn't go well in polite society.

"Let's dump a few of them out," suggested one.

"Hold on a minute," replied another. "Watch me get a chair." With that he walked over to one of the loungers and in the most courteous way said, "Will you please tell me whether that is a drug store across the street?"

"No," replied the lounger; "that's a bank."

"Oh, is it? Well, say, what is that nice big building just down the street there, two corners away?"

"That's the postoffice," was the reply.

"You live in this charming city, then?" asked the drummer.

"I do," said the lounger.

"Well, then," replied the traveling man, "I'm a guest at this hotel and paying for accommodations. Suppose you get up and give me that chair."

He got the chair.—Kansas City Journal.

Suspicious.

The seeing New York automobile was moving through the financial district. "This is Wall street," announced the man with the megaphone. "Keep your hand on your purse, Hiram!" hoarsely whispered a lady from the open country to her husband.

Premonition.

Little Willie—Say, pa, what is the meaning of premonition?

Pa—Premonition, my son, is what ails people who are afflicted with the "I told you so" habit.—Chicago News.

Kelvin as Damocles.

A characteristic always of Lord Kelvin was his absolute faith in figures, and this ruling passion once led to his experiment as a Damocles. When he once solved a problem in mathematics, he was willing to stake upon its correctness not only his reputation, but, if necessary, his life. Taking an immense heavy cannon ball, he calculated with the utmost accuracy the size of the smallest wire which would bear the weight of the load of iron. He then procured a length of wire of just the requisite strength and to prove the truth of his figuring had the cannon ball suspended over his lecturing platform at the very spot where it would be most likely to strike and crush him should the wire give way, and it remained there for weeks.

His Air Tight Compartment.

The passenger who was crossing the Atlantic for the first time timidly approached the pompous purser.

"Is it true, sir," he said, "that this whole ship is divided into air tight compartments?"

"True as gospel," replied the purser in surprise.

"Then," remarked the passenger gloomily, "I guess I'll have to put up with the one I'm occupying if I can't better myself!"

Muddled.

She—Of course I'm not as old as you think I am.

He—I hope not—I mean you can't be that is—how old are you?—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Difficult Task.

CHAPTER III.

MME. ANGOT.

THREE nights later, as Hillard and Merrihew were dining together at the club, the steward came into the grill room and swept his placid eye over the groups of diners. Singling out Hillard, he came solemnly down to the corner table and laid a blue letter at the side of Hillard's plate.

"I did not see you when you came in, sir," said the steward, his voice as solemn as his step. "The letter arrived yesterday."

"Thank you, Thomas." With no small difficulty Hillard composed his face and repressed the eagerness in his eyes. She had seen; she had written; the letter lay under his hand! Who said that romance had taken flight? True, the reading of the letter might disillusion him, but always would there be that vision and the voice coming out of the fog. Nonchalantly he turned the letter face downward and went on with the meal.

"I did not know that your mail came to the club," said Merrihew.

"It doesn't. Only rarely a letter drifts this way."

"Well, go on and read it. Don't let me keep you from it. Some charmer, I'll wager. Here I pour all my adventures into your ear, and I on my side never so much as get a hint of yours. Go on, read it."

"Adventures, fiddlesticks! The letter can wait. It is probably a bill."

"A bill in a fashionable envelope like that?"

Hillard only smiled, tipped the cradle and refilled Merrihew's glass with some excellent Romanee Conti. "When does Kitty sail?" he asked after awhile of silence.

"A week from this Saturday, Feb. 2. What the deuce did you bring up that for? I've been trying to forget it."

"Where do they land?"

"Naples. They open in Rome the first week in March. All the arrangements are complete." After coffee Merrihew pushed back his chair. "I'll reserve a table in the billiard room while you read your letter."

"I'll be with you shortly," gratefully.

So with the inevitable black cigar between his teeth Merrihew sauntered off toward the billiard room, while Hillard picked up his letter and studied it. His fingers trembled slightly as he tore open the envelope. The handwriting, the paper, the modest size, all these pointed to a woman of culture and refinement. But a subtle spirit of irony pervaded it all. She would never have answered his printed inquiry had she not laughed over it, for pinned to the top of the letter was the clipping, the stupid, banal clipping: "Will the lady who sang from 'Mme. Angot' communicate with gentleman who leaned out of the window? J. H., Burgomaster club." There was neither a formal beginning nor a formal ending, only four crisp lines. But these implied one thing and distinctly—the writer had no desire for further communication "with gentleman who leaned out of the window." He read and reread slowly:

I am sorry to learn that my singing disturbed you. There was a reason. At that particular moment I was happy.

That was all. It was enough. She had laughed. She was a lady humorously inclined, not to say mischievous. A comic opera star would have sent her press agent round to see what advertising could be got out of the incident; a prima donna would have appealed to her primo tenor for the same purpose. A gentlewoman surely; moreover, she lived within the radius, the official radius, of the Madison square branch of the postoffice, for such was the postmark. Common sense urged him to dismiss the whole affair and laugh over it as "the lady in the fog" had done. But common sense often goes about with a pedant's strut and is something to avoid on occasions. Here was a harmless pastime to pursue, common sense notwithstanding. The vein of romance in him was strong, and all the commercial blood of his father could not subjugate it. He rang for paper and a messenger and wrote: "Mme. Angot—There is a letter for you in the mail department of this office." This time his initials were not necessary. Once the message was on its way he sought Merrihew, whom he found knocking the balls about in a spiritless manner.

"A hundred to seventy-five, Dan."

"For what?"

"For the mere fun of the game, of course."

"Make it cigars, just to add interest."

The Poor Bridegroom.

"Even the English language emphasizes the insignificance of a man at his own wedding," said the prospective bridegroom disconsolately. There isn't an independent word to designate him. He is merely called the groom of the bride, as if he were just about on a level with the bridesmaids and a little below the maid of honor. Best man, of course, means the bridegroom's best man, but the phrase itself tends to exalt this individual at the expense of his superior.

"Then there's no adjective to describe what pertains to the male half of the affair. You can't speak of the 'bridegroomal' trousers or necktie. On the other hand, 'bridal' applies not only to the possessions of the girl, but to what relates to both of them equally, like the trip and the bridal chamber. The very words 'matrimony' and 'matrimonial' are from the feminine side only. 'Patrimony' has nothing to do with the nuptials. It applies only to wealth and signifies that a man's part in the affair is to get out and hustle for the cash."—Philadelphia Ledger.

"Haven't noticed. What do you think of Kitty?"

"Charming."

"And the photo isn't a marker."

"Possibly not."

"Lord, if I could only hibernate for three months like a bear! My capital might then readjust itself if left alone that length of time."

"See you at the club tonight," laughed Hillard.

They nodded pleasantly and took their separate ways. Merrihew stood very high in Hillard's regard. He was a lovable fellow, and there was something kindred in his soul and Hillard's, possibly the spirit of romance. What drew them together perhaps more than anything else was their mutual love of outdoor pleasures. Take two men and put them on good horses, send them forth into the wilds to face all inconveniences, and if they are not fast friends at the end of the journey they never will be.

For all his aversion to cards there was a bit of the gamester in Hillard, as once in his office he decided on the fall of a coin not to withdraw his personal from the paper. He was quite positive that he would never hear that voice again; but, having thrown his dice, he would let them lie.

Now, at 11 o'clock that same morning two distinguished Italians sat down to breakfast in one of the fashionable hotels. The one nor the other had ever heard of Hillard. They did not even know that such a person existed, and yet serenely unconscious one was casting his life line, as the palmist would say, across Hillard's. The knots and tangles were to come later.

"The coffee in this country is abominable!" growled one.

The waiter smiled covertly behind his hand. These Italians and these Germans! Why, there is only one place in the world where both the aroma and the flavor of coffee are preserved, and it is not, decidedly not, in Italy or Germany. And if his tip exceeded 10 cents he would be vastly surprised. The Italian never wastes on necessities a penny which can be applied to the gaming tables. And these two were talking about Monte Carlo and Ostend.

The younger of the two was a very handsome man, tall, slender and nervous, the Venetian type, his black eyes, keen and roving, suggesting a hasty temper. The mouth, partly hidden under a graceful military mustache, was thin lipped, the mouth of a man who was always master of his vices. From his right cheek bone to the corner of his mouth ran a scar, very well healed. And the American imagination might readily have pictured villas, maids in durance vile and sword thrusts under the moonlight. But the waiter, who had served his time in a foreign army, knew no foil or rapier could have made such a scar; more probably the saber.

His companion was equally picturesque. With white head and iron gray beard, he wore in his buttonhole a tiny bow of ribbon, the badge of foreign service.

"I'm afraid, Enrico, that you have brought me to America on a useless adventure," said the diplomat.

"She is here in New York, and I shall find her. I must have money—must! I owe you the incredible amount of 100,000 lire. There are millions under my hand, and I cannot touch a penny."

"Do not let your debt to me worry you."

"You are so very good, Giuseppe!"

"Have we not grown up together? Sometimes I think I am partly to blame for your extravagance. But a friend is a friend or he is not."

"But he who borrows from his friend loses him. Observe how I am placed. It is maddening. I have had a dozen opportunities to marry riches. This millstone is eternally round my neck. I have gone through my part of the fortune which was left us independently. She has all of hers, and that is why she is so strong. I am absolutely helpless."

"Poor friend! These American women! They all believe that a man must have no peccadillos once he has signed the marriage contract. Body of Bacchus! The sacrament does not make a man less human than he was before. But this one is clever. She might be Italian born."

"Her mother was Italian. It is the schooling in this country that has made her so clever. The only thing Italian about her is her hatred. She is my countrywoman there. Without her consent I can touch nothing, and if I divorce her—pouff!—all goes to the state. Sometimes I long to get my two hands round her white throat. One mistake, one little mistake! I am willing to swear that she loved me in the beginning. And I was a fool not to profit by this sentiment. Give me patience, patience. If I say to her, 'So much and you may have your freedom, there is always that cursed will. The crown of Italy will never withdraw its hand. No. With his wife's family on his hands, especially her brother, the king will never waive his rights."

"And, remember, we have but ten days."

"We shall not find time heavy. I know a few rich butchers and grocers who call themselves the aristocracy. And some of them play bridge and ecarte."

The diplomat smiled in anticipation.

"I have followed her step by step to the boat at Naples. She is here. She will not be hard to find. She has wealthy friends."

"You say she is beautiful?"

"Yes, and a beautiful woman cannot hide. Think of it! Chateaux and villas and splendid rents, all waiting to be gormanized by the state! Let us get out into the air before I become excited and forget where I am."

[illegible] stepped forward with the coats and hats.

"I long to get my hands around her throat!"

angel! Tell your Kitty to strike for a return ticket to America before she leaves."

"You think it's as bad as that?"

"Look on me as a prophet of evil, if you like, but truthful."

"I'll see that Kitty gets her ticket." Merrihew snapped the case of his watch and drew his legs from under the table. "I lost a hundred last night too."

"After that I suppose nothing worse can happen," said Hillard cheerily. "You will play, for all my advice."

"It's better to give than receive—that," replied Merrihew philosophically. "I've a good mind to follow the company. I've always had a hankering to beat it up at Monte Carlo. A cast throw, eh? Win or lose and quit. I might win."

"And then again you mightn't. But the next time I go to Italy I want you to go with me. You're good company, and for the pleasure of listening to your jokes I'll gladly foot the bills, and you may gamble your letter of credit to your heart's content. I must be off. CLUBS.

OPENING MEETINGS OF WIT AND WISDOM, MONDAY CLUB AND RESEARCH CLUB.

Receptions held by Monday Club and Research Circle.

Travel Evening by Wit and Wisdom.

This week will mark the beginning of club life in Tecumseh of the season of 1909-10, there being a number of first meetings announced for this week.

The Monday club held its opening meeting Monday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. James Cupples, with the new president, Mrs. Alfred James presiding.

The new year book of this club, which was distributed at this meeting is a material reminder of the steady growth of the club.

The booklet is bound in heavy cream paper on the cover of which is the monogram of the club in embossed gold with deckel edges. A veritable feast is promised through its pages, the subject of the year's work being Norway and Sweden.

The year book is a credit to the program committee which consisted of, Mrs. Howland, Mrs. Wright, Mrs. Alberts, Mrs. Albert Waring, Mrs. A. B. Smith and Mrs. Simmons.

The president, Mrs. James introducing the program said:

Norwegian music has a characteristic which has been described as rugged as the rocks on its shores, dismal as the darkness of its pineforests, and yet sunny as the meadows high in its mountains, clear as the crystal lakes, the valleys—such is the music of Norway.

The following program was rendered:

I. Mrs. Codling will now play for us, "Norwegian Bridal Procession"

II. Bird Song—Norwegian—Mrs. Moore.

III. Discoverer of the North Cape, Mrs. Shull.

IV. Song—Swedish—Miss Brush.

V. Description Reading—Mrs. Finch

VI. Quartette—"Last night the Nightingale Woke Me."—Norwegian.

The program was followed by a social hour and refreshments and everyone enjoyed the hospitality of Mrs. James Cupples, assisted by the Monday club.

If the year's work is as successful as the opening meeting, the club will certainly be all the new president could wish.

Before the program was rendered, Mrs. James gave an introductory on assuming the presidency of the Monday club.

Some are born to greatness, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrust upon them, as illustrating the last clause of this familiar saying, the speaker appears before you, elevated to the embarrassing heights of the Presidency of the Tecumseh Monday Club.

One of the alluring inducements presented for the acceptance of this high honor, was expressed in this manner:

"You will know a great deal more when you get through, than you do now," and the wonder has grown why such a statement should be made. Was there such visible evidence of what the poet calls, "The dream, the thirst, the wild desire, delerious, yet divine, to know," or was the need so great that one would jeopardize the welfare of this club, for the enlargement of one poor mind?

It is not best to examine too closely another's motives, but we now bear testimony of a consciousness that already has "knowledge come" though "wisdom may linger." But the opportunity a study club affords for acquiring information, is not to be lightly treated. One member has said, "I would not take $1,000 for what the Monday Club has given me," and if we may not always express values in dollars and cents, we can readily recognize the benefits of a mental stimulous and an enlarged vision.

The Clinton Culture club held their opening meeting Saturday afternoon at the home of their president Mrs. John T. Clark. A goodly number of members with their guests were in attendance.

The meeting was opened with a solo by Miss Beth Kimball. Mrs. Clark followed with the president's address which was full of good suggestions for the coming year's work. Mrs. Andrew Wilson of Tecumseh gave a little talk on "The Opportunities for Club Women in Small Villages." This consisted mostly of things which could be done for Civic Improvement.

The Roll Call—Summer Reminiscences was responded to by many of the members. Miss Virginia Halliday delightfully entertained the ladies with a recitation. The meeting closed with a song by Miss Ruth Halliday after which light refreshments were served, and the guests took their departure, all expressing their pleasure at the success of the first meeting of the year.

The opening meeting of the Wit and Wisdom Club was held at the home of B. Hurrey Monday evening with the new president J. H. Smith presiding.

The program consisted of talks on recent traveles in the east and west and was a very interesting one and was rendered as follows:

Piano Solo—Mrs. Hodges.

Welcome to the new members by President Smith.

St Lawerence River, Lake George, and Atlantic City—Dr. L. G. North.

Vocal solo—Mrs. D. S. Shaw.

The Pacific and its attractions—Mrs. J. H. Smith.

Vocal solo—Elmer Slayton.

Grand Canyon and Canadian Rockies—Rev. J. W. Dunning.

New York City—Mrs. North.

Alaskan-Ynkon Exposition—Mrs. Dunning.

Review of trip to Sault Lake City, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, Seattle and Spokane.

At the close of the program refreshments were served and the remainder of the evening was spent socially with Messers and Mesdames Howard and Hurrey as hosts and hostesses.

The opening meeting of the Research Circle has been postponed and will be held Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. O. Eaton.

The year book of the club is an attractive one. The study of the club this year is United States which promises to be a very interesting subject under the leadership of Mrs. Andrew Wilson, president.

JOHN W. HUGHES.

John Hughes, a well known resident of this village passed away Friday evening at 7:20 o'clock at his home on Pottawatamie street after only a few hours illness caused by a hemorrhage of the lungs brought on by a severe coughing spell.

Deceased was 70 years of age and spent nearly his entire life in this village. Besides his widow he leaves to mourn his death nine children, John Hughes of Detroit, Arthur Hughes of Dundee, Mrs. Kate Carlton of Adrian Mrs. Lillian Brown of Lima, Mrs. Emma Ruwalt, Mrs. Alta Snyder, Will, Roy and Raynor of Tecumseh.

The funeral services were conducted Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock from his late home. Rev. Shaw, pastor of the M. E. church officiated. Burial at Brookside.

How Standing Armies Originated.

The earliest European standing army was that of Macedonia, established about 338 B. C. by Philip, father of Alexander the Great. It was the second in the world's history, having been preceded only by that of Sesostris Pharaoh of Egypt, who organized a military caste about 1000 B. C. Of modern standing armies, that formed by the Turkish janizaries was first, being fully organized in 1362. It was a century later that the standing army of France, the earliest in western Europe, was established by Charles VII. in the shape of "compagnies d'ordonnance," numbering 9,000 men. Rivalry thereupon compelled the nations to adopt similar means of defense. In England a standing army proper was first established by Cromwell, but was disbanded under Charles II., with the exception of a few regiments called the guards, or household brigade. This was the nucleus of England's present army.

A Girl's Preparedness.

There is something very pitiful about a girl. She wears calico, but talks knowingly about the latest styles in silks. Her home is furnished plainly, but she knows the latest styles in furniture; she knows how the silverware should be arranged at dinners, the latest stitch for the marking of monograms on the finest table damask, the etiquette to be observed at a dinner, a reception or a ball, although she never attended anything more than a neighborhood party in her life. Her father's monthly income is not as large as the pin money a rich girl would spend in a day, but she knows what the rich girl should wear and buy to be in touch with the times. She is, in short, prepared at any time to marry a rich man and become a society leader.—Atchison Globe.

A Famous Poem.

J. C. Francis, the publisher of London Notes and Queries, has brought out a volume of reminiscences. One of his quotations records the editorial rejection of Campbell's "Hohenlinden" by the Greenock Advertiser. It runs thus:

T. C.—The lines commencing "On Linden when the sun was low" are not up to our standard. Poetry is evidently not T. C.'s forte.

The Sneeze.

There exists an ancient semi-medical statement which tells us that the sneeze is healthy and should not be suppressed. It is one of those stock sayings which are always uttered by laymen on the vague authority of some traditional doctor whose name is suppressed in favor of the adjective "eminent." It is one of the things about which you mentally pledge yourself to ask your own doctor, but when it comes to the point you never do. Either you do not get the opportunity or if a chance does present itself an inner voice seems to warn you to let it be until some future occasion. To our own mind the odds are that sneezing is a wholesome habit, for it is an infrequent one. Of course there are people who can sneeze and not look ridiculous, but they are few. Any one caught in the act of trying to suppress a sneeze is a terrible addition to the landscape, and if you want to sneeze and cannot what gargoyle could hold a candle to you? That hideously contorted face, that quivering mouth and that deflected nostril—why, your countenance is something worth building two cathedrals round! It is as though some mad potter were gripping your facial clay and wrenching it this way and that to amuse his frenzied humor. Have you ever heard a succession of half a dozen sneezes? It is an experience that has an extraordinarily irritating effect.—London Globe.

A Spa's Curious Origin.

The discovery of the famous Woodhall spa in Lincolnshire was very curious. Just about a hundred years ago a shaft was sunk in search of coal, but the effort had to be abandoned owing to a rush of water. In time the water found its way into a small brook, and in due course the inhabitants began to speak of the curative powers of the stream. Science investigated the mystery and discovered that the water in the coalless shaft was richly impregnated with various salts and bromine and iodine. Geologists expressed the interesting opinion that ages ago the place was the sandy bed of a shallow lagoon or bay of a tropical sea where seaweeds of giant growth abounded. A mighty convulsion of nature lowered the sea bed, a great river flowed over the place, and in time its debris was formed into a mass of spongy rock or sandstone. Forcing itself through this mass at great pressure some 600 feet below the ground, the water now extracts the constituents of the original seaweed.—London Family Herald.

Olden Tea Table Etiquette.

Tea table etiquette was somewhat complicated in the days of that "hardened and shameless tea drinker," Dr. Johnson, when many people thought nothing of drinking ten or twelve cups at a sitting. It was considered proper for the cups and saucers of a party of tea drinkers to be all passed up to the hostess in one batch when replenishment was considered necessary, and in order that each person might be sure of getting back the right cup the teaspoons were pumbered. When the cups were passed up those who did not require any more were supposed to place the spoon in the cup. And this writer remembers a very ancient dame teaching a small boy to place his spoon in his cup after the first cup had been emptied. He wondered for the reason. Now he knows that tea was once very expensive, and little boys were not expected to ask again.—St. James' Gazette.

Private Hospital Guests.

"Hello, old man! Didn't know you were in New York? Where are you stopping?"

"Glad to see you. I'm at a private hospital uptown."

"Private hospital! Why, I'm sorry. What's the trouble?"

"No trouble at all myself. My sister went there for an operation, and I'm staying with her. There are plenty of patients there with relatives or friends. We pay high prices, of course, but the rooms are light, comfortable and clean, and we can order anything on earth we want for meals and get it. Things are served to us as though we were invalids, and there's no kick coming, I'll tell you that. And we can have as much company as we wish for meals at a dollar and a half a head."—New York Press.

Jap Nobility View Falls.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Oct. 4.—Prince and Princess Kuni of Japan arrived here today from New York to view the Niagara Falls.

As four-fifths of the oil contained in lavender is contained in the bloom the harvest takes place just before the flower begins to fade at the end of August. The oil is distilled by means of steam, which is compelled to penetrate the closely packed lavender, afterward being drawn off in pipes that run through cold water. In this manner the steam is reconverted into water, but the process of passing through the lavender has extracted the oil, which floats on the surface of the water as it runs into glass jars down below. These jars have sprouts in the center, thus enabling the water to run out while the oil collects above the level of the exit. In this the first stage the oil is of a brownish blue tint, and it now has to be refined by passing once more through water. Thus all impurities are removed, and the oil runs out white, save for a very pale blue color similar to that observed in paraffin. Three pounds of oil will make thirty gallons of the perfume. The majority of ladies would be surprised if they were informed that a bottle of lavender water contains but about a thimbleful of pure oil, for a larger proportion would not only render the water too strong for use, but would burn holes through the handkerchief wherever the scent touched it.—London Standard.

Good Reason.

"Well, Johnny, do you wish you were a grownup man?"

"You bet I do."

"But why?"

"So people wouldn't ask me such fool questions."—Exchange.

In making appropriations for the coming year, the Adrian city council cut expenses all along the line, the reduction from last year's amount being about $12,000. "The Courier prints all the news fit to print."

The above was clipped from the Clinton Courier and is a bit of advice that would be well for more editors to bear in mind In their eagerness for news they often forget to be gentlemen. We take the following from the Clinton Courier:

It has been truthfully said there are times when even the "worm will turn" to protect itself. Human nature, in general, will endure much but there is a limit, which was forcibly illustrated Tuesday evening when one of our young business men "polished up" the editor of the Local for his low and cowardly insinuations in his paper, and that too, after he had been requested not to do so. Clinton Manhood is of a high order and will endure much, but will not stand abuse. We deplore such scenes in our midst but there are limits beyond which may be posted the sign—Danger.

AMUSEMENTS.

This Show Girl presented at the Bradley opera house last evening was greeted by a crowded house, which was largely due to the popularity of Mr. Ellsworth Ellis a talented young singer from this place. The audience were well pleased with the performance and the singing and dancing by the chorus was very good. Mr. Ellis being encored repeatedly.

OF INTEREST TO TAX PAYERS.

State Taxes Soar--$1,700,000 Higher Than Last Year.

If the taxpayer finds his taxes have been increased when he walks up to pay the assessment for the year 1909, he must not take it for granted that local conditions are responsible for the raise. Take your receipt and compare item for item with those on the receipt given you by the treasurer when you settled your taxes for 1908. Auditor General Fuller has completed the apportionment of state taxes for the several counties of the state to pay, and the total amount is $5,929,719.74, as compared with $4,193,422.93 last year. The state taxes have been increased $1,700,000, and to suggest that each property owner must prepare to pay his share of that magnificent sum when the time comes.

FIND PEARLS AT ADDISON.

Bean Creek Clams Produce Some Good Ones.

ADDISON, Mich., Oct. 2.—During the present summer while Chauncey Nichols and two daughters were strolling down Bean creek, which runs through the village and is the outlet of Devil's and Round lake they picked up some clams. On opening some of them they found pearls and Mr. Nichols who is a jeweler here became interested and they gathered quite a quantity. These were opened and found to contain 91 pearls and pearl slugs. Mr. Nichols sent these to a New York expert who reports that they are genuine. A few of the pearls were sufficiently round to be of value as ring or pin sets, but only a few of this number were usable. The experts declares that he has no doubt that very valuable pearls could be found in this creek. It appears that pearls are caused by a disease in clams found only in running streams and where there is a certain ingredient in the water, which is gathered and deposited within their shells. Bean Creek possesses the requisite properties and who can tell what a systematic search of the creek bed might bring forth. Pearls found in a Wisconsin creek have been sold as high as $500 and even $1,500, says Mr. Nichols.—Adrian Telegram.

Wanted—A competitor to fight against Frank Lusty.

Mr. Lusty is noted for his strength, and a reward would willingly be offered to one who can win over him.

Great consternation in the High School building. The pupils in the different rooms were surprised to hear an explosion followed by a scream, in the Laboratory. For further information, inquire of Misses Service and Wood.

A new class is being organized in Manual training. The art of brass work, stenciling, cutting leather, and burning wood will be taught. The class is to be conducted by Miss Nellie D. Mingay, one of Tecumseh's most capable young women. The class is a great addition to the school.

The senior class held a meeting Tuesday night to elect officers. They are;

President—Frank Snell.
Vice Pres.—Wilma Wood.
Sec. and Treas.—Josephine Hayden.
Editor—Marshal Reed.
Asst. editor—Myrna R. Service.

They hope to have 1910 class the largest yet.

Tecumseh High School can be justly proud of its foot-ball team of this year. Vern Rogers as quarter back is excellent, and the team is a gainer in having Vern fill this place. As back field, F. Lenardson, Earle Coller and G. Exelby are gaining fast. The line is slow in starting, but that also is being worked up to satisfaction. The team as a whole is excellent. The High School owes Earl Smith a great deal of credit in the way he has coached the boys, and the best way to show their thanks, both to him and the boys is to turn out and help. Help by attending each game, and cheer them along. They need it and it won't hurt you. They also need money, and if you, business men, can help in that way, do it, and it will be duly appreciated by the Tecumseh High School Foot Ball Team.

FROM WASHINGTON.

A chicken has no real friends until after the cook gets through with it.

Washington—First in war, first in peace, but last in the base ball race.

From Beantown to the Golden West and back through possum land. Here's hoping, Mr. President.

One solution of the difficulty would be to rope off a ring around the north pole and provide employes with gloves.

"Who owns the Pole?" inquires the Boston Herald. Commander Peary appears to think he does—exclusively.

Cannon says that this is a government by the people. Many of those congressmen wonder if he really does think so.

A judge in Washington, D. C., has decided that the use of the word "hell" does not constitute profanity. Another evil result of the influence of Speaker Cannon.

"Uncle Joe" Cannon says he believes in Dr. Cook. This would seem to put it up to the Cookities to get Mr. Aldrich to come out for Peary, and thus even up the handicaps.

It will not be long before Theodore Roosevelt is on the ground to contribute some valuable hints on that much discussed question, "What shall we do with our ex-Presidents?"

PLEASANT WAY TO CURE CATARRH.

Poor deluded victims!

Continually sprinkling and spraying and stomach dosing.

What are you doing it for?

Trying to kill the catarrh germs?

Might just as well try to kill a cat with fresh milk.

Sticking a piece of chewing gum in the upper left hand corner of the right ear would slaughter just as many germs.

You can't kill the germs that cause catarrh unless you get where they are.

You can get where the germs are by breathing Hyomei, the powerful yet soothing antiseptic, which is prepared especially to kill catarrh germs.

Just breathe it in, that's all. It gives joyful relief in five minutes. It is guaranteed by C. A. Wright & Son to cure catarrh, or money back.

It is sold by leading druggists everywhere. A complete outfit, including inhaler, costs $1.00. Extra bottles, 50c. Cures sore throat, coughs and colds.

"I take especial pride in recommending Hyomei to asthmatic sufferers, as I know by experience that it is a remedy that cures. I have not since using Hyomei had any recurrence of asthma."—Mrs. Wm. Burton, Owosso, Mich., June 22, 1909.

THE CHILDREN LIKE IT
KENNEDY'S LAXATIVE
COUGH SYRUP

Go to the blood if you would drive out Rheumatism. A Wisconsin physician Dr. Shoop, does this with his Rheumatic Remedy—and with seeming success. Rub-ons, says the doctor, never did cure Rheumatism. It is more than skin deep—it is constitutional, always, because of this principle, Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy is perhaps the most popular in existence. It goes by word of mouth from one to another, everywhere. Grateful patients gladly spread results. It is an act of humanity to tell the sick of a way to health. Tell some sick one. Sold by C. A. Wright & Son.

Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the idea of treating the cause, rather than the effect, would come into practice. A tiny, inside, hidden nerve, says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branche also goes to the Heart, and one to the kidneys. When these "inside nerves" fail, then the organs must falter. Dr. Shoop's Restoratives is directed specifically to these failing nerves. TO AILING WOMEN

A Little Sound Advice Will Help Many a Sufferer in Tecumseh.

No woman can be healthy and well if the kidneys are sick. Poisons that pass off in the secretions when the kidneys are well, are retained in the body when the kidneys are sick. Kidneys and bladder become inflamed and swollen and worse troubles quickly follow. This is often the true cause of bearing-down pains, lameness, backache, sideache, etc. Uric poisoning also causes headaches, dizzy spells, languor, nervousness and rheumatic pains.

When suffering so, try Doan's Kidney Pills, a remedy that cures sick kidneys. You will get better as the kidneys get better, and health will return when the kidneys are well. Let a Tecumseh woman tell you about Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. George Burrough, W. Potawatamie St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "About a year ago my health began to fail and my whole body began to ache. My kidneys did not act as they should and my back ached a great deal. Knowing of persons who had used Doan's Kidney Pills for similar troubles with the best of results, I procured a box at C. A. Wright & Son's drug store. A few weeks after beginning their use I felt much better and at the present time I am free from the aches and pains. I willingly recommend Doan's Kidney Pills as I know that they are reliable." Sold by C. A. Wright & Son.

PAIN

Pain in the head—pain anywhere, has its cause. Pain is congestion, pain is blood pressure—nothing else usually. At least, so says Dr. Shoop, and he proves it he has created a little pink tablet. That tablet—called Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablet—coaxes blood pressure away from pain centers. Its effects is charming, pleasingly delightful. Gently though safely, it surely equalizes the blood circulation.
If you have a headache, it's blood pressure.
If it's painful periods with women, same cause.
If you are sleepless, restless, nervous, it's blood congestion—blood pressure. That surely is a certainty, for Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets stop it in 20 minutes, and the tablets simply distribute the unnatural blood pressure.
Bruise your finger, and doesn't it get red, and swell, and pain you? Of course it does. It's congestion, blood pressure. You'll find it where pain is—always. It's simply Common Sense.
We sell at 25 cents, and cheerfully recommend

MAKES SHORT FLIGHT.

But Curtiss Found Wind Too Strong on Governors Island.

New York, Oct. 4.—In a wind more treacherous than an aeroplane can well withstand, Glenn H. Curtiss started out to fly from Governors Island, in New York harbor, just after sunset last evening. At sea level it appeared that there had come a lull in the strong wind, but when the aviator got into the air he found the breeze still fitful, and, after a minute aloft, during which time the aeroplane was tilted at dangerous angles, he came safely to the ground.

Wilbur Wright, whose contract requires him to attempt flights when weather conditoins permit up to Oct. 9, did not appear on Governors Island yesterday.

INDIANS STARVING.

Drouth Has Pauperized Several Thousand Cherokees.

Muskogee, Okla., Oct. 4.—John D. Benedict, superintendent of Indian schools, who has just returned from the Flint Hill district, reports that several thousand full-blood Cherokee Indians are facing starvation because of the unprecedented drouth this year.

The Indians have scarcely anything to eat and say they cannot send their children to school because they have not money to buy them clothing.

Some Consolation.

A detective once said it was all wrong to suppose that the professional housebreaker works with coolness and calculation. On the contrary, he usually works in terror and haste, takes too much swag from one room and too little from another, and sometimes overlooks the silver in carrying off the electro.—London Saturday Review.

CELEBRATING TODAY.

Yonkers and Poughkeepsie Carrying Out Their Share of Festivities.

Yonkers, N. Y., Oct. 4.—This city today is carrying out its share of the Hudson-Fulton celebration. A big military parade took place this morning, Governor Hughes and other dignitaries reviewing it. A large crowd is here. The governor left later for Poughkeepsie.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Oct. 4.—Poughkeepsie, like Yonkers, is engaged in performing her share in the Hudson-Fulton celebration. The Half Moon and Clermont, with their naval escort, are at anchor here. Governor Hughes arrived about noon from Yonkers. A banquet is to be given here tonight in his honor.

On Tuesday the naval squadron, with the Half Moon and Clermont, will move on to Kingston.

A feature of the day there will be the unveiling of a monument to Sir Thomas Chambers, lord of the manor of Fox Hall and one of the founders of Kingston.

Catskill will be the scene of Wednesday's celebration. A special trip to the haunts of Rip Van Winkle in the Catskill mountains, under the auspices of the Holland society, has been arranged for the officers and men of the Half Moon.

Hudson will receive the flotilla on Thursday. The capital of the state will be reached on Friday, when the Half Moon and Clermon and their escort will be met down the river by a number of Albany boats and piloted to the city, where they will be saluted by the firing of 100 guns, the ringing of church and fire bells, the blowing of whistles and the blare of bands.

As the naval parade passes up the river on the following day, on the way to Troy, it will be saluted by the Watervliet arsenal and will be met further along by a flotilla from the city of Troy.

New York, Oct. 4.—The Hudson-Fulton celebration, after a week of pomp and pageantry in New York, has moved up the Hudson, and for another week the cities lying to the north will vie with each other in doing honor to the memory of Hudson and Fulton. The Half Moon and the Clermont, with their naval escort, now at anchor at Poughkeepsie, will continue their voyage northward, stopping at Kingston, Catskill, Hudson, Albany and Troy, where elaborate local celebrations have been planned.

Special religious services were held Sunday in the churches in Yonkers, Poughkeepsie, Kingston, Catskill and Hudson, while several pastors in New York drew lessons from the celebration.

During the week a military tournament by United Staes troops will be held at Camp Oliver on Island Park, near Albany. The troops will take part in Albany's parade, on Friday.

LEG BROKEN; RESCUES WIFE

Injured Man Lifts Heavy Automobile From Woman's Body.

Corunna, Mich., Oct. 4.—Pinned under an overturned automobile which started to burn following the explosion of the gasoline tank, Mrs. Herbert A. Sprague of this city was saved from being burned alive by her husband, who, though he had been thrown fifteen feet and had his right leg broken, managed to crawl to the car and lift it enough to free his wife. The latter was badly burned and bruised about the body, but will recover.

Sprague turned his machine suddenly to avoid a mud puddle. The car skidded and capsized in the ditch.

Soon after Sprague had rescued his wife from her perilous position, Dr. Elliot of Chesaning came along in his automobile and attended to the injuries of the couple. Then he brought them to their home here.

Real Sea Serpents.

In New Caledonia sea serpents are frequently seen and sometimes captured. They are curious creatures, the head being very small and scarcely distinguishable from the body and the tail being formed like an oar. In length they are generally between three and four feet. In the jaw there are tiny glands containing poison, but as the mouth is very small it is difficult for them to bite, and the natives handle them fearlessly. M. Kermogant, a European traveler, witnessed an experiment at Noumea which shows under certain conditions the sea serpent can do deadly work. A rat was caught in a trap, and its tongue was grasped by a pair of pinchers and placed in the mouth of a sea serpent. The serpent immediately bit it, and the rat died in four minutes.

Lopped It Off.

Towne—Has he sent you a check for your services? Browne—Yes, but it isn't for the amount I expected, although I sent him a bill. Towne—Your writing's bad. Maybe he didn't decipher the amount. Browne—I'm afraid he did decipher it. I wrote $100 very plainly, and he sent $10.—Philadelphia Press.

Elderly People Helped Free

The last years of life are the sweetest, and yet the most difficult to prolong. It is then that the greatest care is exercised in maintaining bodily health. But the chief care should always be with regard to the food you eat and whether you are digesting it properly. You should not allow yourself to become constipated.

No doubt you have tried salts and cathartic pills, purgative tablets, etc., and have come to the conclusion that they are violent in action and do but temporary good. Listen, then, to the voice of experience with regard to a wonderful and mild laxative, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is not new, only we are trying to find new friends for it.

A. A. Feits, of Johnston City, Ill., suffered from stomach trouble for six years and found his cure in Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. His wife uses it too with success. We could name hundreds of others. Some heard of it first through neighbors or friends; others through the doctor's offer to send any sufferer from a stomach, liver or bowel complaint a free sample bottle for trial, without charge. If you will send your name and address he will send you a trial bottle direct to your home. If it proves itself as he claims then continue the treatment by buying a 50-cent or $1 bottle of your druggist, as all of them sell it. Old people, like children, should look for purity, and it is well to mention that the purity of this remedy is vouched for with the U. S. government. Also, though a free bottle is sent to prove its merits, results are always guaranteed from the regular bottles bought of druggists, who will refund your money if it does not satisfy you. Send at least for the free test bottle today.

If there is anything about your ailment that you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 500 Caldwell bldg., Monticello, Ill.

TWO SAILORS DEAD.

One is Asphyxiated; the Other Drowns in Hudson.

New York, Oct. 4.—The first tragedies to mar the visit of thousands of United States sailors here during the past week have just occurred. Two "jackies" from the Montana were found in a gas filled room in an east side hotel. One of the sailors was asphyxiated, and the other was unconscious. Their caps bore the names of H. Daniels and M. Germaine.

Another sailor, Samuel E. Herman, fell overboard from the gunboat Castine at Poughkeepsie and was drowned in the Hudson.

The young men could not swim.

NO FURTHER DELAY.

Alleged Libelers of Roosevelt and Others Will Be Tried This Month.

Indianapolis, Sept. 30.—Judge Anderson of the United States district court has been refused an application by the department of justice for a recontinuation of the preliminary hearing of Delavan Smith and Charles R. Williams, proprietors of the Indianapolis News, who are under indictment by the federal grand jury of the District of Columbia, charged with having originally libelled Theodore Roosevelt, Douglas Robinson, William Nelson Cromwell, Charles P. Taft and others by intimating in published articles that there was corruption in the purchase of the Panama canal zone by the United States from the French companies.

The hearing was continued last June until Oct. 11. The government asked for a recontinuation until after the trial of the publishers of the New York World, on a similar charge, which trial is set for Oct. 20 in New York city. The application was made through Charles W. Miller, United States attorney for this district. Attorneys for Smith and Williams, who are opposing their removal to the District of Columbia for trial, protested against further delay in the proceedings, and the court upheld them.

Corsets

There has never been a corset or dress stiffener or any boning substance that has equalled in any degree, but one quality—lasting power—whalebone. If the boning substitute had lasting qualities, it lacked the flatness of whalebone or its lightness—it is conceded by all users of bone for dress purposes, that no bone has all the qualities compined in whalebone. After testing all other boning substitutes for high-grade corsets, we determined to continue staking our reputation on whalebone We added to our line this year the newest Redfern styles.

We also wish to say that on MONDAY, October 11th, Miss Alice Grieves comes to our store for a few days direct from the designing room of the makers of the REDFERN CORSETS. While discussing fashions with our customers and the corset model necessary to produce correct figures for current fashions she will explain the supremacy of WHALEBONE as a corset stiffener over all other boning.

You are cordially invited to visit our Corset Department during the stay of Miss Grieves.

A purchase is not expected. The models will be explained and you may be fitted to the model suited to your figure and given the style number, purchasing at your convienience.

MRS. HASKELL LOSES SUIT

Cant Recover Bonds Pledged by Her Husband.

The supreme court Tuesday morning gave a decision against Lillie E. Haskell, wife of Governor Charles N. Haskell, of Oklahoma, in favor of the Columbus Savings and Trust company, for $12,361.84.

Some years ago when Haskell was exploiting telephone enterprises in Texas, he borrowed $10,000 from the trust company on collateral bonds aggregating in face value $27,500. After part of the notes had been paid the trust company attempted to apply the collateral security to the payment of the balance when Mrs. Haskell claimed the bond as hers.

The court holds that they must be applied to the payment of the notes they were pledged for, no matter who owns them.—Toledo Blade.

ANNUAL REPORT

Of the Presbyterian Church for the Year 1909, and

The Good Results Obtained with the Satisfaction of being Free from Debt.

A largely attended and very enthusiastic meeting of the Presbyterian Society was held at the church Tuesday evening. Supper was served by the ladies from 5 to 7, and at 7 the meeting was called to order by T. A. Lowry, president of board of trustees. There was a fine feeling through the whole meeting, due largely to the fact of the excellent reports from all departments of church activity.

For the first time since 1903, the trustees were able to report the church practically free from debt. When the report was made out before the meeting, a balance of only $46 remained to be raised. Additional pledges and a special offering of $32, taken at the meeting entirely wiped it out.

Last year at the annual meeting the debt was about $700, which had been accumulating for years. The clearing of the debt is largely due to the special efforts made by the trustees, together with admirable help from the Ladies' Society, the latter paying $235 of the debt. The members have responded nobly to the trustees efforts, and the result has been great success.

The total receipts of the trustees for the year was $2615.98, and the disbursements $2579.09. There are still about $100 of unpaid pledges, all good on last year. The estimated budget for the coming year requires $2200. The thanks of the society were given J. H. Smith, treasurer, and the trustees by a rising vote.

The auxiliary societies all showed an excellent condition. The ladies society raised a total of $620.28. Mrs. S. W. Anderson, who has so successfully led the society, was unanimouss-re-elected president. This society has made a great record in the past few years.

The Missionary Circle showed $215.-91 raised for its missionary activities, having materially added increased pledges.

The secretary of the Bible school reported an enrollment of 443, as follows: Main school, 284; Home department, 104; Cradle roll, 55. The average attendance for the year in the main school has been 190.

The treasurer's report showed $353,-87, raised by the main school; $116 for mission activities and the remainder for local expenses. The Men's class offerings were $58.81, expended in the support of the Sunday evening service. The birthday fund for San Juan Presbyterian hospital is $26.00.

The report of the session showed the present church membership to be 471, with a gain during the year of 29, and losses 8. The pastor's report showed 76 sermons preached, 29 special addresses, 29 funerals, 5 weddings, and 684 pastoral calls. The treasurer of the session benevolences reported $697.80, raised by the church proper, for various mission activities, represented by the poor fund and the various boards of the church.

The young peoples' societies show a membership of 69.

A summary of all reports shows $1,055 raised for benevolences and $3,-532 for local expenses. This is by far the best showing in many years, and with all incumberances cleared away, the church is looking forward to a very prosperous year.

The printed reports from all departments will be handed out at the Sunday morning service, when it is desired that every member be present to join in the first service of the new year.

A NEW ART.

Art in music, painting or sculpture has been recognized during all ages.

Now there is a new art—so entirely new that few know of it at all and still fewer have mastered it. Like the older arts it aims at perfect illusion. It is "make believe" that, the unreal is real. This new art consists of nothing less than the rare ability to make just the right noise at just right time in just the right way. It requires as much skill, ingenuity and originality of the older arts. There is no prescribed course of study or school to inculcate it, for noise artists—like poets—are born, not made, and those few are affiliated with Lyman H. Howe's Travel Festival at the Bradley Opera House, Monday, October 11. You can't see them—yet you know they are there. Before you have fairly started to travel with Lyman H. Howe they make you forget that they are there. That's because they are real artists in the art of illusion. When you hear the patter of Arab and Moor in Algeria, the roar of the train coming through the Gorge du Var; the jingle of sleigh bells at the Montreal Winter Carnival; the din of battle during target practice at sea or the clanking of machinery in the steel works—you are made to feel the reality of every scene. It is "local color" combined with "local sounds" that give Mr. Howe's entertainment the atmosphere of actuality.

There is no sound that these noise artists cannot produce—save a noise like a sunset or moonrise and when those sublime views of calm and peace are revealed the noise artists remain silent while nature talks in a language of unspeakable beauty.

RECEPTION

TEACHERS AND FOREIGN PUPILS ENTERTAINED BY EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Two Hundred Guests Present--A Delightful Time.

Rooms Beautifully Decorated With Foliage.

The reception given by the Epworth League Tuesday evening to the pupils and teachers of the high school is declared by many to have been by far the best of its kind ever given in this village. The church parlors were a veritable place of enchantment. In furnishing they resembled a great reception hall with two dainty parlors adjoining. The decorations were in exquisite foliage of wild clematis, woodbine, sasafras, wild grape and shumac, while the arches hung with portiers of weeping willow. The glare of the electriliers was toned down to a twilight haze by a Japanese effect. A former U. of M. Student said it carried her back to sorority days.

The reception while informal was refined and dignified throughout Introductions were unnecessary as each person bore an identification tag provided as they entered the room. A splendid program of vocal and instumental music and elecution were rendered. Those taking part were Mesdames F. B. Wood, L. Kendrick, D. S. Shaw, Misses Shull, Mingay, Hanford and Messrs. Herbert Henderson, Elmer Brown and Lynn Rogers. Addresses or welcome were given by Miss Harriet Hurry, president of the League, and Rev. D. Stanley Shaw, pastor of the church.

The writing of a newspaper was a most interesting feature of the evening. The party was divided into groups and each group required to write something for the particular section assigned them. Here was a group writing editorials, there one writing personals, and so on covering Want Ads, Weather, Special Notices, Lost and Found, Social events, Sporting News, Club Notes, High School Notes, Marriage Licenses, etc. Every department of a metropolitan newspaper was represented. The copy was collected and read producing great merriment and laughter. Many of items were exceedingly clever. Among the Lost and Found occurred this indicative of the feeling of all present: Found—The best place in town to hdqe' a good time. Inquire of the Epworth League.

Refreshments were served to 25 at a time in an adjoining room. The first group was designated by pinning a sprig of salvia to each. While they were being served 25 more were being decorated with pansies, and so on, a different flower being used for each group. When wanted the call was issued for those wearing the Zenia, Marigold, astor, etc. There were eight groups in all.

Inasmuch as one of the great problems of the age is the socialization of education, the Epworth League is to be congratulated upon this splendid reception participated by all the teachers and nearly every student in the High School.

GRANGE

Meeting of Lenawee Pomona Grange Largely Attended.

Yesterday was red letter day on the calender of the Tecumseh Grange, the quarterly meeting of the Pomona Grange of Lenawee county being held here. At 10:30 the Grange opened in the fifth degree and the regular routine work of the Pomona Grange was taken up for an hour.

After a bountifull dinner at which over one hundred hungry Grangers were fed, the Grange was called to order in an open session by Worthy Pomona Master, E. R. Ilenden.

The meeting was soon given into the hands of Worthy Pomona Lecturer, A. B. Graham and the program printed in Tuesday's issue was carried out in full.

At the conclusion of the program the doors were closed and the Grange, in session in the fourth degree, proceeded to elect two delegates to attend the next meeting of the Grange, which resulted in the election of Edyth and Harry Smith as delegates.

The weather was perfect and, while the pressing farm work made the attendance smaller than it would have been later in the season, yet it was a profitable meeting.

NOTES

Tecumseh patrons are always glad to welcome Brother Horton, Past Master of Michigan State Grange

Had it for years until he heard of Mi-o-na. C. A. Wright & Son sell it.

If you suffer from indigestion, belching of gas, lump of lead on stomach, biliousness, dizziness, foul breath nervousness, constipation, or headache, give C. A. Wright & Son 50 cents to-day for a box of Mi-o-na, the celebrated stomach prescription, and if it doesn't cure you they will give you your money back. It relieves painful stomach distress in five minutes. Read the following:

"I had stomach trouble for years. After eating I would be troubled for an hour or so with indigestion. I bought one box of Mi-o-na tablets from Gaffney Drug Co., which completely cured me. That was 12 months ago and to this day I have not been troubled again." J. B. Haskey, Gaffney, S. C., April 20, 1909. Mi-o-na is the best prescription for stomach trouble ever written; not only does it give quick relief, but it cures permanently because it thoroughly cleanses, renovates, builds up and puts elasticity into the stomach and bowels. Mi-o-na is put up in tablet form and is small and easy to swallow. Sold by leading druggists everywhere and in Tecumseh by C. A. Wright & Son who rigidly guarantee them. THE CHILDREN LIKE IT

Go to the blood if you would drive out Rheumatism. A Wisconsin physician Dr. Shoop, does this with his Rheumatic Remedy—and with seeming success. Rub-ons, says the doctor, never did cure Rheumatism. It is more than skin deep—it is constitutional, always, because of this principle, Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy is perhaps the most popular in existence. It goes by word of mouth from one to another, everywhere. Grateful patients gladly spread results. It is an act of humanity to tell the sick of a way to health. Tell some sick one. Sold by C. A. Wright & Son.

The only chronic kicker who accomplishes anything is the mule.

Some women never put checks to their purchases. They leave that for their husbands.

A pain prescription is printed upon each 25c. box of Dr. Shoop's Pink Pain Tablets. Ask your Doctor or Druggist if this formula is not complete. Head pains, womanly pains, pains anywhere get instant relief from a Pink Pain Tablet. Sold by C. A. wright & Son.

The man with a cheerful disposition and sunny face is never lonesome.

I have noticed that the man who wants the lid put on his town is always the one who thinks he is entitled to sit on the id.

The wholesome, harmless green leaves and tender stems of a lung healing mountainous shrub, gives to Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy its curative properties. Tickling or dry bronchial coughs quickly and safely yield to this highly effective Cough medicine. Dr. Shoop assures mothers that they can with safety give it to even very young babes. No opium, no chloroform—absolutely nothing harsh or harmful. It calms the distressing cough, and heals the sensitive membranes. Accept no other. Demand Dr. Shoop's. Sold by C. A. Wright & Son.

There are a lot of people hunting trouble out of season.

To quickly check a cold, druggists are dispensing everywhere a clever Candy Cold Cure Tablet called Preventics. Preventics are also fine for feverish children. Take Preventics at the sneeze stage to head off all colds. Box of 48—25c. Sold by C. A. Wright & Son.

Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the idea of treating the cause, rather than the effect, would come into practice. A tiny, inside, hidden nerve, says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branche also goes to the Heart, and one to the kidneys. When these "inside nerves" fail, then the organs must falter. Dr. Shoop's Restoratives is directed specifically to these failing nerves. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment patients say they realize a gain. Sold by C. A. Wright & Son,

TO AILING WOMEN

A Little Sound Advice Will Help Many a Sufferer in Tecumseh.

No woman can be healthy and well if the kidneys are sick. Poisons that pass off in the secretions when the kidneys are well, are retained in the body when the kidneys are sick. Kidneys and bladder become inflamed and swollen and worse troubles quickly follow. This is often the true cause of bearing-down pains, lameness, backache, sideache, etc. Uric poisoning also causes headaches, dizzy spells, languor, nervousness and rheumatic pains.

When suffering so, try Doan's Kidney Pills, a remedy that cures sick kidneys. You will get better as the kidneys get better, and health will return when the kidneys are well. Let a Tecumseh woman tell you about Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. George Burrough, W. Potawatamie St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "About a year ago my health began to fail and my whole body began to ache. My kidneys did not act as they should and my back ached a great deal. Knowing of persons who had used Doan's Kidney Pills for similar troubles with the best of results, I procured a box at C. A. Wright & Son's drug store. A few weeks after beginning their use I felt much better and at the present time I am free from the aches and pains. I willingly recommend Doan's Kidney Pills as I know that they are reliable." Sold by C. A. Wright & Son.

Cough Caution

Never, positively never poison your lungs. If you cough—even from a simple cold only—you should always heal, soothe, and ease the irritated bronchial tubes. Don't blindly suppress it with a stupefying poison. It's strange how some things finally come about. For twenty years Dr. Shoop has constantly warned people not to take cough mixtures or prescriptions containing Opium, Chloroform, or similar poisons. And now—a little late though—Congress says "Put it on the label, if poisons are in your Cough Mixture." Good! Very good! Hereafter for the very reason mothers, and others, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison marks on Dr. Shoop's labels—and none in the medicine, else it must by law be on the label. And it's not only safe, but it is said to be by those that know it best, a truly remarkable cough remedy. Take no chance then, particularly with your children. Insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Compare carefully the Dr. Shoop package with others and note the difference. No poison marks there. You can always be on the safe side by demanding

Old Cures.

The antiquary took down a little gray book. "Here is a family doctor," he said, "that was published as far back as 1561. Talk about your quaint prescriptions!" The first prescription, a truly quaint one, ran: "If a man be greved wyth the fallinge sicknessce, let him take a he-wolves harte and make it to powder and use it; but if it be a woman, let her take a she-wolves harte." A 1561 jaundice cure was: "Take earthwormes and cut them small, and braye them wyth a little wyne so that ye may swallow it; drincke the same fasting." For toothache: "Seeth as many little frogges sitting upon trees as thou canst get, in water; take the fat flowynge from them, and when nede is, anoynt the teth therwyth."

Buying the First Bond.

In the lives of most people there are a few moments that are not only big with importance, but remain long in the memory. One of these moments may be the first sight of the ocean; another, when great, snow clad mountains first come into view. Still another, though perhaps not quite so romantic, is that time when the average man or woman draws his or her savings out of a bank and buys the first bond.—Moody's Magazine.

Sensitive Salmon.

"Splendid color, isn't it?" asked a fishmonger as he cut a pound of two of salmon for a customer.

"Yes," replied the latter, "looks as if it were blushing at the price you ask for it?"—London Scraps.

A Good Ear.

Mrs. Dyer—Have you ever called on the people in the next apartment?

Mrs. Gossip—No; the walls are so thin that I know all about their affairs.—Brooklyn Life.

A Pessimist.

"A pessimist," said the philosopher of folly, "is one who, when he has the choice of two evils, chooses both and sticks around to wait for more."—Cleveland Leader.

Varieties of Humor.

The Temple of Art, devoted to that peculiar form of entertainment relept "polite vaudeville," was crowded to suffocation as Messrs. Biff and Bang, the refined sketch team and sidewalk conversationalists, stepped jauntily to the footlights. In response to the deafening applause Messrs. Biff and Bang bowed condescendingly, as though it hurt them.

Without further preliminary Mr. Biff hit his partner on the rear of his ample trousers with a stuffed club, remarking, "It's a wise man that knows his own mind."

And Mr. Bang, not to be outdone in this little exchange of pleasantries, promptly buried an ax in the skull of Mr. Biff, remarking the while, "It's a wise man that minds his own nose."

Whereupon the intelligent audience screamed with delight and voted Biff and Bang the best ever. "And yet they were a frost in the London halls," commented a man in the front row. "The English have no appreciation of real humor." — Philadelphia Ledger.

A Happy Compromise.

"What a beautiful little baby he is!" exclaimed the neighbor who had called. "He isn't six months old yet, either," said the proud young mother, "and he weighs over twenty pounds."

"What have you named him?"

"Well," hesitated the mother, "Henry and I differed a little about that. He wanted to give him one name, and I wanted to give him another, but we finally compromised and agreed to call him John Wesley."

"I see. You named him after the great founder of Meth"—

"No, indeed," quickly interrupted the mother. "That name, as I said, is a compromise."

"But how?"

"The 'John' is for John Calvin, and the 'Wesley' is for John Wesley."

"Oh, I see."—Youth's Companion.

Queer Claret.

A party of miners calling at an inn in Llangollen during the absence of the landlord were shown into the best room, which, on his return, caused him to remonstrate. His wife, however, explained that a lot of money had been spent and that seven bottles of claret had already been drunk.

"Claret!" said he. "Why, I sold the last bottle the other day. You've been giving 'em catchup."—From "Random Recollections of a Commercial Traveler."

A Home Body.

"So your husband always stays in the house nights?" said one woman.

"Yes," answered the other. "Once Hiram gets settled down in front of his fireside you can't get him out of doors even to bring in an armful of wood."

A Household Matter.

Housemaid — Please, sir, will you come at once? The drorin' room's on fire. Master—Well, go and tell your mistress. You know I never interfere in household matters.—Punch.

The Sour Philosopher.

"Some people give trouble a hug."

"Well?"

"Others carry the flirtation too far and get married."—Washington Herald.

True merriment may be distinguished from false by the fact that it bears reflection. We can think of it with pleasure next day and next week.

Quite a Difference.

Customer—Can't you give anything off to a clergyman? Tradesman—Not in this instance, sir. You see, these goods is different from yours. These is guaranteed goods.—Life.

Love, like fortune, turns upon a wheel and is very much given to rising and falling.—Vanbrugh.

A Constipation Remedy Free

There is no action of your daily life of greater importance than to see that your bowels move. They should move at least once a day naturally, and by that is meant without any help. If they do not move at least once a day you can consider yourself constipated and it is time you did something about it.

You will be glad to know there is a way out of the difficulty. Lemuel Lamberdale, an old soldier at Quincy, Ill., Elmer McMillan, of Speed, Mo., Mrs. Monahan, of Stonewall, Miss., and many others were as you are now. But one day they awoke to the fact that Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin was curing their friends, so they bought it too and it cured them. Today they are loud in praise of it.

What Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin did for them it should do for you. Surely your constipation is no worse than theirs, one of whom had it since '61. It only remains for you to realize that salts are of but temporary good, and what you want is a permanent cure; that purgative tablets, cathartic pills and such violent things make a great show of doing something, but do nothing that is lasting. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a scientific preparation, a laxative-tonic, a mild syrupy liquid that contains ingredients that not only cure the constipation, but tone the intestinal muscles so that they learn again to work without help. A bottle can be bought of any druggist for the small price of 50 cents, and there is a dollar size for families who have already found out its wonderful value in stomach, liver and bowel troubles in old or young.

Send your name and address to the doctor and a free trial bottle will be sent you so that you can test it before buying.

If there is anything about your ailment that you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 500 Caldwell bldg., Monticello, Ill.

An Ancient Sky Pilot.

From Garnett's "Anthology," volume 7, page 48, I copy the following, taken from the "Writings of Lucian," a Greek born about 100 A. D.:

"We were suddenly caught by a whirlwind, which turned our vessel several times around in a circle with tremendous velocity and lifted it above 3,000 stadia in the air, not settling it down again on the sea, but kept it suspended above the water at that height and carried us on, with swelled sails, above the clouds."

In these days of air conquest this quotation might be of utmost interest to aeronauts and also literary men. This ancient Gulliver long preceded Swift, and as for outdistancing Jules Verne another quotation is added:

"Having thus continued our course through the sky for a space of seven days and as many nights, on the eighth day we described a sort of earth in the air," etc., (which proved to be the moon).

The thoroughly familiar vernacular expression "going some" applies with original vigor to this early and perhaps first sky pilot.—New York Times.

An Obliging President.

During a short lived revolution, says Harper's Weekly, there came to be the head of the government in a little Central American republic a man who was above all things courteous and who was, moreover, very anxious to gain the good will of the foreign consuls. One of the latter, having heard that a certain countryman of his had died, addressed a note to the head of the new government, in which he stated that his own government would be grateful for a certificate of death of the individual in question. A few days later the consul received this communication:

Esteemed Senor—I blush to say that I cannot at present comply with your excellency's request for a death certificate of the man named. I sent my soldiers, but he got away; to my shame, I shall use every effort to catch him, however, and hope to send your excellency the desired certificate at an early date.

Needless to say, the consul lost no time in communicating to the obliging president the information that the certificate was undesired, in view of the fact that the individual was able to "get away."

A West Indian Wife Catcher.

As is customary with Indians the world over, the Caribs are expert basket weavers, and many strong and handsome baskets are to be bought in Roseau at reasonable prices if one finds the right shops, writes Harriet Quimby in Leslie's Weekly. A peculiar instrument, made of basket straw and woven closely together so as to form a hollow tube ending in a thong of twisted ends and commonly dubbed a wife catcher, is also made and sold by the Caribs. By slipping the hollow end over a man's finger above the joint and pulling on the twisted end the catcher will tighten around the finger and the captive will be unable to release his hand. It is claimed that the Indians formerly employed this device as a handcuff for prisoners, using several for each hand and leading the captives by the fingers. Few tourists are permitted to leave Roseau without a wife catcher, for which sixpence is willingly exchanged.

Babies' Bank Accounts.

In Schoenberg, a suburb of Berlin, every baby is born with a banking account. No Schoenberg baby can help this even if it wants to. The municipal regulations provide that whenever the birth of a child is recorded the officials of the municipal savings bank shall issue a bank book in the said baby's name. The city itself then deposits 1 mark (about 25 cents) and immediately allows interest. With this nest egg the authorities believe that the parents of the child will be encouraged in thrift and that the baby itself will have a fair start on the road to wealth. No withdrawals are allowed in less than two years, and the ordinance applies to all children, whether they are members of poor families or descended from millionaires.

Babies are popular in Schoenberg.

The Lost Donkey.

In Turkey they tell stories about Nasr-ed-Din and his donkey. Once upon a time when the donkey was lost Nasr-ed-Din went about seeking it, at the same time giving thanks as he went.

"Why do you give thanks?" asked his friend. "I see no cause for thankfulness."

"Cause enough!" was the prompt reply. "Why, man alive, if I had been along with that donkey I'd have been lost too!"—New York Tribune.

Use For the Anchor.

"Captain," remarked the nuisance on shipboard who always asks foolish questions, "what is the object in throwing the anchor overboard?"

"Young man," replied the old salt, "do you understand the theory of seismic disturbances? Well, we throw the anchor overboard to keep the ocean from slipping away in the fog."

Oh!

"How did you act when he proposed?"

"I sank gracefully on one knee."

"How ridiculous! What in the world did you sink on your knee for?"

"On his knee, not mine."—Houston

"Fo' goodness' sake," impatiently exclaimed Mr. Cooney during the poker game, "speak up lively an' say what yo' am a-gwine to do, Mose! Why, it don't take me mo' den two seconds to make up mah mind."

"If it did," replied the player addressed, very deliberately, "you'd sutfainly be loafin'."—New York Sun.

Flower Gardens of the Sea.

The sea has its flower gardens, but the blooms are not on plants as they are on the land. It is the animals o' the sea that make the gardens, the corals of the tropical waters particularly making a display of floral beauty that fairly rivals the gorgeous coloring and delicate grace presented by land flowers. So closely do they resemble plant blooms that it is hard to believe that they are wholly animal in organization. A naturalist says that among the coral gardens there are fishes of curious forms and flashing colors darting about, just as the birds and butterflies dart about plant gardens on land.

INSANELY JEALOUS.

Man Shoots His Wife and Then Himself.

Erie, Pa., Oct. 11.—Fred ... Link of the Link Manufacturing company of this city aroused his wife from her slumber and a quarrel ensued, during which, it is said, Link announced that he had decided to end both his own life and that of his wife.

He drew a revolver, and Mrs. Link seized him and fought for her life, but the insanely jealous man overcame her and shot her four times, one bullet penetrating her heart. Link fired the remaining bullet through his own head, dying instantly. Link had suffered serious business reverses of late.

THOUGHT SELF PURSUED.

Deranged Pontiac Man Kills Himself in Presence of Son.

Pontiac, Mich., Oct. 11.—"Go get that revolver of mine, Orville. I for get it," said David Bates, thirty-six a machine hand at the Monroe Manufacturing company's plant, to his nine-year-old son, with whom he was walking to the home of his cousin Sumner Tucker, 32 School street. A few minutes later, fearing that "they"—the pursuers his disordered mind told him were after him—Bates fired a bullet into his head, in the back yard of the Tucker home. He died four hours later.

For several days Bates has been possessed of the idea that unknown enemies were after him, and on several occasions he has gone to Sheriff Harris to ask for protection. The officer advised that Bates go to the local asylum for a month's treatment and the man had agreed to do so.

KILLS HIMSELF BESIDE FRIEND

Detroit Man Takes Life While Sitting With Companion.

GEORGE FULLER DESPONDENT

Veteran Hotel Clerk, It Is Believed Feared Second Stroke of Paralysis. Put Bullet Into His Own Head Had Previously Threatened to Take His Own Life.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 11.—George C Fuller, who for twenty years was clerk at the old Russell House, shot himself in front of the Lennox apartments and died instantly. He, with a friend, L. A. Heath, were seated on a bench reading a paper and were chatting pleasantly. As Heath turned to look at his paper again he was startled by the report of a revolver close to his face and, turning suddenly, saw Fuller leaning over the arm of the bench, dead.

The man's mouth, where the bullet had entered, was partly open, and a stream of blood poured from the wound. The revolver, of 38 caliber, dropped from the man's fingers, while people living in the apartments rushed to windows to learn the cause of the shot. Among them were some of Fuller's personal friends. Within a few minutes several hundred people gathered about the place.

Mrs. Fuller, when told of the death of her husband, required medical assistance, and is now in a precarious condition.

Fuller's body was taken immediately to Hamilton's undertaking rooms.

Chatted With Friends.

Fuller took breakfast in the Lennox case as usual, and others at the breakfast table chatted pleasantly with him, and he remarked on the excellent weather. Finishing his meal he took a seat on one of the benches in front of the building, as he has been in the habit of doing.

He was a very familiar figure about the apartments, as he had lived there several years and had many friends. Shortly after the shooting had been reported at police headquarters it was remembered that he had previously threatened to take his life.

About two years ago he was stricken with paralysis, and his physician is said to have told him to remain very quiet, as another stroke might prove more serious. This preyed on his mind, and he on several occasions told friends that he believed another stroke would carry him off.

Port Huron, Mich., Oct. 11.—After remaining out ten hours the jury in the case of Captain Ralph Pringle, who shot and killed George B. McKinnon in the "Hole-in-the-Wall" saloon, at St. Clair, returned with a verdict of manslaughter.

Attorney Henry Baird, who acted as one of the prisoner's attorneys during the case, asked for a poll of the jury after the verdict had been rendered. Then the attorney made a motion for a stay of sentence. It was decided not to take up the motion for several days. In the meantime the attorneys will decide as to what proceedings will be taken.

WANTS LAW TESTED.

Labor Commissioner Desires to Uphold Statutes Applied to Women.

Lansing, Mich., Oct. 10.—Labor Commissioner Fletcher has consulted the attorney general department relative to the act prohibiting the employment of women to exceed more than fifty-four hours a week in preparation to uphold the law in case some of the employers of the state carry out their threat to test the validity of the act.

Commissioner Fletcher says he hopes that an attack on the Michigan law will be made soon and the question settled, announcing it as his intention to use every means to enforce it and uphold it in the courts.

CRANE DOES NOT KNOW

New Minister Mum About Recall to Washington.

KNOX IS ALSO RETICENT

Intimated State Department Is Put Out Concerning Reports Regarding Uncle Sam's Attitude Towards Japan-China Negotiations That Have Leaked Out.

Washington, Oct. 11.—Charles R Crane's sudden, unexpected and hitherto mysterious recall to Washington by Secretary of State Knox, as he was at the point of sailing from San Francisco to assume his duties as minister of the United States to China, was occasioned by developments involving the question of Mr. Crane's fitness for that post. This much is known in well-informed quarters in Washington: Unless Mr. Crane is able to clear himself in the eyes of Secretary Knox of an accusation of a serious breach of what the state department regards as the first principle of diplomatic discretion, the conference with his official chief may result in the abrupt termination of Mr. Crane's connection with the diplomatic service.

Minister Crane arrived in Washington late Sunday afternoon from his hurried journey across the continent, reiterated his declaration of ignorance as to the occasion for his rather dramatic recall and declined to discuss the matter in any of its aspects, beyond saying that while he expected to be here several days he had reserved new accommodations for the transpacific voyage on the steamer sailing from San Francisco on Oct. 20—a week from next Wednesday.

Convincing Evidence.

The state department has in hand, it is said, what it regards as more or less convincing evidence that Minister Crane, on the eve of his departure for the far east, became responsible for the publication in a Chicago newspaper of what the department views as a most indiscreet discussion of the attitude of the United States toward the two treaties recently negotiated between China and Japan. This the department holds to have been the more serious because that attitude is still under confidential consideration, no decision having been arrived at.

China and Japan early last month entered into treaties which contained provisions regarded by the state department as very surprising and possibly objectionable to this government. By these treaties Japan would secure rights in Manchuria which are held by some diplomats to be in direct violation of both letter and spirit of the Portsmouth treaty. China has agreed in the treaties now under consideration that before extending her present railway system in Manchuria she shall consult Japan, and, presumably, obtain her consent thereto. This provision is regarded as inharmonious with the declaration of Japan in the treaty of Portsmouth that she will not obstruct any measures taken by China for the development of her empire.

The officials of the state department are extremely reticent on the whole subject.

TO USE POLAR BEARS.

Captain Amundsen Will Make Them Draw His Sledges.

Hamburg, Oct. 11.—Captain Roald Amundsen, the well known Danish explorer, who is about to start on a polar expedition, has decided to try a remarkable innovation in the use of draught animals for polar travel. He will endeavor to make polar bears draw his sledges.

Some time ago Captain Amundsen made a contract with Carl Hagenbeck, the famous animal trainer, for twenty ice bears, three years old. Hagenbeck's men have been industriously at work for a month training the bears, and the results attained are said to promise success for them in polar work. The animals will be shipped to Christiania this week, where they will be taken on board Captain Amundsen's ship.

The Lure of the Mask

By HAROLD MAC GRATH

Copyright, 1908, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

"Cigars, then."

But they both played a very indifferent game. At 10:30 Merrithew's eyes began to haunt the clock, and Hillard grew merciful for various reasons.

"What time does the performance end?" he asked.

"At 10:50, but it takes about twenty minutes to scrape off the makeup."

Merrithew put his cue in the rack. He made off for the coat room.

Hillard laughed and went up to the writing room to fulfill a part of his destiny. He took the letter out and read it again. He replaced the letter in its blue covering, and then for the first time his eye met the superscription. Like a man entranced he sat there staring. The steward had brought the letter to him, and in his first excitement this had made no impression upon his mind. He had seen nothing peculiar nor strange. And here it was, not his initials, but his name in full.

She knew who he was!

In a fashionable quarter of the city there stood a brownstone house, with grotesque turrets, winding steps and glaring polished red tiles. There was a touch of the gothic, of the renaissance, of the old English manor; just a touch, however, a kind of blind man's buff of a house. A very rich man lived here; but for ten months in the year he and his family fluttered about the social centers of the world. And, with a house like this on his hands, one could scarce blame him. Twice a week during this absence a caretaker came in, flourished a feather duster and went away again. Society reporters always referred to this house as "the palatial residence."

This morning a woman stood in the alcove window and looked down into the glistening street. The venetian red of her hair trapped the reflected sunlight from the opposite windows, and two little points of silver danced in her blue eyes. Ah, but her eyes were blue—blue as spring water in the morning, blue as the summer sky seen through a cleft in the mountains, blue as lapis lazuli, with the same fibers of gold. And every feature and contour of the face harmonized with the marvelous hair and the wonderful eyes; a beautiful face, warm, dreamy, engaging, mobile. It was not the face of a worldly woman; neither was it the face of a girl. It was too emotional for the second, and there was not enough control for the first.

But the prophecy of laughter did not come to pass. The little wrinkles faded, the mouth grew sad, and the silver points no longer danced in her eyes. The pain in her heart was always shadowing. She had seen her fairest dream beaten and crumpled upon the reef of disillusion.

Yet again the smile renewed itself. She was a creature of varying moods. She twisted and untwisted the newspaper. Should she? Ought she? Had she not always regretted these singular impulses? And yet what harm to read this letter and return it to the sender? She was so lonely here. It was like being among a strange people, so long ago was it that her foot had touched this soil. Was it possible that she was twenty-five? Was there not some miscount, and was it not fifteen instead? Would not this war of wisdom and folly be decided ere long?

She opened the paper and smoothed out the folds. "Mme. Angot—There is a letter for you in the mail department of this office." It was so droll. It was unlike anything she had ever heard of—a personal inquiry column, where Cupids and Psyches billed and cooed. The merest chance had thrown the original inquiry under her notice. Her answer was an impulse to which she had given no second thought till too late. She ought to have ignored it. But she was lonely; the people she knew were out of town, and the jest might amuse her.

This man was in all probability a gentleman, since he was a member of a gentlemen's club. But second thought convinced her that this proved nothing. Men are often called gentlemen out of compliment to their ancestors. Still, if this man only saw the affair from her angle of vision, the grotesque humor of it and not the common vulgar intrigue! She hesitated, as well she might. Supposing that eventually he found out who she was? That would never, never do. No one must know that she was in America, about to step into the wildest of wild adventures. No; she must not be found out. The king, who had been kind to her, and the court must never know. From their viewpoint they would have declared that she was about to tarnish a distinguished name, to outrage the oldest aristocracy in Europe, the court of Italy. But she had her own opinion; what she proposed to do was in itself harmless and innocent. But this gentleman who leaned out of the window? She had seen the match flare in the young man's face. Was it the face she had seen in that flash of light that interested her sufficiently to risk the note? Against the dark of the night it had appeared for an instant, clean, crisp, ruddy as a cameo. The face warranted confidence.

She had sung because she had been happy, happy with that transient happiness which at times was her portion. Could she ever judge another man by his looks? She believed not. How she had run! The man, bareheaded, giving chase and the burly policeman across the street!

She stepped down from the alcove, wound the gray veil round the riding crop and tossed them into a corner. Somehow in the daylight the magic was gone from his face, for she had recognized him that first day in the park. He rode well. She touched a bell. A maid appeared.

"Bettina, you will go to the office of this newspaper and inquire for a letter addressed to Mme. Angot. And be quick for I may change my mind."

The maid was back in a half hour.

"There was a letter, then?" The points were dancing again in the blue eyes.

"You may go. Perhaps," and Bettina's mistress smiled—"perhaps I may let you read it and answer it after I am done with it. That would be rather neat."

The slight nod was a dismissal, and the maid went about her duties, which were not many in this house.

Meanwhile the lady with the venetian hair toyed with the letter. Club paper! Evidently he was not afraid to trust her. But would he amuse her? The contents gave her a genuine surprise. She ran to the window. Italian! It was written in Italian, with all the flourishes of an Italian born. She turned to the signature—Hillard. So he had signed his name in full? She ruminated. How came such a name to belong to a man who wrote Italian so beautifully? She looked at the signature again. John—Giovanni. She would call him Giovanni. She had been rather clever. To have had the wit to look in the library for the blue book and the club list—not every woman would have thought of that. Then a new inspiration came to her. She sent Bettina for the card basket. She scattered the contents upon the floor and sat down Turkish-wise. She sorted the cards carefully, and, lo, she was presently rewarded. She held up the card in triumph. He had called at this house on Thanksgiving day. He was known, then, to the master and mistress. Very good. She now gave her full attention to the letter, which she had not yet perused:

To the Lady in the Fog:

To begin with, let me say that I, too, have laughed. But there was some degree of chagrin in my laughter. On my word of honor, it was a distinct shock to my sense of dignity when I saw that idiotic personal of mine in the paper. It is my first offense of the kind, and I am really ashamed. But the situation was not ordinary. Ordinary women do not sing in the streets after midnight. As you could not possibly be ordinary, my offense has greater magnitude. To indite a personal to a gentlewoman! A thousand pardons! I doubted that it would come under your notice, and, even if it did, I was sure that you would ignore it. To find a woman with an appreciable sense of humor is rare. To find one who couples this with initiation is rarer still. How you found out my name confuses me.

"Indeed!" murmured the lady.

Doubtless you have the club list in your house. Do you know, when the letter was brought me I saw nothing unusual about the address. It was only when I began this letter that I comprehended how clever you were. There are half a dozen J. H.'s at the club. I tell you truthfully over my own name that your voice startled me.

I was startled because my thoughts were far away. I was dreaming of Italy, where I was born, though there is no more Italian blood in my veins than there is in yours.

"What made him think that. I wonder?"

I therefore write this in a language familiar to us both, certain you could not sing Lecocq's songs in Italian if you did not speak and understand it thoroughly. Signora or signorina, whichever it may be, have we no mutual friends? Are you not known to some one who knows me—some one who will speak for me, my character, my habits?

"It is rather a dull letter so far," said the lady.

You say you sang because at that moment you were happy. This implies that you are not always so. Surely with a voice like yours one cannot possibly be unhappy. If only I might meet you! Will you not do me that honor? Isn't there just a little pure, healthy romance waiting to be given life? Your voice haunts me. Out of every silence it comes to me—"She is so innocent, so youthful!"

JOHN HILLARD.

She held up the card in triumph.

The letter fluttered into her lap. She leaned on her elbows. It was not a bad letter, and she rather liked the boyish tone of it. Nothing vulgar peered out from between the lines. Did he really love music? He must, for it was not every young man who could pick out the melody of an old, forgotten opera. Rather than tempt fate she decided not to answer this letter. It would be neither wise nor useful.

Romance! The word came back to her. With an unmusical laugh she stood up, shaking the letter to the floor. Romance! She was no longer a girl. She was a woman of five and twenty, and what should a woman know of romance? Ah, there had been a time when all the world was romance—romance; when the night breeze had whispered it under her casement window, when the lattice climbing roses had breathed it, when the moon and the stars had spelled it. Romance! She hated the word not less than she hated the Italian language, the Italian people, the country itself. She spurned the letter with her foot and fed the newspaper to the fire.

She went downstairs to the piano and played with strong feeling. Presently she began to sing a haunting, melancholy song by Abt. She was mistress of every tone, every shade, every expression.

The door opened gradually. Crash! The music was over.

"Bettina? Bettina, are you listening?"

"I am always listening." Bettina squeezed into the room. "It is beautiful, beautiful! To sing like that! There will be kings and dukes at your feet!"

"Enough!"

"Pardon, signora, I forgot. But listen. I bring a message. A boy came to say that the rehearsal will be at 4 this afternoon. It is now after 12."

"So late? We must be off."

"And the letter upstairs on the floor?"

"Some day, Bettina, you will enter the forbidden chamber, and I shall have to play Bluebeard. This time, however, I do not mind. Leave it there or burn it," indifferently.

Bettina knew her mistress. She thought best to leave the letter where it lay, forgotten for the time being.

CHAPTER IV.

BLINDFOLDED.

FOR two days the club steward only nodded when Hillard came in. He had no letters to present.

"I am thirty-three years old," Hillard mused as he sought the reading room. "Downtown I am looked upon as a man of affairs, a business man, with the care of half a dozen fortunes on my hands. Now, what's the matter with me? I begin to tremble when I look that sober old steward in the face. If he had handed me a letter tonight I should have had to lean against the wall for support. This will never do at all. I have not seen her face; I do not know her name. For all I know she may be this Leddy Lightfinger. No; that would be impossible. Leddy Lightfinger would have made an appointment. What possesses me to dwell in this realm of fancy, which is less tangible than a cloud of smoke?" He smoked thoughtfully. "Or am I romantic? To create romance out of nothing—I used to do that when I was a boy. But I'm a boy no longer. Or am I a boy thirty-three years old? She does not answer my letter. Sensible woman. Well, well," reaching for the London Illustrated News, "let's see what the society folks have been doing."

He dropped the paper. There was really nothing new in the world. If Giovanni returned to Italy in the spring he was of a mind to go with him. He looked up and was glad to see Merrihew in the doorway.

"Been looking for you, Jack. Want your company tonight. Kitty Killigrew is giving a little bite to eat after the performance and has asked me to bring you along. Will you come?"

"With pleasure, Dan. Are you dining with any one tonight?" Hillard was lonesome.

"Yes. A little bridge till 11."

"You're hopeless. I can see you in limbo, matching coffin plates with Charon. I'll hunt you up at 11."

"Heard the talk?"

"About what?"

"Why, some one in the club has been using the agony column. The J. H.'s are being guyed unmercifully, and you'll come in for it presently. It's a case of wine on the man who did it."

Hillard felt of his collar and drew down his cuffs. "Probably some joke," he ventured tentatively.

"If it isn't the man who would stoop to such tommyrot and tack the name of his club to it must be an ass."

"No doubt about that. Odd that this is the first time I have heard about it." But silently Hillard was swearing at his folly.

"I may depend upon you tonight, then?" said Merrihew.

"I shall be pleased to meet Miss Killigrew," which was a white one. Hillard would have paid court to a laundress rather than offended Merrihew.

And promptly at 11 he went up to the card room and dragged Merrihew away. Merrihew gave up his chair reluctantly. He was winning. The amateur gambler never wants to stop.

On the way to the Killigrew apartment Merrihew's moods varied. At one moment he was on the heights, at the next in the depths. He simply could not live without Kitty. Perhaps if this trip abroad turned out badly she might change her mind. Seven thousand could be made to muster. Twice Hillard came very near making his friend a confidant of his own affair, but he realized that, while Merrihew was to be trusted in all things, it was not yet time.

He found a pleasing and diverting company. There was Mere Killigrew, a quaint little old lady who deplored her daughter's occupation, but admitted that without her success heaven only knew how they would have got along. There was the genial Thomas O'Mally, a low comedian of genuine ability, whom Hillard knew casually; Smith, a light comedian, and Worth, a moderately successful baritone, to whom Hillard took one of those instant and unaccountable dislikes. These three and Kitty were going abroad.

Kitty fancied Hillard from the start, and he on his side found her well educated, witty and unaffected. She was even prettier than her photograph. Merrihew's face beamed upon them both in a kind of benediction. He had known all along that once Jack saw Kitty he would become a good ally in fighting down her objections.

"Think of singing in Italy!" cried Kitty. "Isn't it just wonderful?"

"And has Merrihew told you to get a return ticket before you sail?" with half a jest.

"Don't you think it will be successful?" a shade of disappointment.

Alma College vs. Saginaw Naval Reserves.

Four hundred Alma enthusiasts saw the college team last Saturday administer a drubbing to the Saginaw Naval Reserves, to the tune of 37-0 in 35 minutes of play.

This was the first time Alma rooters have had a chance to get clear dope on the team. Alma kicked off and Saginaw got the ball on the 50 yard line. On the first play Saginaw fumbled, Fraker picked up the ball and ran for a touchdown.

The Navals then kicked to Alma, after a couple of downs Alma fumbled and Saginaw by quick and decisive scrimmage forced the ball on Alma's goal line. In the bleachers there was much ado and excitement ran high. On the next play "Ole" Anderson, the Herculean Swede, from Elk Rapids, broke through Saginaw's lines and caused the full the fumble, securing the pig skin himself. From here the locals punted out of danger. On clever forward passes, by Miesnar's wonderful line plunging and on a side kick, Alma secured another touchdown.

A couple of times it seemed almost certain that the "Jackies" would score, so close were they to Alma's goal, but each time the Maroons held firm.

At the beginning of the second half the score stood 12-0 with the Presbyterians in good condition. Coach Carrither's adept coaching was now showing its value. The visitors, though ten pounds to the man heavier, were in a winded condition and several of them were forced to have time taken out for them.

Alma kicked far into the enemy's line, following the kick up with some speedy tackling. The reserves were doing some telling smashing when Captain Von Thurn secured the ball on a triple pass and ran for a touchdown. Kefgen snatched a fumble, getting the fourth touchdown. Early in the half, after Alma had failed twice to gain in Saginaw's 25 yard lines, Von Thurn was called back for a place kick and it was a beauty that he made, receiving lusty cheers from the grand stand. The game ended with the ball in Alma's possession at the center of the field.

The new men who showed up especially strong were full-back Meisnar from East Jordan, King of Adrian and "Ole" Anderson of Elk Rapids. Fraker, a last year's sub, starred at right-end, the kicking of Von Thurn, and Chapel's splendid work as center, were features of the game.

Alma's strong point in Saturday's game, was her ability to pick up fumbles and to get the ball over the goal. Only once did the college lose the ball on a fumble. All in all, the Presbyterians stand an excellent chance of having a championship team. A word must be said about the neat game Law of Cadillac put up during the last half on tackle. Law is a new man, has nerve and a good head and with more weight and more of Carrither's coaching will make good on the first team. Hurst was head line man, Prof. Mitchell timekeeper, and Ward U. of C. referee. Alma's line up is as follows; L. F., Fraker; R. T., McCallum, Law; R. G., Anderson; C., Chapel; L. G., Kefgen; L. T., Von Thurn; (Capt.) L. E., King; Q. B., R. Campbell; R. H., Hooper; L. H., Von Thurn, Ewing; F. B., Miesnar.

Local Option Petition And County Figures

WILL BE PRESENTED TO SUPERVISORS THIS WEEK,

Necessary to Present 3,933 Names Number Signatures Secured 5,570.

John E. Carr, chairman of the local option committee for Lenawee county, Friday filed with the county clerk the Lenawee petition to be considered by the Lenawee board of supervisors which convenes here on Monday for the fall session. It is necessary that the petition represent a third of the county vote of last fall, and the vote on governor at that time was 11,797, so that 3,933 signers were necessary to present the local option petition. However, 5,570 were secured, leaving a margin of 1,647, and a perusal of the figures as relating to the different wards and townships will be of interest in connection. The work which was begun in July was finished a month ago virtually, but the petition was held until this time. The tabulation follows:

City of Adrian—First ward, 137; second ward, 160; third ward, 213; fourth ward, 147; fifth ward, 77; sixth ward 164. Total 898.

ACCUSES HEARST OF BREACH FAITH

Justice Gaynor Declares Editor Agreed to Support Him.

HAD URGED HIM TO RUN

Issues Statement Full of Sting and Bite, Yet Not Invective — Says Hearst Had Refused to Let Convention Be Called and Had Cried "Fraud" When Primaries "Cut" Him

New York, Oct. 11.—In a statement full of sting and bite, yet devoid of invective, William J. Gaynor, the Democratic nominee for mayor of Greater New York, has fired his first big projectile of the municipal campaign in an attack on William Randolph Hearst.

Early last week Mr. Hearst issued a statement, saying positively that he would not run for mayor but would support Justice Gaynor. Two days later he accepted an independent nomination for the office.

Surprised at this action, Justice has just issued a brief statement, charging Hearst with breach of faith. He came out with the statement and a letter purporting to show that Hearst had urged him to run for mayor nearly six months ago, "on my ticket," and pledging his support.

The letter was addressed to him by Rudolph Block, who occupies an editorial position on the Hearst papers. Under the date of Oct. 9, Block, while "regretting exceedingly to be drawn into the affair," reviews at some length what purports to have been the details of meetings between Hearst and Gaynor early last summer, when Hearst promised to support Gaynor.

Justice Gaynor then reviews the incidents which led up to Hearst's repudiation of him, which he describes as "the most painful shock I had ever experienced," and a breach of trust such as he never encountered before.

"Meanwhile," continues the statement, "the primaries of the Independence league had been held, and it was found that a decisive majority of the delegates chosen were in my favor. Thereupon, Mr. Hearst would not permit the convention to be called. No other party boss ever went as far as this.

"After the primaries, Mr. Hearst began to cry 'fraud,' as usual, and that his ballot boxes had been 'stuffed.' No one could vote at the league primaries except its enrolled members, as every one knows.

"Mr. Hearst now repudiates his league party, will not permit the convention to be called, and is having himself nominated by petition against me. But it may be that with all his money and newspapers and power, the people of New York may not let him run over me so easily as he thinks."

Hearst gave out a statement answering Gaynor, in which he said:

"If Gaynor has stated that I promised to support him under any and all circumstances and upon any and all tickets he states what is positively untrue. I will try to assume that he is honestly mistaken. I promised to support him so long as he stood for certain principles."

When but a child he came to Michigan and made his home till the dawn of the civil war when he enlisted and served his time. In 1865 he was married to Katherine Voltz of Bellevill. Soon after their marriage he and his wife came to Tecumseh and the remaining years were spent in this vicinity.

To them were born ten children of which nine survive; these together with a beloved wife, numerous relatives and a host of friends are left to mourn their loss.

ROBERT B. SILVER.

Robert B. Silver, father of James Silver of this place, and probably the oldest showman in United States was buried at Traverse City, Monday afternoon. He leaves a widow and five sons.

More than 70 years ago Mr. Silver made his first appearance with a wagon show, remaining in the business continuously until eight years ago, when his failing health forced him to retire. As his family grew up he organized the "Silver Family" and traveled all over the United States, covering thousands of miles by wagon and thousands more by railroad.

During one of these trips his son G. Lote began using the magic lantern pictures with his songs thus being the father of illustrated songs.

BANKING MARK HIGHEST.

Lansing, Mich., Oct. 7.—The highest mark in the history of incorporated banking in Michigan for the aggregate business of state banks was reached September 1, according to a report just issued by the state banking department. A gain of $14,600,000 is shown over the highest mark preceding the recent panic, and an increase of $26,800,000 over the lowest point recorded during the panic; and of this increase $17,000,000 is in savings deposits alone. Banking commissioner Zimmerman states that all of the state banks are also in good condition and that the reserves are well maintained.

Since the first of this year 22 state banks have been incorporated, with a capital of a half million dollars. One gratifying condition is made known in the statement that there has not been a single failure during the year of a state bank, and that all of them are showing unusually prosperous conditions.

SUICIDE OF GEORGE FULLER.

Worry Over Poor Health Cause of Rash Act.

Word has been received here from Detroit of the suicide of George Fuller, who for many years has been connected with the old Russell house as clerk. The deed was committed just before noon Sunday.

Fuller was seated on a bench with A. L. Heath, whose rooms are near those Fuller occupied in the Lenox. They had been talking several moments when Heath turned from Fuller with his back to the sun so that he might read the paper. He heard a pistol shot a moment later and turning around found Fuller with his head thrown back over the bench and a bullet wound in his upper lip, the revolver which he used lay on the bench beside him. Death was instantaneous.

Fuller's act was the culmination of two years constant suffering from paralysis. Fuller was 62 years old and was well known to the traveling public. His death was a terrible shock to his wife.

Mr. and Mrs. Fuller werequite well known in Tecumseh, having visited at this place many times.

Mrs. Fuller was formerly Miss Lottie Baldy. Friends in Tecumseh sympathize deeply with the bereived widow.

Drain Commissioners' Act.

Lansing, Mich. Oct. 7.—Many queries are coming to the capitol relative to the act 118 of the laws passed by the last legislature. It prescribes that one drain commissioner shall be elected in each county in 1910 and one every second year thereafter. The next sentence states that the term of of office such commissioner shall continue for four years and drain commissioners and prospective drain commissioners are wondering what the act means. It is said that the ruling will probably be that the legislative intent was to provide for a two year term, and this will govern.

AMUSEMENTS.

One of the most striking and impressive scenes in the romantic drama "The Lily and the Prince", the companion play to "When Knighthood was in Flower", which will be presented at the Bradley opera house, on Thursday October 14th, is situated in the third act where the stage settings are all in sober black. Masked and sowled, the councillors sit in black robes in the gruessome council chamber in the Fortress of St. Angelo, while the stern and forbidding soldiers, in the armor of that era, the 16th century in Italy, stand about with up right spears. Angela the heroine, appears before the councillors to defend her father against the charges of treachery. Lucrezia Borgia wound the thread of her intrigue as firmly abont the young innocent Florentine girl that it appears impossible to release her from the meshes. Her simple straight-forward story, however, bears the stamp of truth and the hand of the councillors. Cardinal Capua, throws aside his disguise, declares his belief in her innocence of intrigue and that of her father, with the result that the Borgias are banished.

LIQUOR LAW OPINIONS.

Lansing, Mich., Oct. 7.—Attorney General Bird is being besieged almost daily by requests for interpretation of some phases of the new liquor law which is upon the statutes. He is kept busy sending out answers to various county officials and individuals relative to some of the details of this law. Among the questions which he has been asked to solve is one as to whether in case one partner in a liquor firm has decamped the other business without securing a new bond and paying another liquor license. To this question the attorney general answered that in view of the fact that the whereabouts of the absent partner are not known nor his intentions regarding returning, decided that the remaining partner may continue the business.

Just Name It

The following nine picked up by an observing rooter would make a hit so far as names go:

"Hogg, pitcher, Louisville.
"Hart, catcher, Montgomery.
"Henn, first base, Augusta.
"Grubb, second base, Wilkesbarre.
"Leach, third base, Pittsburg.
"Roach, shortstop, Lancaster.
"Crane, left field, Harrisburg.
"Wolf, center field, Portsmouth.
"Drake, right field, Wilkesbarre.

"Fox, first baseman of Lynn, might have been used in the infield, but it would have frightened Henn and Drake out of the game. Among the other birds which are eligible to membership on the nine are: Swan, pitcher, Kansas City; Guese, of Montgomery, while Storke, of St. Louis would make a good utility player.

SPITTING NUSIANCE.

Hawking and spitting is caused by catarrh germs.

If the local authorities want to stop the disgusting habit of spitting mucous on the sidewalks, they had better instruct the people as to the best method of killing the catarrh germs and curing catarrh. You can easily tell by reading the symptoms below whether you have catarrh or not:

Offensive breath, frequent sneezing discharge from nose, stoppage of the nose, huskiness of the voice, tickling in throat, droppings in throat, a cough, pain in chest, loss of strength, variable appetite, spasms of coughing, low spirited at times, raising of mucous, difficulty in breathing, loss of vital force. C. A. Wright & Son have a sensible remedy (money back if it fails) for catarrh, called Hyomei, which is a vaporized air so antiseptic that when it is breathed over the inflamed and germ-infested membrane, it kills all germ life and cures catarrh. The price, including hard rubber inhaler, is only $1.00, and money back if it doesn't cure. Extra bottles 50 cents.

"I have tried almost every catarrh cure on the market without benefit. Hays been using Hyomei for one week and feel like a new man already." —Wm. V. Goode, Newark, Ohio, June 21, 1909.

Better than Pills for Liver Ills

FOR SALE BY B. J. BULVER, TECUMSEH, MICH.

Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the idea of treating the cause, rather than the effect, would come into practice. A tiny, inside, hidden nerve, says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branche also goes to the Heart, and one to the kidneys. When these "inside nerves" fail, then the organs must falter. Dr. Shoop's Restoratives is directed specifically to these failing nerves. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment patients say they realize a gain. Sold by C. A. Wright & Son.

A girl who can manage to get three engagement rings must have a circus of her own.

Most women are troubled with Kidney complaint, and you know very many serious and even fatal diseases result from these neglected Kidney troubles. TO AILING WOMEN

A Little Sound Advice Will Help Many a Sufferer in Tecumseh.

No woman can be healthy and well if the kidneys are sick. Poisons that pass off in the secretions when the kidneys are well, are retained in the body when the kidneys are sick. Kidneys and bladder become inflamed and swollen and worse troubles quickly follow. This is often the true cause of bearing-down pains, lameness, backache, sideache, etc. Uric poisoning also causes headaches, dizzy spells, languor, nervousness and rheumatic pains.

When suffering so, try Doan's Kidney Pills, a remedy that cures sick kidneys. You will get better as the kidneys get better, and health will return when the kidneys are well. Let a Tecumseh woman tell you about Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. George Burrough, W. Potawatamie St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "About a year ago my health began to fail and my whole body began to ache. My kidneys did not act as they should and my back ached a great deal. Knowing of persons who had used Doan's Kidney Pills for similar troubles with the best of results, I procured a box at C. A. Wright & Son's drug store. A few weeks after beginning their use I felt much better and at the present time I am free from the aches and pains. I willingly recommend Doan's Kidney Pills as I know that they are reliable." Sold by C. A. Wright & Son.

Got Too Familiar.

A story told of Justice Brewer concerns a trip he made to his old home in Kansas, accompanied by Mrs. Brewer. In Washington a justice of the supreme court is spoken of as "Mr. Justice," and that is the title Mrs. Brewer always has heard. When they reached Chicago, however, the "Mr." was dropped and the jurist was referred to as "Justice Brewer." At Omaha some old friends called him "David J.," and when they crossed the Kansas line some former neighbors referred to him as "David." "Let's go home," suggested Mrs. Brewer.

"Why?" asked the justice.

"Because, dear," Mrs. Brewer replied, "I am afraid if we go any farther they will be calling you 'Davie.'" —Cleveland Leader.

Cure For Disconsolate Lovers.

Somebody has dug out of an old book of the time of Queen Elizabeth the following advice to a slighted and despondent lover:

Tye one end of a rope righte over a beame
And make a slippe noose at the other extreame.
Just under the beame lett a bucket be sett;
On it lett the lovier most manfullie gett.
Right over his heade be left the snicket be gott
And under his eare well fastened the knott.
The buckett kicked cleare, lett him take a full swinge
And leave alle the reste of the worke to the stringe!

A Witty Widow.

A widow of the name of Rugg, having taken Sir Charles Price for her second husband, was asked by a friend how she liked the change.

"Oh," she replied, "I parted with my old Rugg for a good Price."

Indigestion

Stomach trouble is but a symptom of, and not in itself a true disease. We think of Dyspepsia, Heartburn, and Indigestion as real diseases, yet they are symptoms only of a certain specific Nerve sickness—nothing else.

It was this fact that first correctly led Dr. Shoop in the creation of that now very popular Stomach Remedy—Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Going direct to the stomach nerve, alone brought that success and favor to Dr. Shoop and his Restorative. Without that original and highly vital principle, no such lasting accomplishments were ever to be had.

For stomach distress, bloating, biliousness, bad breath and sallow complexion, try Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—and see for yourself what it can and will do. We sell and cheerfully recommend ZEMO positively cures Eczema, pimples, Blackheads, Dandruff, Itching Piles and every form of skin or scalp diseases. Marriages in Spain.

Though marriages in Spain are often arranged without the consent of the bride elect, law or custom gives the Spanish woman the power of appealing to a magistrate if she wishes to escape from a union which is distasteful to her, and the magistrate may take her from her father's house until she is of age and her own mistress, while if she determines to marry a man of whom her parents disapprove she may also place herself under the protection of the law, and she cannot be deprived of her share of the family estates. On reaching her majority she enjoys the same privileges as her brother with regard to property. She may inherit, will, buy and sell. But when she marries she again reverts to the position of a minor, and her husband has entire control of her possessions, which he can squander without rendering any account to her, though she cannot spend a penny of her own money without his consent. He may desert her and her children without incurring any punishment or much public condemnation. A Spanish lady confers on her husband the titles of nobility and any privilege connected therewith she may possess at the time of her marriage.—London Queen.

Early Prejudice Against Potatoes.

The way of the potato was said to have been barred by the prejudice that it was never mentioned in the Bible. In the Lothians it came in about 1740, the year of the famine, from Ireland, but was confined to gardens till about 1754, when it was planted in fields about Aberlady. By the close of the century it was a general article of diet. Ramsay says that George Henderson went about 1750 for a bag of potatoes to Kilsyth, where the Irish method of field culture had lately been tried, and introduced the potato into Mentieth, where a few had been known, but only in kale yards. The old folks, however, did not take kindly to the new food. Old George Bachop, one of the Ochtertyre tenants, when told by his wife that she had potatoes for supper said: "Tatties! Tatties! I never supped on them a' my days and winna the nicht. Gie them to the herd and get me sowens." It is significant that Burns, who sings the praises of kale and porridge and haggis, should have nothing to say of the potato.—Blackwood's Magazine.

A Convert.

An old Cambridge friend of mine who had a good deal of the wisdom of the serpent in him had a farmer in his parish in Norfolk whom he could not get to church. Whenever he pressed upon him his neglect or his bad example he was always met with the same excuse, "You be too young and do not know enough to teach such as I." At last he gave up the farmer in despair. But one day he happened to pass by the farm while his parishioner was engaged in killing a fine pig. My friend said: "What a pig! Why, he weighs thirty-four stone!" "What dost thou know of pigs?" replied the farmer. "I only wish he weighed as much." When they next met the farmer, to his surprise, told my friend that the pig had been found to weigh just thirty-four stone. He added, much to my friend's gratification, "And thou wilt see me at church next Sunday, parson."—London Globe.

A Problem in Mathematics.

The town of Sturgis, in Mississippi, is the only round square town in existence. By legal enactment the circle has been squared, and the mathematician may now proceed to calculate the area of a square circle. In the laws of Mississippi for the year 1886, on page 682, is found the following:

"An act to incorporate the town of Sturgis, in Oktibbeha county, Mississippi.

"Section 1. Be it enacted by the legislature of the state of Mississippi that the town of Sturgis, in the county of Oktibbeha, is hereby incorporated and that the corporate limits of said town shall be as follows: Beginning at the quarter stake in front of Caleb Hannah's residence and running 600 yards in every direction, making said corporate limits 1,200 yards square."

Thus the circle is squared by the solemn declaration of the law.—Youth's Companion.

Turks and Animals.

In the matter of kindness to animals it is said that the Turk cannot be surpassed. Thus at Stamboul the wandering dogs are treated with great gentleness, and when puppies come into the world they are lodged with their mother at the side of the street in improvised kennels made out of old boxes lined with straw and bits of carpet. And frequently when a young Turk happens to be flush of money he goes to the nearest baker's shop and buys a quantity of bread, which he distributes among the dogs of the quarter, who testify their gratitude by jumping up at him with muddy paws and sniffing muzzles.

His Bald Spot.

Little Margie's father had a bald spot. While kissing him at bedtime one evening she said:

"Stoop down, papa. I want to kiss you on the head where the lining shows."

The greatest of all faults, I should say, is to be conscious of none.—Carlyle.

A Great Walker.

On July 12, 1809, the Newmarket bells rang a peal in honor of Captain Barclay's completed walk of a mile in each of 1,000 successive hours. In his first week of it he had averaged less than fifteen minutes for each mile and in the last week more than twenty-one, and his weight had gone down from thirteen stone four pounds to eleven stone. But on July 17 he joined the Walcheren expedition in perfect health as aid-de-camp to the Marquis of Huntly. Captain Barclay, who was a Barclay of Ury and unsuccessfully claimed three Scottish earldoms, had performed wonderful feats before the Newmarket walk. In 1801 he walked 110 miles in nineteen hours in a muddy park. In 1808 he rose one morning at 5, walked thirty miles grouse shooting, dined at 5 p. m., walked sixty miles to his house at Ury in eleven hours, did some business and walked sixteen miles to dance at a ball, walked home by 4 a. m. and spent the day partridge shooting—in all 130 miles, without sleep for two nights and three days. At twenty he could lift half a ton.—St. James' Gazette.

Not Afraid.

Personal courage invests its owner with a protection beyond that afforded by outside forces. An illustration of this is recorded by General William F. Draper in his "Recollections of a Varied Career," where he gives this incident:

In 1864 Colonel Daniels of the Seventh Rhode Island became unpopular with some of his command, and a rumor spread that he would be shot at the next engagement. He heard of it. It was customary when guns had been loaded for some time to have them discharged into some convenient bank, and Colonel Daniels took advantage of this. Marching his regiment out with loaded rifles, he faced them toward a suitable elevation, and, taking position on the top of it and in front of them as at dress parade, he gave the commands, "Ready!" "Aim!" "Fire!" and the pieces were discharged.

Needless to say, any man could have shot him with little danger of discovery, and, needless to say, also, none of them did. There were no more threats of that kind in his regiment.

Europe's Dirtiest Town.

All travelers should shun Borysiaw, in Galicia—"the back of Europe"—truthfully called the dirtiest place in Europe. It is the oil trade center and is decidedly not beautiful. In the main street all the houses have been built on mine refuse, and most of them have sunk below the level of the street. In fact, there is not a solid brick or stone building in the whole of the town, and many of the houses are in a state of partial or entire collapse. Unrefined petroleum is everywhere. It gets into everything—food and clothing—and the atmosphere reeks of it. Along one side of the main street is a raised wooden pavement, and beneath it is an oily ditch. Borysiaw's main waterway is a narrow, sluggish, oily stream. On its banks the town's refuse is cast, and the market booths are erected alongside, while the local washerwomen—though from external appearances one would judge that laundresses did not exist there at all—do their washing in its oily depths.

The Modern Way.

One friend who has spent a long and useful life and looks good for another half century expects his reward in heaven, and meantime is a philosopher. He can talk on any subject under the sun, from "the flower of poesy" to "the precession of the equinoxes." He apparently knows the "Iliad" and "Odyssey" by heart, so I knew that when he handed me a bit of verse it must be good.

"Here is a hymn on the solar system or some other lofty theme," thought I, placing the sheet in my letter case. When I arrived home I read:

The lizard climbed a wall. He climbed it once.
He climbed it twice—then crawled away.
The bee sipped a flower. He sipped it once.
He sipped it twice—then flew away.
The man kissed a maid. He kissed her once,
He kissed her twice—then walked away.
The wall wasn't sunny; the flower had no honey;
The maid had no money. Funny!

The problem now is whether the contribution is a joke or a gem.—National Magazine.

A Nice Bird.

"Do you like a nice bird?" asked the host as they sat down to the table.

"Oh, yes!" responded the guest immediately and enthusiastically.

"You ought to call on my sister," explained the other. "She's got one of the finest canaries you ever saw. Well, what kind of a sandwich do you think you can eat?"—London Telegraph.

Cures Dyspepsia; Trial Is Free

It is a popular mistake that only wealthy people who eat rich and highly-spiced foods suffer from dyspepsia, or, as it is also known, indigestion. The laborer in the street, the worker in the field also finds himself a victim of this disorder. Among the very greatest sufferers from it are women.

Dyspepsia is indicated by a constant feeling of laziness, by loss of appetite and troubled sleep, by sour stomach and distress after eating, by bad complexion and lusterless eyes.

There is no surer and speedier cure for this trouble than Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which dyspeptics have been using successfully for twenty years. This great herb laxative compound cured Capt. Chirs, of Buffalo, Ia., of dyspepsia and sour stomach that he had had for forty years, or until the lucky day that he heard of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It cured Joel Adams, of Montgomery, Ala., after suffering continuously for sixteen months. These are only a few of the many. But it is not expensive to be cured with this grand remedy, as it can be bought at any drug store in a 50-cent or $1 bottle.

Your very neighbors are probably lifelong users of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, but if you want to know without exposure what it will do for you personally, send your name to Dr. Caldwell and he will be glad to send you a free trial bottle. He is actually anxious to have you make a test of his remedy.

Thousands of families everywhere keep it in the house against sick spells or emergency as constipation, sour stomach, indigestion, biliousness, dyspepsia, heartburn, torpid liver, etc., which may come on a member of the family any day. It is pleasant to the taste, acts gently and does not gripe. It is the great children's laxative tonic.

If there is anything about your ailment that you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 500 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill.

Dining Room of a Circus.

The discipline of an army reigns supreme in circus life, and it is always interesting to watch now the thousand or more people of such an organization are fed three meals a day without a hitch and as silently as in a big hotel. The grass serves as a carpet, and the forty or more waiters move quickly in and out. The kitchen tent is completely equipped with pastry ovens, warming tables, steam vats for stewing, steam urns for coffee and tea, boiling ovens and numberless other cooking utensils. The force of cooks numbers sixteen, including the three which tend the campfire, at which nothing but soup is prepared. The ranges fold up and are carried in wagons, and the tents are lighted with electricity at night. It is not unusual to serve as many as 5,000 pancakes for breakfast, and 600 loaves of bread are used each day, in addition to crackers and biscuit. The meat consumed each day is somewhere near 1,600 pounds. Such provisions as celery, young onions, strawberries, radishes, melons, etc., are bought in each town, often cleaning out the entire market. An advance agent of the commissary department keeps well in advance of the show, contracting for its supplies for man and beast.—Popular Mechanics.

A Craving For Sweets.

Advocating the use of sweet fruits, preserves, sugar and good candy by children, Dr. Woods Hutchinson in Success says that a craving for sweets is nature's call for the substance which is "a full blown member of the great trinity of nutrient materials, sugar (carbohydrate), meat (protein) and fat. Sugar is wood, coal, gasoline for the muscle engine. Every time the tiny engine gives one of its rhythmical explosions—that is to say, when a muscle contracts—a certain amount of sugar is burned up. It is fortunate for people whom a mistaken conscience deprives of sweets that the human body can manufacture sugar out of many foods, out of meat, milk, vegetables and grains; otherwise the body would go into the desperate business of manufacturing sugar out of its own tissues, which is precisely what diabetics did in the days when this disease was supposed to be due to too much sugar in the food and physicians tried to cure it by cutting sweets and sweetmakers out of the patient's diet.

Would Bequeath Her Ears.

Harriet Martineau displayed originality in the provisions she made at one time for the disposal of her remains. James Payn relates that, having consulted Toynbee, the distinguished aurist, with regard to her deafness, "she was so pleased with the interest he took in her case that she resolved to leave him by testamentary bequest her ears. She announced this intention in the presence of her medical man, Mr. Shepherd, who to my infinite amazement observed: 'But, my dear madam, you can't do that. It will make your other legacy worthless.' The fact was, in the interest of science, Miss Martineau had already left her head to the Phrenological society. I asked the doctor how he came to know that. 'Oh,' he said, 'she told me so herself. She has left £10 in her codicil to me for cutting it off.' The doctor, however, died before his patient, and the Phrenological society never received the legacy of her head.—London Chronicle.

A Cheerful Letter.

The following was sent by a countryman to his son in college not many years ago:

My Dear Son—I write to send you two pair of old breeches, that you may have a new coat made of them; also some new socks, which your mother knit by cutting down some of mine. Your mother sends you $10 without my knowledge, and for fear you will not spend it wisely I have kept back half and only send five. Your mother and I are well, except your sister Annie has got the measles, which we think would spread among other girls if Tom had not had them before, and he is the only one left. I hope you are well and will do honor to my teachings. If you do not you are an ass, and your mother and myself are your affectionate parents.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 14.—Six men lost their lives and twelve of their shipmates spent the most terrible hours of their existence when the steamer George Stone, owned by M. A. Bradley of Cleveland, went ashore at Grub reef, near Peless Island, in Lake Erie, early Wednesday morning and slowly ground herself to pieces on the desolate shore, ten miles from the nearest inhabited land.

Attacked by Union Sailors.

Eight hours later ten shivering men stepped from the deck of the steamer F. M. Osborne at the foot of Brush street, and within ten minutes were called on to defend themselves from a brutal attack made on them by union sailors, who threw one of the wreck survivors into the river, severely injured others by means of bricks and fists and put the little party into wild retreat. Not until the fight was over did the police appear on the scene, and they escorted the scattered remnants of the crew of the Stone to Captain J. W. Westcott's office at the foot of Bates street.

Captain Howell and seven men started for shore in a steel boat when the Stone stranded, but the frail craft capsized and six of the craft's occupants drowned before they could reach shore.

The steamer George Stone, 270 feet long, 40 feet beam, and one of the old freighters constructed of timber, left Ashtabula at 3:30 o'clock Monday afternoon, with a crew of eighteen men, including the captain, and a cargo of coal, bound for Racine, Wis. Darkening skies and a sharp wind threatened stormy weather, and even as it cleared the outer harbor the lake began to show the effects of the wind and was lashing itself into a fury. Within three hours the vessel was floundering in a heavy sea, and by midnight the captain and crew found themselves unable to cope with the elements. All that night and next day the vessel managed to keep steerage way.

Water Poured Into Boat.

Sheets of water poured into the boat as she lay in the trough of the sea, and further trouble was added when a serious leak threatened to founder the vessel miles from land. All pumps were kept going, and the steamer staggered on through the most of Tuesday night, all hands hard at work in a fight for their lives. Two firemen, up to their ankles in water, bravely stoked the fire until, with a jar that carried everyone off their feet, the vessel stranded, and all hands were ordered on deck.

"Land and water appeared the same to us through the blinding sheets of spray, and the pitch darkness prevented us from seeing the shore until we struck," said Irvin Stanley, mate of the vessel.

Waves Quenched Flames.

"There we lay until morning, the eighteen of us, huddled in the narrow pilot house, and we kept ourselves from freezing by lighting a couple of oil lamps. We lay head on to the beach and, although it was a sand bottom, the old boat began to break up quickly. She was so far gone by daybreak that we were forced to go aft, her bow timbers having begun to cave in. As I left the pilot house I warned the men to extinguish the lamps. We had scarcely been out an hour when smoke began pouring from the pilot house, someone having left a lighted lamp, which was overturned by a sudden lurch of the vessel.

"Destruction by fire was now added to our fears, but the water breaking over the decks soon put out the fire after comparatively little damage was done. Our condition had now become desperate. The vessel was a mass of broken beams and deck planks, from the bow to the center of the boat, and Captain Howell decided that our only chance lay in getting help from shore.

"A metal boat we had was safely lowered, and Captain Howell chose

CAME A TRICK ON PRESIDENT

Arizona Citizens Ran Him Ahead of Schedule Into Phoenix.

HUSTLED HIM OVER DESERT

Were to Be Privileged to Have Him Only One Hour — Railroad People Say Governor Ordered Them to Run Fast—Taft Accepts Hoax Smilingly.

Prescott, Ariz., Oct. 14.—Arizona tried her hand Wednesday at imposing on the president's good nature, and like California she got away with it. The president was scheduled to arrive in Phoenix at 12 o'clock and remain there an hour. The Arizona folk thought that wasn't long enough for the president to entertain the entire town, so they protested to Secretary Carpenter at Washington. The secretary declined, however, to alter the schedule, and the Arizonans, with the assistance of the officials of the Southern Pacific railroad, took matters in their own hands.

The Southern Pacific people say that Governor Sloan ordered them to run the train ahead of its schedule into Phoenix. At any rate they hauled the president over the Arizona desert at a clip that filled his car with a dust cloud and landed him in Phoenix just two hours ahead of his schedule. That meant three hours of Taft instead of one for dear old Phoenix.

The governor, most of the other territory officials and a Phoenix local committee attached themselves to the Taft train before daylight and then run things to suit themselves.

The president accepted Phoenix's prolonged hospitality smilingly, as he has most other attempts to impose on him. His good nature is a marvel to those who are traveling with him. He climbed into one of the automobiles on arrival here and like a martyr threw himself upon the mercies of local committees. They hurried him first to the capitol, where the president had the pleasure of meeting each of the committeemen. Then they jumped him into a park a mile away. There the president promised to do everything in his power to have Arizona admitted to statehood and incidentally gave the Arizonans some good advice about drawing their constitution.

TWO PECULIAR ACCIDENTS.

Grand Rapids Men Hurt in Unique Ways.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Oct. 14.—Two accidents of peculiar nature have occurred here, resulting in the injury of two men. R. J. Weber, thirty-eight, employed by the Grand Rapids Ice company, while driving a wagon laden with ice, fell from the seat under the wheels. The wagon passed over his body diagonally from hip to shoulder. The right leg was fractured, but he was unhurt otherwise.

A. G. Hersey, thirty-eight years old, an employe of the American Express company, while on his way home from work, stepped to the gutter and fractured his right ankle. Both injured men were taken to Butterworth hospital.

Narrowly Escapes Suffocation.

Owosso, Mich., Oct. 14.—Buried under a slide of gravel while helping excavate a basement for a new store building, Milton H. Van Buren, a civil war veteran, was rescued, unconscious, by fellow workmen, almost suffocated. His right leg was broken above the knee, and he has severe internal injuries.

BRIEF DISPATCHES.

Baron Rosen, the Russian ambassador to the United States, has left St. Petersburg for Vienna, enroute to his post at Washington. The baron was accompanied by his family.

Wholesale poisonings have occurred in the Dukhovshtchina district (Russia) from the eating of ergotized rye. At least fifteen persons have died from this cause.

Announcement has been made that the New York Christian Herald, in response to requests for aid from United States Consul Hanna, at Monterey, Mexico, had shipped 5,000 blankets for the use of flood sufferers in that vicinity.

The will of Robert Hoe, the printing press manufacturer, which has been filed for probate in New York, directs that practically the entire estate shall be divided between his children and grandchildren. No mention is made of Mr. Hoe's widow, who lives here with one of her sons.

Secretary Meyer is anxious that an officer of the navy who is a graduate in law shall be assigned to the responsible duty of judge advocate general of the navy and has accordingly recommended to President Taft the assignment of an officer who possesses that qualification as the head of the bureau.

On information furnished by the federal authorities of Buffalo, N. Y., Horace J. Miller was arrested in Los Angeles, Cal., on a charge of sending lottery tickets through the mail. He was held in $2,500 bail. The alleged lottery is known as the Amsterdam Mining company.

Many to Guard Diaz.

Juarez, Mex., Oct. 14.—Four special trainloads of federal troops have arrived here from the south. The town is swarming with soldiers, who will be constantly on guard during the stay of President Diaz on this part of the border. Another trainload of troops will journey just ahead of the presidential train from Chihuahua to Juarez. All suspicious characters have been arrested and placed in jail.

He Was Out.

Short—If Long calls with that little bill tell him I'm out. Mrs. Short—But that would be telling a falsehood! Short—Nothing of the kind. I'm out of cash.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for testimonials.

The Lure of the Mask

By HAROLD MAC GRATH

Copyright, 1908, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

"There will be thousands of lonesome Americans over there. Out of patriotism, if for nothing else, they ought to come to see us."

"They certainly ought to. But I'm an old kill-joy."

"No, no; go on and tell me all your doubts. You have been over there so many times."

"Well, supposing your tourists are tired after having walked all day through the churches and galleries, they may want to go to bed early. But you never can tell till you try. You may become the rage on the continent. Yet you go into the enemy's country. It isn't the same as going to London, among tolerant cousins. In

She was prettier than her photograph.

Italy and in Germany there is always so much red tape—blundering, confusing red tape, custom duties, excessive charges. But your manager must know what he is doing."

"He has everything in black and white, I believe. But your advice is sensible."

"Do you know anything about Italy or Germany?"

"Only what I learned in my geographies," laughing—"Rome, Florence, Genoa, Venice, Nice, Milan, Strassburg, Cologne and on to Berlin. It is like a fairy story come true."

"Who is your prima donna?" he asked.

"Ah!" Kitty's face became eager with excitement. "Now you have put your finger on the mystery that is bothering us all. Not one of us has seen her or knows her name. She has not rehearsed with us and will not till we reach Naples, where we rest a week. When we speak of her the manager smiles and says nothing, and as none of us has seen the backer Mr. Worth thinks that she herself is the prima donna and backer in one. We think that she is some rich young woman who wishes to exploit her voice. There's a lot of them in the world. I wish I knew her. Little has been said about the venture in the papers, and I'm glad. We may prove a perfect fizzle, and the less said the better. As we can't walk back, I must learn to swim. Lunch is ready, every one!"

The mummers and the outsiders flocked into the small dining room. There was plenty to eat; beer, soda, whisky and two magnums of champagne, Merrihew's contribution to the feast. Hillard listened with increasing amusement to the shop talk. It was after 1 when they returned to the sitting room, where the piano stood. The wine was now opened, and toasts were drunk. O'Mally told inimitable stories. There was something exceedingly droll in that expressive Irish face of his.

Worth did not drink, but Hillard did not like his handsome face, any the more for this virtue. He sang remarkably well, however, and with a willingness Hillard had not believed he possessed. He wondered vaguely why he disliked the man. Otherwise Hillard enjoyed himself vastly.

"Mr. Merrihew has been telling me all about you," said Kitty.

"You mean, of course, my good qualities," replied Hillard.

"To hear him talk one would think that you possessed nothing else. But I am sure that you have glaring faults such as a man might pass over and a woman go round."

"I believed that Merrihew had a serious fault till tonight," he said.

She looked at him quickly and colored.

"Has the foolish boy been telling you that I refused to marry him? I like him very much," she added gravely, "but I shall never marry any man till I have ceased to love the stage. I am not a whit less extravagant than he is. How could the two of us live on an income which he himself admits that he cannot live within? A month after I am gone he will forget all about me."

"Merrihew is the most loyal man I know," Hillard declared.

"Of course he is loyal! And he is always in earnest—for the moment."

And then they both laughed.

It was outrageously late, nearly 4, when the revelers took leave. Merrihew was happy with that evanescent happiness which goes hand in glove with late suppers and magnums.

"Isn't she a little wonder, Jack?"

"Yes, she is, Dan. It might be a good thing for you to marry a sensible little woman like that. But she won't have you."

"No, she won't." Merrihew reached for his watch. "Four a. m."

"Say, what do you think of that man Worth?"

"Very good voice, but he's too handsome."

"Oh, go on! You're as fine a looking chap as there is in New York. But this man Worth has the looks of a lady killer. He's been eying Kitty, but it doesn't go. Hang it, I can't see why she won't marry me now."

"You must have patience."

"Or more money. Can't O'Mally tell a good story, though?"

"Yes, but I should hate to turn him loose in my wine cellars. I imagine he will praise anything good to drink but water."

Merrihew roared.

"Well, here's your station, Dan. Shall I see you tomorrow?"

"Eight-thirty in the park. Nothing like a horse for a headache."

Hillard arrived home tired and sleepy, but as he saw a letter on the stand in the hall his drowsiness passed quickly. There was no other blue envelope like it. She now had his house address; she was interested enough to look it up. She did not follow his lead and write in Italian; she wrote in English—crisp English too. Again there was neither beginning nor ending. But this was a letter. There was something here of the woman, something to read and read again:

I had told the maid to burn your letter, but she left it on the floor where I had thrown it, and I came across it this morning. It looked rather pathetic. So I am writing you against my better judgment. Yes, I know your name. I find that I am well acquainted with people you know. I am a woman who often surrenders to the impulse of the moment. I may or may not answer any future letter from you. You write very good Italian, but it will surprise you to learn that I detest all things that are Italian. Once I loved them well. Why should you wish to know me? Our ways are as divergent as the two poles. Happy because I sing? There are some things over which we can sing or laugh, but of which we cannot speak without crying. Happy or unhappy, what can this matter to you? To you I shall always remain the lady in the fog. Are you rich, young, talented? I care not in the least. Perhaps it amuses me to add to your confusion. Find me? I think not. Misguided energy!

Hillard put the letter away, extinguished the lights and passed up to his room. This was a direct challenge. He would accept it. This time he would use no personal to tell her that a letter awaited her. She should make the inquiries herself. And from the mail clerk he would obtain a description of the elusive Mme. Angot. Next morning he rode in the park with Merrihew. Again he saw the veiled lady on the Sandford black. Out of normal curiosity he telephoned the stables and made inquiries. The reply was short. No one at the stables knew the lady, but she rode the horse on proper authority.

That night he wrote:

I shall keep on writing till you cease to reply. Let me be frank with you. I am bored. So are you. The pleasure you derive in keeping up this mystery engages you. You bid me to find you. I accept the challenge. You must understand at once that it is the mystery that interests me. It is the unknown that attracts me. I am mentally painting you in all sorts of radiant colors. You defy me to find you. There is nothing so reliable as the unexpected, nothing so desperately uncertain as a thing assured. I warn you that I shall lay all manner of traps, waylay your messengers, bribe them. I shall find out where you live. The rest will be simple.

She replied:

I have no desire to alleviate your confessed boredom. Your persistence would be praiseworthy if well directed. Waters wear away stone, the wind crumbles the marble, but a woman is not moved till she wishes to be. I never thought that I should dabble in an intrigue of this sort, and I am surprised at the amusement it affords me. I really owe you some gratitude. The few I have met who know you tell me that you are a "nice young man."

Every man has some portion of self love. So his next effort was a passionate denial that he was "nice." When should he meet her? The postman brought him a letter which contained one word—Nimmer! He sent her four pages, a frank and witty description of himself and his friends.

On the day she received this letter a cablegram came to her from the far Mediterranean. Whatever it contained had the effect to cause all restraint to disappear from the tone of her letters. They became charming, and more and more Hillard found himself loving a voice. All his watching, all his traps, came to no successful end. She was too clever for him. He sought the mail department of the great newspaper; the clerk couldn't remember, there were so many calling for mail. Letters passed to and fro daily now, but always she declared that it was impossible for them to meet. No, it was out of the question to dine with him in a restaurant. It was equally out of the question to cook a dinner where she lived, as she and her maid dined at a small restaurant near by. Finally he proposed to bring the dinner all cooked from the club. Two days went by without a sign; then the blue letter came.

I surrender. The most fatal thing in life is curiosity. It has the power to lead us into all manner of trouble. And I have my share of curiosity. Remember, you never would have found me. I may dwell in a garret; I may be hideous; perhaps nothing remains to me but my voice. And now the terms. And if you do not follow them confidently and blindly your dinner will grow cold in the carriage. Dinner will be at 8, Feb. 1. At 7 a carriage will call for you. The messenger will blindfold you. He will then proceed to the club and take the dinner and bring you here. Be warned! If you so much as lift the corner of the bandage, the romance will end then and there. I realize that I am doing something very foolish and unwise; but, as you say, I am a woman who has seen much of the world. Thus I have my worldly side. I shall use it as a buffer.

"Blindfolded!" Hillard scrubbed his chin. All these precautions! Who was she? What was she? Since there was no escape, blindfolded he would go.

At half after 6 on the night of the 1st of February, then, he began to dress. It was some time since he had taken such particular care.

"The signor seems in high spirits tonight," observed Giovanni as he laid out the linen.

"Man, I'm happy and greatly excited. Do you recollect the lady who sang under my window? I am going to meet her tonight. The mystery will be a mystery no longer."

"Ah!" Giovanni stroked his lips doubtfully. "It is not like the signor to plunge blindly into adventures like this."

"The very word, blindly. I go blindfolded, amico. What do you think of that?"

"Blindfolded?" Giovanni was horrified. "It is a trap!" he cried. "They will assassinate you! No; you shall not go! In Rome, at the carnivals, it is an old game. They will rob you."

"Take the number of the cab as I get in. If anything should happen, give the number to the police."

Giovanni, with a sharp movement of the hands, expressed his resignation to the worst. He knew the futility of arguing with his master. But he followed him down to the hall and tied on the bandage himself. He was honest about it, too, for Hillard could see nothing. Then the messenger boy took him by the hand and led him to the carriage. As the two were climbing in Giovanni spoke rapidly in his native tongue.

"There is no number on the carriage!"

"Too late to bother now."

The carriage rolled off toward the club, where the dinner, hot and smoking, was taken on.

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN.

THE MARTIN REVIVAL will appear at the Bradley Opera House on Wednesday Oct. 20. It is an undisputed fact that there is no better production of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" on the road today than that made by Al. W. Martin several years ago and improved with each season since. It is the largest company with possibly few exceptions, such as special revivals, ever used in the production of the play, it is claimed, for it contains a company of the original "Georgia Shouters" who play the negroes in the cotton fields, and who are seen in plantation dances and heard in plantation songs in scenes showing the quarters of the negroes on a plantation where the master was a humane man. There are solos, quartettes and choruses in which the old-time songs as well as the new ones are sung by voices having the peculiar negro sweetness. There are a number of excellent dancers and they dance, among others, the latest shuffle, called the "Siwanee Shine." There is a pack of genuine bloodhounds, gaunt and ugly-looking beasts, such as were used to track escaped negro slaves, and such as are now used to track escaped criminals in the south. These bloodhounds brought from the south and a part of a pack used by a prison contractor at his convict pen in Georgia, are used in the scenes where the escaped slaves are followed, and with their deep-mouthed baying add impressiveness to the escape of Eliza and of George Harris.

The scenery is a special feature of the production. Some of the most notable scenes include the humble cabin of Uncle Tom, and an old Southern road, Skinner's tavern, the ice-gorged Ohio river by moonlight, the home of Phineas Friend, the wild rocky pass in Southern Ohio, and the transformation called "The Holy City." Band concerts twice daily, 3 and 7 p. m.

U. OF M. ATTENDANCE LARGE.

The total enrollment of the University of Michigan up to last Saturday night was 4,627, which is an increase of 212 over last year.

The college of medicine, of homeopathy and pharmacy, shows a decrease in the attendance over last year. The pharmics have lost 11, the homeopathic comes within one of reaching last year's work. In the case of medicine, the decrease is partly due to the required six years' course, which was established this year. The increase in the literary department is large.

The faculty members expect the attendance will be increased, as the school year advances.

SALOON MEN WORRIED.

Lansing, Mich., Oct. 14.—How to tell a student is a phase of the new liquor law confronting saloon men, especially in college and university towns, for the law prohibiting the sale of liquor to a student is no respecter of age. If a saloon man sells liquor to a student 50 years old he is liable to prosecution.

QUARTERLY MEETING.

State Board of Health at Lansing, Michigan, October, 1909.

The regular meeting of the State Board of Health was held Friday evening, October 8, 1909, at Lansing, Michigan. There was a full attendance of the Board with the following members: President Angus McLean, M. D., of Detroit, Vice president Malcolm C. Sinclair, M. D., of Grand Rapids, Aaron R. Wheeler, M. D., of St. Louis, Victor C. Vaughan, M. D., of Ann Arbor, Mr. Charles M. Ranger of Battle Creek, Mr. Charles A. Blake of Detroit and Secretary F. W. Shumway of Lansing.

After the usual routine business the Board passed upon some very important business.

Owing to the opposition of some members of the medical profession to making reports on contagious diseases to the health officer, a law was enacted at the last session of the legislature authorizing the State Board of Health to designate these diseases which are communicable and dangerous to the public health and which must be reported by the physician to the local health officer and by the local health officer to the State Board of Health; and in compliance with this law, the Board has declared the following diseases to be dangerously communicable diseases which must be reported by physicians to the local health officer, and by the local health officer to the State Board of Health: Diphtheria, Measles, Meningitis, Pneumonia, Scarlet Fever, Smallpox, Tuberculosis, Typhoid Fever and Whooping-cough.

The Board also passed rules and regulations giving the preventive measures which must be taken for each of the above diseases; and also relating to the abatement of nuisances, to insanitary conditions of school buildings and their surroundings, to jails, and to private or corporation water supply and sewage disposal systems.

The Board also ruled that tetanus, rabies, erysipelas, leprosy and cancer shall be reported for statistical purposes.

The Board also ruled that no person with open tuberculosis should be employed as a teacher in any of the schools of the State.

The Board adopted a resolution instructing Secretary Shumway to prepare and issue a notice to public carriers and schools forbidding the use of the common drinking cup.

A plan was approved by the Board for a conference with railroad officials of the State looking toward the abolishing of the common drinking cup and other improvements in the sanitary conditions of railway cars.

The Board instructed the Secretary to concur with the suggestions made by Surgeon-General Wyman of the United States Public Health and Marine-Hospital Service, looking toward any action for the establishment of a Leprosarium for the care of lepers in the United States.

The Board also instructed the Secretary to suggest to Governor Warner the names of delegates to attend the International Congress on Hygiene Demography, to be held in Washington, D. C., September 28, 1910.

An examination for the licensing of embalmers will be held by the Board in the Upper Peninsula, October 15 and 16, 1909, at Sault Ste. Marie.

An examination for the licensing of embalmers will be held by the Board at Lansing, Michigan, November 17, 1909.

The suggestions of the Committee appointed by the Board to revise the shipping blanks were adopted by the Board, one change being that only white shipping blanks be used by this Board beginning January 5, 1910.

PAINTS ACME QUALITY

If it's a surface to be painted, enameled, stained, varnished or finished in any way, there's an Acme Quality Kind to fit the purpose.

5 Strong Reasons for Fall Painting

1. The wood is thoroughly dry.
Summer's sun has removed all moisture.

2. Paint penetrates deeper into dry wood.
The deeper it goes the better it holds.

3. Fall weather is warm, dry and dependable.
Little danger of cold, damp, rainy days, which endanger the durability of the paint.

4. Wet weather decays and destroys unprotected surfaces.
Lack of paint means unsightly and less valuable property.

5. Fall painting keeps out winter moisture.
The greatest enemy to the life and beauty of all structures.

Ask us about ACME QUALITY HOUSE PAINT (New Era). It insures the greatest protection and beauty, at the least cost per year of service. Questions cheerfully answered.

Formerly Resided In Tecumseh and Well Known Here.

Fred Johnson formerly of this village is facing a charge in Akron, Ohio for the murder of M. R. Hursch at that place on Oct. 7. The clew to Johnston's whereabouts were obtained when his wife at Akron recieved a letter from him requesting her to dispose of their property and join him at Toledo. Johnson is well known in Tecumseh and was the son of John Johnston a former resident of this village. STOMACH TROUBLE.

Had it for years until he heard of Mi-o-na C. A. Wright & Son sell it.

If you suffer from indigestion, belching of gas, lump of lead on stomach, biliousness, dizziness, foul breath nervousness, constipation, or headache, give C. A. Wright & Son 50 cents to-day for a box of Mi-o-na, the celebrated stomach prescription, and if it doesn't cure you they will give you your money back. It relieves painful stomach distress in five minutes. Read the following:

"I had stomach trouble for years. After eating I would be troubled for an hour or so with indigestion. I bought one box of Mi-o-na tablets from Gaffney Drug Co., which completely cured me. That was 12 months ago and to this day I have not been troubled again." J. B. Haskey, Gaffney, S. C., April 20, 1909. Mi-o-na is the best prescription for stomach trouble ever written; not only does it give quick relief, but it cures permanently because it thoroughly cleanses, renovates, builds up and puts elasticity into the stomach and bowels. Mi-o-na is put up in tablet form and is small and easy to swallow. Sold by leading druggists everywhere and in Tecumseh by C. A. Wright & Son who rigidly guarantee them. KENNEDY'S LAXATIVE COUGH SYRUP

Go to the blood if you would drive out Rheumatism. A Wisconsin physician Dr. Shoop, does this with his Rheumatic Remedy—and with seeming success. Rub-ons, says the doctor, never did cure Rheumatism. It is more than skin deep—it is constitutional, always, because of this principle, Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy is perhaps the most popular in existence. It goes by word of mouth from one to another, everywhere. Grateful patients gladly spread results. It is an act of humanity to tell the sick of a way to health. Tell some sick one. Sold by C. A. Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the idea of treating the cause, rather than the effect, would come into practice. A tiny, inside, hidden nerve, says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branche also goes to the Heart, and one to the kidneys. When these "inside nerves" fail, then the organs must falter. Dr. Shoop's Restoratives is directed specifically to these failing nerves. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment patients say they realize a gain. Sold by C. A. Wright & Son.

TO AILING WOMEN

A Little Sound Advice Will Help Many a Sufferer in Tecumseh.

No woman can be healthy and well if the kidneys are sick. Poisons that pass off in the secretions when the kidneys are well, are retained in the body when the kidneys are sick. Kidneys and bladder become inflamed and swollen and worse troubles quickly follow. This is often the true cause of bearing-down pains, lameness, backache, sideache, etc. Uric poisoning also causes headaches, dizzy spells, languor, nervousness and rheumatic pains.

When suffering so, try Doan's Kidney Pills, a remedy that cures sick kidneys. You will get better as the kidneys get better, and health will return when the kidneys are well. Let a Tecumseh woman tell you about Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. George Burrough, W. Potawatamie St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "About a year ago my health began to fail and my whole body began to ache. My kidneys did not act as they should and my back ached a great deal. Knowing of persons who had used Doan's Kidney Pills for similar troubles with the best of results, I procured a box at C. A. Wright & Son's drug store. A few weeks after beginning their use I felt much better and at the present time I am free from the aches and pains. I willingly recommend Doan's Kidney Pills as I know that they are reliable." Sold by C. A. Wright & Son.

Indigestion

stomach trouble is but a symptom of, and not in itself a true disease. We think of Dyspepsia, Heartburn, and Indigestion as real diseases, yet they are symptoms only of a certain specific Nerve sickness—nothing else.

It was this fact that first correctly led Dr. Shoop in the creation of that now very popular Stomach Remedy—Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Going direct to the stomach nerve, it alone brought that success and favor to Dr. Shoop and his Restorative. Without that original and highly vital principle, no such lasting accomplishments could have been had.

For stomach distress, bloating, belching, bad breath and sallow complexion, try Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—and see for yourself what it can and will do. We sell and cheerfully recommend

SMITH-ROOD.

One of the social events of the season was the marriage of Miss Blanche Rood to Mr. Glenn Smith, at the home of the bride's parents at Romeo, Mich., on Wednesday, September 15.

The spacious parlors were filled with more than one hundred guests when, at 4 o'clock, to the beautiful music of the harp, the wedding march was formed. Mr. Robert Rood was master of ceremonies, followed by the ribbon bearers, Masters Jerome Braff and Edmund Procter, then Rev. Huntz with little Mary Greenshields as ring-bearer; next came the groom followed by the bride on her father's arm. The party took their position in front of a bank of pink and white asters, where the ceremony was performed.

After the ceremony the guests repaired to the dining room where an elaborate luncheon was served, the color scheme being carried out in the pink and white effect.

If wedding presents are any indications of popularity one would only need to glance at those showerd upon the bride to know that she is one of Romeo's most popular young ladies.

The out of town guests were Messrs. and Mesdames Bailey, Ruby, Armada, Cook, and Sutton and Mr. Foot, Floyd Smith and Miss Mattie Didder of Detroit; Mr. and Mrs. Smith of Ridgeway; Charles Griggs and wife of Rochester; Mrs. McGeorge and Lewis McGeorge of Cass City; Mr. and Mrs. McAndrews of Ypsilanti.

GAVE LIQUOR AWAY.

Police at Flint Take William Gilbey Into Custody.

Flint, Mich., Oct. 11.—William Gilbey a clerk in a local store, is in jail in default of $300 bail, charged by Chief of Police McCall with bringing whisky into Flint and giving it away in a public place.

The arrest grew out of the apprehension of Patrick Lawler on a charge of intoxication. Lawler was found with a gallon jug of liquor, much of which he had already consumed. Gilbey claimed the property, and it developed to the satisfaction of the police that the alleged owner had been distributing the stuff with a liberal hand in a house on South Saginaw street.

Arthur Hill Is Sick.

Saginaw, Mich., Oct. 11.—According to his friends, Hon. Arthur Hill lies, broken in health, in the North Shore sanitarium, a private institution in Evanston, Ill., just out of Chicago. His friends here believe Mr. Hill's illness is the direct result of the charge made against him by the governor in the campaign for United States senator.

TAFT PREACHES IN FRESNO, CAL.

Very Cosmopolitan Crowd Listened to President.

Fresno, Cal., Oct. 11.—From the snow-capped Sierras, Saturday, President Taft plunged, Sunday, into the summer heat of the San Joaquin valley and arrived here shortly after 3 p. m., with the thermometer hovering about the nineties. He was greeted by practically the entire population of the city and surrounding country and after a short automobile trip through the business section addressed a gathering of many thousands, in the courthouse square.

The president's speech was in reality another Sunday sermon, the third he has preached since his trip began.

His text, quoted from memory, was: "He who conquereth himself is greater than he who taketh a city," and from it the president drew the lesson that popular government must always be a failure unless it is based upon sound common sense and the self restraint that goes to make the good loser.

On his way here President Taft stopped at Merced for three hours and attended morning service at the Presbyterian church. His greeting at Fresno came from probably the most cosmopolitan community he has met in all his travels.

In the throngs that lined the sidewalks was a coningling of Chinese, Japanese, Armenians, Portuguese and a dozen other nationalities.

Pilkerton Won the Race.

At one of the regattas of the National Association of American Oarsmen during the early nineties James Pilkerton, for many years the champion sculler of America, was matched to row double against another team. He and his mate were the champions, and the general belief was that they would win without effort. But the night before the regatta public opinion suddenly and mysteriously changed. Mr. Pilkerton knew that this was not caused by any new development of strength in his opponent or any loss of skill on his own part. After making some quiet inquiries he discovered that there was talk of his rowing mate having been bought up by the other side and of an arrangement to throw the race.

He didn't say anything about his suspicions, but when the two men were seated in the shell and were well out into the deep water he leaned over to his mate and said:

"Look here, you blooming cutthroat! You've got to swim, drown or win this race! You know me!" He won.

Ten Thousand People Follow Hearse to Cemetery.

New York, Oct. 11.—Naphtali Herz Imber, poet, author of the Zionists' national hymn, and translator of Omar Khayam into Hebrew, who died early Friday last, was laid to rest Sunday in Mt. Sinai cemetery, with impressive ceremonies.

Although Imber died penniless, ten Jewish societies, all anxious to do him honor, conducted the service Sunday, and 10,000 men, women and children trudged behind the hearse.

Great men are they who see that spiritual is stronger than any material force.—Emerson.

Best Stomach Remedy Free

It is an old saying that if the stomach is sound the whole body is safe, because so much depends upon the proper working of the stomach. Many persons find themselves with a disorder of the stomach which produces dyspepsia or a peculiar state of biliousness.

If you suffer from both stomach trouble and constipation you are on the way to a very serious disease. From just such conditions come appendicitis, rheumatism, skin diseases and similar disorders, because the waste matter that should have been dispelled from the system through the bowels has found its way into the blood and vitiated it. What is needed at this point is not simply a violent cathartic tablet or salt, which usually does more harm than good, but a gentle laxative tonic like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which people have been using for these ailments for nearly a quarter of a century. It cured J. C. Latham, of Warrensburg, Mo., of stomach trouble of long standing, also William Voll, of 909 Elizabeth St., Louisville, Ky., who had the trouble for fifteen years.

However, if you have stomach trouble you want to know from personal experience what Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will do for you. If so, send your name to the doctor and a free trial bottle will be sent you. You are invited to send for the free bottle, as the results from it will be the best recommendation of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Then you will do as over two million people did last year, go to your druggist and buy a regular bottle at 50 cents or $1, according to the size you prefer. We could mention hundreds and hundreds of families who are never without it. You can never tell when some member of the family will need a laxative, and then no time should be lost taking Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

If there is anything about your ailment that you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 500 Caldwell bldg., Monticello, Ill.

CHOSE DEATH TO CAPTURE

Bank Robber Commits Suicide When Run Down.

SENSATION NEAR CHICAGO

Fashionably Dressed Bandit Rides in Auto to Bank, Enters and Forces Employes Into Cage, Then Skips With $500—Cashier Telephones to Sheriff, Who Pursues Robber.

Chicago, Oct. 14.—A fashionably dressed bandit, who had previously robbed the savings bank of D. M. Eyskine & Co., in Highland Park, Ill., an aristocratic suburb on the lake shore, twenty-five miles north of Chicago, committed suicide by shooting himself in the mouth when driven to bay by the Highland Park marshal and a posse of citizens.

A companion of the robber, who had driven him to the bank in an automobile, was captured immediately following the robbery, forcing the principal perpetrator, of the daring daylight crime to flee on foot. He was engaged in a running duel with Town Marshal John Sheehan, who was the target for many bullets from the fugitive bandit's revolver, one of which went through the sleeve of his coat.

After running several blocks and failing to drive back his pursuer, the robber ran into a shed, closely followed by Sheehan. When he saw Sheehan enter the shed with his revolver levelled at his head, the fugitive put the muzzle of his own revolver in his mouth and fired a shot which resulted in his death almost immediately.

The young man arrested, who appeared in the guise of a chauffeur, positively refused after his arrest to discuss anything concerning his or his companion's identity.

Spectacular Robbery.

The robbery was conducted in a deliberate and spectacular manner, the bandit securing about $500 in gold coin and bills.

Cashier Duffy became suspicious when his visitor entered the bank, the robber standing in a remote corner of the room while Duffy closed the front doors, it being closing time. The side door he left open for the stranger to depart. Fearing something wrong, Duffy hurriedly took a large amount of money and locked it in the vault. Several hundred dollars still were in the cage. As he entered the cage, Duffy was confronted by the robber, who covered him with a revolver.

"Call everyone in here into that cage," said the bandit, "or I'll blow your head off. Hurry up."

Duffy, unarmed, complied with the demand. Miss Fitzgerald and Richards came into the cage, while the intruder helped himself to all the money in sight. He carefully tucked the gold and bills into his pocket and then exclaimed:

"If any of you attempt to follow me I will kill you."

He started for the door, and Duffy immediately telephoned the marshal's office, across the street. By the time the robber reached the automobile Marshal Sheehan was running toward the bank. At sight of him the robber broke into a run, and citizens held the chauffeur. The chase after the fugitive was a thrilling one, but ended in his suicide within a few minutes. All the money taken from the bank was found in his clothing.

The dead man was identified as one who had registered at the Avenue House, in Evanston, Ill., as "J. C. Wilson, Milwaukee, Wis." The automobile was loaned him by J. E. Koslyn, a wealthy mining man, who lives in Evanston. The man under arrest is Koslyn's chauffeur.

Flames Clean Up on Large Lumber Mill.

Menominee, Mich., Oct. 18.—The plant of the J. W. Wells Lumber company, at Marinette, Wis., has been totally destroyed by fire, and with a damage of over $30,000. The plant alone was destroyed, and the stock and adjacent buildings, valued at half a million, were not injured.

The company was just completing the construction of a $200,000 plant for the manufacture of hardwood flooring, and the fire loss will hold up the construction work. The structure will be rebuilt.

EVIDENCE AGAINST FRITCH

Woman Saw Millman Girl Enter His Office Aug. 27.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 18.—Evidence showing positively that Mabel Millman entered the office of Dr. George F. Fritch, 24 Washington boulevard Aug. 27, will be placed in the hands of Prosecuting Attorney Van Zile by Sheriff George T. Gaston. It will serve as the connecting link in the chain around the physician who is charged with slaying the Ann Arbor girl and throwing her dismembered body into Ecorse creek.

A letter from a mysterious woman friend of Mabel Millman, which the sheriff received recently, completed the case against Dr. Fritch.

Dr. Fritch has been charged with manslaughter. His Attorney, Frank Lodge, says he will stand mute when arraigned.

State Employe Dies.

Flint, Mich., Oct. 18.—Mrs. Byrd Lewis, widow of Charles J. Lewis, formerly state secretary of the United Commercial Travelers' association, is dead in Hurley hospital, of Bright's disease. Until three months ago, when her illness became serious, Mrs. Lewis was employed in the office of the secretary of state at Lansing.

The town of Chile, an important point twenty miles above Rama, Nicaragua, is in the hands of the insurgents. There was sharp fighting before the place was taken. The leader of the Zelaya forces and many on both sides were killed.

A dispatch from Rome reports the arrest at Sestrilerante, Liguria, of Carlos Modena, Spaniard, who, it is stated, was concerned in a plot against King Victor Emanuel. A revolver, a dagger and 5,000 francs were found in his possession. He was proceeding to Racconigi, where the king is sojourning.

Willie Boy, the Piute desperado, for whom three armed posses had been searching the San Bernardino desert, was found dead on the summit of Bullion mountain, near San Bernardino, Cal., where he had been making his last stand. He had killed himself with the last shot in his rifle and had been dead for several days.

At the Gibson House parlors Mrs. Nicholas Longworth acted as saleswoman. Mrs. Longworth sold one flag for $100, the highest price received throughout the day.

The discovery that the Equitable Life Assurance society, in New York, has been systematically robbed by one of its clerks for a considerable time has led to the arrest of the clerk, James R. TREASURER DISAPPEARS

Oxford May Be Out Between $3,000 and $4,000.

M. LEE HAGLE IS WANTED

Was Also Partner in Bank at Hadley, Which Has Been Closed, Owing, It is Alleged, to Forgeries Committed by Hagle—Oxford Bondsman Became Suspicious and Started Probe.

Oxford, Mich., Oct. 18.—M. Lee Hagle, village treasurer of Oxford, and part owner of banks in Lum, Hadley and Leonard, is missing, and, according to the statement given out by Dr. C. W. McKinnon, one of his four bondsmen as treasurer, is short between $3,000 and $4,000 in his accounts with the village. And from Hadley comes a report that the bank there closed its doors Friday morning, when it was alleged that to promote the sale of the institution Hagle forged two notes for $1,000 each. Hagle has been treasurer since the April election.

While no formal complaint has been made against Hagle, Dr. McKinnon says that he and the other bondsmen will take every precaution to protect themselves. It is expected that an audit of the village books will be ordered Monday morning.

In the Hadley matter, it appears, the stock depositors and creditors of the bank will be protected by Hagle's partner in the bank, Mrs. Frank Vannar, now living in Detroit, who says that she is willing and able to pay every dollar that is short.

The first suspicion that all might not be right in the village treasurer' office came Friday, says Dr. McKinnon, when it was learned here that the bank at Hadley had closed its doors. Then he and the other bondsmen decided that it was time to look into the matter. The books of the treasurer, however, could not be examined until Sunday morning, and after an all day's investigation the alleged shortage was announced.

Hagle came to Oxford Thursday night from Hadley and left on the first car for Detroit. Since then he has not been seen here. Mrs. Hagle refused to answer a question Sunday night as to the whereabouts of her husband.

Hagle was about thirty-five years of age, has been married about twelve years and has two children, a girl of eleven and a boy of four. The children, with their mother, are at the Hagle home here, one of the finest residences in the village.

LAY CORNERSTONE OCT. 22.

Many Masons Expected to Gather at Flint For Occasion.

Flint, Mich., Oct. 18.—One of the greatest Masonic gatherings in the history of this section of the state is expected here Oct. 22, when the cornerstone of the new $100,000 Masonic temple is laid. Half a thousand Knights Templar will be in line.

One of the unique articles to be placed in the stone is a piece of rock taken from Solomon's temple, underneath the city of Jerusalem, by Rev. C. E. Lapp of this city. He has given it to the temple association, and, suitably marked, the ancient stone will be placed in the new.

Suicide Theory Exploded.

Battle Creek, Mich., Oct. 18.—One certainty developed from the examination of William Crandall, alleged wife murdered, namely, that the woman could not have committed suicide. This upsets the theory that she cut her husband's throat and then her own, instead of vise versa. Physicians on the stand swore that Mrs. Crandall could not have possibly cut her way into her own spinal column, which had nicked the razor that caused her death.

RAILROAD OFFICIALS IN BAD WRECK

Fireman Flags On-coming Train and Saves Their Lives.

New York, Oct. 18.—William K. Vanderbilt, Sr., principal owner of the New York Central; W. C. Brown, president of the road, and William H. Newman, the former president, now a director, were pretty well shaken up in their private cars Sunday morning, when the New York express, train No. 28, was ditched by a broken rail near Rhinecliff station. One man was killed and ten people were hurt when the express was flung from the track.

Just about the time that Mr. Vanderbilt, Mr. Newman and President Brown were picking themselves up from the car floors, where they had been pitched by the shock of the sudden stop, H. Schelmeyer, the fireman of the New York express, was running up the track, swinging a red lantern. With the train piled up in a heap back of him, Schelmeyer had his mind on just one thing—No. 73, the midnight express, which swung out of the Grand Central station for the north at 12:30 a. m., was due at Rhinecliff in a few minutes. He knew as he ran that the chances were about even on his stopping the express before she piled into the wreckage of the New York express.

Schelmeyer panted down the track, whirling the red lamp as he sprinted. Two minutes after he got a safe distance from the derailed train, he saw the yellow headlight of the midnight express shooting toward him in the darkness. The fireman yelled and swung the lamp about his head, and the midnight express gave a surprised toot or two and came to a halt.

"And let me tell you," said Schelmeyer, afterwards, "it seemed like a week of Sundays before I could get that red lamp and beat it down the track. And I was not loafing when I hit the track, you bet."

President Brown, directing the train crew, found that a man was dead and eight men injured in the overturned smoker. The dead man was a young Pole name James Krakowski, who lived in New York. In the fright of the crashing and jarring, Krakowski had put his head out of a window to see what was the matter. A tie came up out of the dark and crushed his head.

Broken seats and flying glass hurt seven others in the car.

All the injured save a Miss Merriman were brought to this city on a special train.

COOK CANCELS LECTURES.

Will Devote His Time to Refuting Charges Brought Against Him.

New York, Oct. 18.—Dr. Frederick Cook, the explorer, has not left town again to take up his lecture tour, but remains at the Waldorf. He has announced that he is going to cancel all the lectures he could consistently and fight the detractions that have risen against him.

He made a start on this program on Sunday by appearing before a meeting of the committee of the Explorers' club, which has in hand the question whether or not Dr. Cook really did climb Mt. McKinley back in 1906. Dr. Cook wanted to know whether or not any charges against him had been filed with the club—definite charges that he had not made the climb that he announced that he had made on his return from Alaska. The doctor said that he wanted to answer such charges if they had been made. If they had not been regularly filed, he did not want to put himself on the defensive by producing his proofs.

Dr. Cook was told that no regular charges had been preferred, but that, questions having arisen as to the authenticity of his claim through the recent statements of the guide, Barrill, and others, an investigation was in progress with regard to that question. Dr. Cook said that he was going on with his plans for another expedition to Mt. McKinley to prove the validity of his claim.

The doctor has suspended his interviews with the newspaper men and to inquirers usually sends down word that he would see no one and that there was no statement to be given out.

Rooms Full of Plunder.

Battle Creek, Mich., Oct. 18.—Following the arrest of John Myers of Chicago for shoplifting, the police unearthed a "plant" in his rooms on North Washington avenue containing every article imaginable, from toilet soap to fur boas. Myers was detected almost by accident while shoplifting in Welden & Hobbs' department store.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for testimonials.

The Lure of the Mask

By HAROLD MAC GRATH

Copyright, 1908, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

CHAPTER V.

THE MASK.

"JOININ' th' Elks?" asked the boy when Hillard was well under way once more.

"No; it's a seance. They are going to call up my fate round a table."

"Ugh! Aw, go-wan! Dey don't call up no ghosts wit' French cider and hot boids." The boy relapsed into silence.

By and by the carriage stopped.

"Dis is where we alights, me lold!" the boy jeered. "An' no lookin', mind."

Hillard found the carriage steps and landed safely. He stood for a moment, listening. They were in a quiet part of the city; no elevated or surface cars were near. He was assured that the location was exclusive. Garrets are not to be found in quiet places.

"Look out for th' steps," said the boy, again taking Hillard by the hand.

"And you be careful of that basket."

"I ain't lettin' it drop any."

Winding steps, thought the blindfolded man. He could recollect none. It seemed to him that they stood there five minutes before the door opened. When it did, the boy passed in the basket and resolutely pushed Hillard into the hall. The door closed gently, and the adventure was begun. Whither would it lead him?

"Take off the bandage the signor may now," said a voice in broken English.

"Thanks!" He tore the handkerchief from his eyes and blinked. The hall was so dimly lighted that he could see nothing distinctly.

"The signor's coat and hat."

He passed over these articles, shook the wrinkles from his trousers, smoothed his chin and stood at attention. The maid eyed him with abundant approval, then knocked timidly on the door leading to the drawing room.

She was masked!

"Avanti!" called a soft voice.

Hillard gathered in his courage, opened the door and stepped inside. On a divan near a lamp sat a woman in black. Only a patch of white throat could be seen, for her shoulders were not bare and her arms only to the elbows. Her back was turned squarely. But what a head! He caught his breath. It glowed like a copper beech in the sunshine.

"Madam?" he faltered. He spoke English and not very firmly.

The woman turned. Hillard took a step backward and blundered against a pedestal.

She was masked!

Masked! Only her mouth and chin were visible, and several little pieces of court plaster effectually disguised these. There was a mystery. He to come blindfolded and she to wear a mask—extraordinary!

"And this," she said ironically, "is the gentleman who leaned out of the window."

He brought all his faculties together, for he knew he would need them in this encounter. "Supposing I had fallen out of it—well, it could not have mattered. I should not have been more at your feet than I am now." This was very good, considering how dry his tongue was.

Hillard reached a chair successfully enough, but he never could recollect how. He sat down as a bashful man sits down in a crowded ballroom, with his knees drawn in tightly and his feet at sympathetic angles.

Presently she laughed with malice.

"You are not comfortable in that chair."

"That is true, and yet it is soft and roomy. I am uneasy. Perhaps you recall to my subconsciousness a period in my former existence on earth, or, if you will, one of my ancestors."

"I fail to understand."

"Well, a Hillard 200 years ago had his head cut off by an ax. His executioner wore a mask."

"A mistake. Your ancestor should have been hanged."

"And I along with him, you would imply?"

"Are you not Irish? I have known Irishmen of the name of Hillard."

"They were in disguise. But I have a generous strain of Irish blood in me; otherwise I shouldn't have had the courage to follow up an adventure like this."

"Thanks. The compliment is rather ambiguous."

"My compliments cannot possibly be more ambiguous than your appearance. Surely there will be an hour for unmasking."

"It has already begun, Mr. Hillard."

"So I am the one who is to be unmasked. Well, I have only the mask nature gave to me. I wish she had been more liberal. But I shall see what can be done with it."

He took note of her teeth and felt a sudden tinge of regret. One may disguise the face and hair, but the teeth are always the same. Two lower teeth on the right side appeared to be gone; the others were firm and glistening white. It was a pity, for a woman's teeth are as much her glory as her hair.

Silence. The ruddy light on her hair fascinated him.

"What is it?" she demanded.

"Your hair," with a simplicity which silenced her. "You have the most beautiful hair I have ever seen."

"Thank you. And yet, for all you know, it may be a fine wig."

"If it is I shall never be sure of anything again. Am I in prosaic New York? Have you not by some carpet magic transported me to old Europe? If a dozen conspirators came in in cowls to render me the oath I should not be at all surprised."

"There is no magic, only a mask."

"And there is no way of seeing behind that?"

"None—absolutely none. I am told that you are a gentleman, so I am confident that you will not stoop to use force."

"Only the force of eloquence, if ever I may lay claim to that again."

"You are beginning well, for I tell you, Mr. Hillard, I shall expect but the most brilliant wit from you tonight. As for me, I shall only interpolate occasionally. Now, begin."

"I am not used to dancing without the pole."

"You must learn. Dance!"

"Upon what—nothing? And how shall I know that my dancing pleases you?"

"I agree to tell you. I wear this mask tonight because I am taking a surreptitious leaf out of my book of cares."

"You are, then, seeking a diversion?"

"Nothing more or less. Do not flatter yourself that there is anything personal or romantic on my side. I am bored."

"I am wholly in your hands," he said, "and they are very beautiful hands."

"Is there anything more beautiful than a cat's paw when the claws are hidden? Never judge a woman by her hands." Nevertheless she buried her hands in the depths of a down pillow. She had forgotten her rings. She slipped them off and managed to hide them.

"I promise to remember. Your letters"—he began diffidently. Where the deuce was his tongue? Was he to be tongued tied all the evening before this Columbine, who, with the aid of her mask, was covertly laughing at his awkwardness?

"My letters? A woman often writes what she will not say and says what she will not write. Did you not ask me to disillusion you?"

"Yes, but softly, softly. I begin to believe one thing—you brought me here to teach me a lesson. Gentlemen should never use the personal column."

"Nor should ladies read it. I am not saving any mercy for myself!" with laughter.

"Shall I begin with my past?"

"Something less horrifying, if you please!"

"I object to the word nice," he said. "I should have preferred milksop! Hadn't you better try some new kind of torture?"

This time her laughter was relaxed and joyful. And somehow Hillard felt more at ease. He was growing accustomed to the mask. He stretched his legs and fingered his nether lip.

"Have you not somewhere an invisible cloak?"

"I had one that night, which nature lent me," she answered readily. "I was so invisible to you that I heard the policeman call out your name. I thank you for insisting that I was not a chorus lady."

Here was a revelation which accounted for many things. "I haven't been very fortunate so far in this adventure."

"That is rank ingratitude. I am of the opinion that fortune has highly favored you."

"But the mask—the mask! If you heard the policeman call my name you must have heard him speak of one Leddy Lightfinger."

"I did, indeed. And is it not possible that I am that very person?"

Hillard dropped his hand toward his watch. "Why do you hate Italy?"

She sat straight, and what little he could see of her mouth had hardened.

"There will be no retrospection this evening, if you please," her voice rather metallic.

To be Continued.

Monuments to Wellington.

Has any British national hero more monuments to his fame in London than Wellington? There is the Achilles statue by Westmascott in Hyde park, cast from cannons taken at Salamanca, Vittoria, Toulouse and Waterloo, at a cost of £10,000, defrayed by "the women of England." The equestrian statue by Boehm at Hyde park corner is the second equestrian statue erected in that locality. The former one, by Wyatt, costing some £30,000, was removed to Aldershot when the arch which it crowned was moved. Then there is the colossal equestrian statue by Chantrey at the west front of the Royal Exchange, the monument by Bell in the Guildhall, the monument by Stevens in St. Paul's, which was over twenty years in hand, and a stone statue by Milnes, erected in the Tower of London near the Waterloo barracks.—London Chronicle.

What He Found.

"He went into the country to find solitude."

"Did he find it?"

"No; quite the opposite. He sat down on an ant hill."

STRENGTHENS HIS POLICY

Diaz Eagerly Accepted Chance to Meet Taft.

MEANS MUCH TO UNCLE SAM

Further Safeguarding of Nation's Interests in Mexico Will Result—Diaz Anxious to Have Corral Succeed Him—President Reaches San Antonio After Long Day's Ride.

San Antonio, Tex., Oct. 18.—Both the Mexican and the United States governments expect results from the Taft-Diaz meeting at El Paso, Saturday. President Diaz eagerly accepted the opportunity as a means of strengthening his administration against possible revolutionary movements and President Taft saw in the ternational program a means of further safeguarding the vast interests of the United States in Mexico. Aside from the personal element, these are the motives that prompted Saturday's exchange of courtesies on the border.

President Diaz has a national election coming on. He will attempt to re-elect Corral as his vice president. Diaz is seventy-nine years old and is anxious to have a man of his own choice to take up the reins of government when he is obliged to lay them down. General Reyes will contest Corral's election. Reyes has been stirring up an anti-American sentiment in the country and has been and apparently hopes to ride to victory on it. "Mexico for the Mexicans," has been his cry when opposing the further investment of American capital in the country. The Reyes movement has been gathering force recently.

PRESIDENT DIAZ.

Through Saturday's meeting and the frank exchange of compliments the fact is borne upon every Mexican that Mexico's powerful neighbor is pleased with the Diaz administration and stands ready to support him in any action that may be deemed necessary for the protection of American interests. This will go a long way in crushing any revolutionary sentiment that may arise in Mexico and in so doing will add to the security of the one billion or more dollars of American capital invested in Mexico.

It has been reported that Mexico took the initiative in regard to the meeting, but that is not so. The first suggestion of the meeting was made informally in a southern paper, and each president quickly took steps to assure the other that such a meeting would be agreeable.

The ringing of a dozen church bells was the welcome that San Antonio gave to President Taft upon his arrival at 7:30 o'clock last night. The president had spent practically the entire day traversing the barren sand hills of southern Texas. He was on his train continuously from 9 o'clock Saturday night, when he left El Paso. It was a 650 mile trip.

No regular stops were scheduled for the run, but at every station a crowd was waiting, and the Texans, when they had the opportunity, shouted until Mr. Taft showed himself. At two or three of the stops the president made brief tail-end speeches, but in most cases he let the crowd do a part of the talking, carrying on an informal conversation with them over the platform railing.

Two Presidents Banqueted.

El Paso, Tex., Oct. 18.—An elaborate state banquet at the little town of Juarez, across the Mexican border, brought to a close the visits of Presidents Taft and Diaz here Saturday night.

Porfirio Diaz, Mexico's venerable president, had crossed over to American soil during the day and been received with a warmth that told its own story of the good feeling between the nations. President Taft, in his turn, throwing custom to the winds, had turned his back to his own country to receive General Diaz's cordial handclasp on the Mexican side. All this had been marked by the booming of guns, the flare of trumpets, the tooting of bands, in short, all the noise and pomp that ordinarily invests a state occasion of importance.

Aged Couple Almost Asphyxiated.

Metamora, Mich., Oct. 18.—Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Barrows of this village are in a critical condition from coal gas asphyxiation. The daughter, on going to the house, found the doors locked and could not arouse her parents. The house was broken open, and both were found lying unconscious. Mr. Barrows has been able to speak, but Mrs. Barrows is in a very serious condition. The couple are eighty-two and seventy-five years old respectively.

Alleged He Tapped Till.

Manistique, Mich., Oct. 18.—Harry Wenzel is alleged to have tapped the cash register in the Manistique hotel at midnight, and is in jail as a result. An officer arrested him as he was leaving the building by a rear door. Wenzel is said to have had $35 in his possession. He is about twenty-seven years of age, is a prize fighter and claims Saginaw as his home.

MRS ANNA GRIDLEY

Died at Washington Saturday

Word has reached here from Washington Saturday stating the death of Mrs. Anna Eliza Gridley, which occurred at the home of her son, L. C. Gridley.

In the death of Mrs. Gridley there passed away one of the heroic figures of the civil war.

Mrs. Gridley was a former Tecumseh girl and in her girlhood days was Miss Cheney and resided in the house now occupied by Mrs. Munger. She was the mother of the late Capt. Gridley, who commanded Dewey's flagship at the battle of Manila.

Mrs. Gridley went from Hillsdale, Mich., to become a nurse in the federal field hospitals, and served until the end of the conflict. Her work as nurse included feats of endurance and skill having few duplicates in the service, and she was the recipient of personal acknowledgement from Grant, Sherman and Sheridan. Had it not been for the vast extent of the war, and the many claims for recognition of distinguished service, it is probable that Mrs. Gridley would have been singled out for unusual honors, but she was modest to a degree. The best the government ever did for her was to give her an appointment as a clerk in the general land office, a position she held to the day of her death.

She was related to Mrs. Ed. Pritchard, Sr. Last summer she came west to attend the G. A. R. convention at Toledo and visited relatives here and was also a guest at the Stacy home.

The funeral was held from her son's home in Washington and the remains were taken to Hillsdale for burial.

250 Good Stories.

The Youth's Companion abounds in stirring stories of adventure and heroism. One may describe an escape from accidental peril, another a strange encounter with wild creatures—man or beast.

Many of these stories are true as to facts, and only disguised as to names and places. A score or more of such stories will be published during 1910 in addition to nearly 200 others—250 good stories in all, and no two alike. And this is not counting the serial stories, which it is believed will be considered by old Companion readers as the best The Companion has ever published.

Every new subscriber will find it of special advantage to send at once the $1.75 for the new 1910 Volume. Not only does he get the beautiful "Venetian" Calendar for 1910, lithographed in thirteen colors and gold, but all the issues of The Companion for the remaining weeks of 1909, from the time the subscription is received.

SAMUEL E. WATSON

Samuel E. Watson, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Watson, sr., died in a Chicago hospital Friday, October 15, after only a few days illness from malaria-pneumonia. Age 25 years, 7 months and 23 days.

Deceased was born in Tecumseh and has always made his home here with the exception of the last five years which he spent in the south.

Mr. Watson had not visited his home here since leaving five years ago and was on his way here for a visit when he was taken ill at Chicago and died before his relatives could reach his side.

Beside countless friends he leaves to mourn his death his parents, two sisters Mrs. Lulu Wonders of Flint and Miss Mary Watson, four brothers James of Adrian, David, John and Clare of Tecumseh.

The remains were brought here and the funeral held from the home of his parents Monday afternoon, Rev. John Wirt Dunning, pastor of the Presbyterian church, officiating. Miss Edith Magers rendered sweet music during the service.

The floral pieces were many and beautiful and alone speak of the countless friends he had. The bearers were Wolcott Marsh of Adrian, Will and Hugh Hanna, Donald Wright, Leon Williamson and Elmer Slayton. The remains were laid to rest in Brookside cemetery.

Only for a little while
Sunny days consent to smile.
All their charms must fade away,
In the mists of wintry gray.
Flowers must wither; leaves must fall;
Hushed must be the robin's call.
Summer blooms but to beguile
Only for a little while.
But the snows will melt at last.
Days of storm are quickly passed;
Just the same as days so gay—
Sun and shadows shift at play.
Quaff the pleasures while you can;
Bear the sorrows like a man.
For the tear is, like the smile,
Only for a little while.

Card of Thanks.

To those who have been so kind to us during our bereavement and who by kind words and kindly acts have tried to lessen our sorrow, also for the beautiful floral offerings we extend our sincer thanks.

The Smithy Settled It.

One of the candidates at an English election was announced to address a meeting in a Yorkshire village well known to horse dealers and breeders as the center of a district noted for its hacknegs and roadsters. The candidate was an eloquent speaker, but for some reason or other he failed to make any great impression on the horse loving farmers. However, the local blacksmith came to the rescue by summing up the respective merits of the rival candidates in the following laconic little speech:

"Friends, this feller—the candidate—rides a-oss. 'Tother feller rides a mortycar. You breeds osses, an' I shoes 'em, so wot is theer to argy aboot?"

In such a district and before such an audience the brief, businesslike speech of the blacksmith was not without effect, for it touched the pockets as well as the hearts of those present.—London Mail.

The "forgetery" of a breakman probably saved Monroe City from being wiped off the map, and Dundee and other nearby places from being "shocken" a bit Saturday last. A rear collision of a freight train near that city in the early morning hours of that day was the cause of a $100,000 fire of cars and merchandise resulting from the accident. A car containing 30 tons of dynamite should have been attached to the rear of the train bunted into, had not the breakman forgotten to preform that duty. 'Tis truly "an ill wind that blows nobody good.

OCTOBER

Of all the October poems there is none more beautiful than the following one:
"October gave a party, and the leaves
by hundreds came,
The Ashes, Oaks, and Maples, and those of every name.
Old Sunshine spread the carpet, and everything was grand,
Miss Weather led the dancing, and
Professor Wind the band.
They balanced all their partners, at hide and seek they played,
The party closed at sundown, and everybody stayed Professor Wind played louder, they flew along the ground,
And then the party ended in a jolly
all hands round."

We understand the men will be on their good behavior else they will be preserved in ice. For full particulars of the freeze out attend the meeting.

COLUMBUS DAY.

It is very evident that the Michigan people are not greatly impressed with the new legal holiday October 12. It seems the observance of the discovery of America is a very proper thing, still not a business nor public place was closed excepting the saloons.

LOCAL OPTION.

Will Be Voted On at the Spring Election.

The people of Lenawee county will vote upon the question of local option at the spring election of 1910.

LOCAL OPTION RULING MADE.

Lansing, Mich., Oct. 19.—Attorney General Bird made a ruling to the effect that druggists may not sell "Malt Extract" or "Hop Tonic" in local option counties without complying with the provisions of the local option law. While it is claimed that these concoctions are not claimed to be used for beverages, yet they are used as such and being malt or intoxicating liquors, containing from one to ten per cent of alcohol, they come within the provisions of the local option law. Foreign wholesale drug firms may sell liquors to druggists in this state upon orders sent by druggists, without paying the license fee, he says. This ruling does not cover sales through agents or salesmen, but only such orders as are sent direct by the druggists to the wholesale firms.

The Y. W. C. A. girls met at Bess Frost and enjoyed a social meeting last Thursday.

WON AGAIN! Yes, won again, and how good that looks to the Tecumseh people. The game was played at Blissfield last Friday, and a better one never was played. It was certainly a fine game from begining to end and showed the points of the new game. Tecumseh sprung some very clever formed plans on side kicks and fake play and many successive gains. The team shows team work and leadership which always works for the team's good. V. Rogers handled the team like an experienced player, and Harris, Lenerdson, Exelby, Marsh and Shurtz made fine plays. Blissfield tackles and ends are fine players, and Blissfield team in general is a fine one. They showed ability in breaking up Tecumseh plays. This game as well as the one with Adrian College were two of the best ever played. It shows training and lot of it. And it can well be seen that with out a coacher and general training T. H. S. would never won. 1st half T. H. S. 6, Blissfield 0. 2nd half T. H. S. 5, Blissfield 0. T. H. S. plays Monroe or Adrian H. S. next Saturday.

ROUND ABOUT US.

A goodly sprinkling of "the beautiful" came to town Tuesday of this week. This was the first of the season, and was gone almost before it arrived, yet it was sufficient to make the furnace yawn and gnash it's teeth at the empty coal bin.—Dundee Reporter.

At the Ohio agricultural station at Wooster, says an exchange, an experiment for developing a pig's brain has met with marked success, and it is said the porkers who have had treatment will not wallow in the mud, but seek a nice, clean place, and that instead of grunting they are learning simple melodies. Other improvements are looked for.

Last Friday the Alma College oratorical League was organized. This league was represented by the four college literary societies. C. S. Johnson of Palo, was elected President; Miss Selma Hahn, Bay City, Vice President; Roger Waring, Tecumseh, Treasurer; Robert Von Thurn, St. Louis, Secretary. Like the debating league its object is to promote and facilitate oratory. Prof. J. Q. Adams gave a short impromptu address which was full of helpful suggestions and in that speech he declared that Dr. Brinke and himself had several prizes in view for those who participate in the oratorical contests.

As in football and debating, Alma's oratorical outlook is optimistic. About twenty students expect to enter the lists this year, and out of that many, there surely ought to come a winner.

SPITTING NUISANCE

Hawking and spitting is caused by catarrh germs.

If the local authorities want to stop the disgusting habit of spitting mucous on the sidewalks, they had better instruct the people as to the best method of killing the catarrh germs and curing catarrh. You can easily tell by reading the symptoms below whether you have catarrh or not:

Offensive breath, frequent sneezing discharge from nose, stoppage of the nose, huskiness of the voice, tickling in throat, droppings in throat, a cough, pain in chest, loss of strength, variable appetite, spasms of coughing, low spirited at times, raising of mucous, difficulty in breathing, loss of vital force. C. A. Wright & Son have a sensible remedy (money back if it fails) for catarrh, called Hyomei, which is a vaporized air so antiseptic that when it is breathed over the inflamed and germ-infested membrane, it kills all germ life and cures catarrh. The price, including hard rubber inhaler, is only $1.00, and money back if it doesn't cure. Extra bottles 50 cents.

"I have tried almost every catarrh cure on the market without benefit. Have been using Hyomei for one week and feel like a new man already." —Wm. V. Goode, Newark, Ohio, June 21, 1909.

KENNEDY'S LAXATIVE COUGH SYRUP

Go to the blood if you would drive out Rheumatism. A Wisconsin physician Dr. Shoop, does this with his Rheumatic Remedy—and with seeming success. Rub-ons, says the doctor, never did cure Rheumatism. It goes by word of mouth from one to another, everywhere. Grateful patients gladly spread results. It is an act of humanity to tell the sick of a way to health. Tell some sick one. Sold by C. A. Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the idea of treating the cause, rather than the effect, would come into practice. A tiny, inside, hidden nerve, says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branche also goes to the Heart, and one to the kidneys. When these "inside nerves" fail, then the organs must falter. Dr. Shoop's Restoratives is directed specifically to these failing nerves. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment patients say they realize a gain. Sold by C. A. Wright & Son,

TO AILING WOMEN

A Little Sound Advice Will Help Many a Sufferer in Tecumseh.

No woman can be healthy and well if the kidneys are sick. Poisons that pass off in the secretions when the kidneys are well, are retained in the body when the kidneys are sick. Kidneys and bladder become inflamed and swollen and worse troubles quickly follow. This is often the true cause of bearing-down pains, lameness, backache, sideache, etc. Uric poisoning also causes headaches, dizzy spells, languor, nervousness and rheumatic pains.

When suffering so, try Doan's Kidney Pills, a remedy that cures sick kidneys. You will get better as the kidneys get better, and health will return when the kidneys are well. Let a Tecumseh woman tell you about Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. George Burrough, W. Potawatamie St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "About a year ago my health began to fail and my whole body began to ache. My kidneys did not act as they should and my back ached a great deal. Knowing of persons who had used Doan's Kidney Pills for similar troubles with the best of results, I procured a box at C. A. Wright & Son's drug store. A few weeks after beginning their use I felt much better and at the present time I am free from the aches and pains. I willingly recommend Doan's Kidney Pills as I know that they are reliable." Sold by C. A. Wright & Son.

The Art of Saving.

I believe that if somebody could invent unique ways of saving money the public would have an assured future. Men, women and children would regard saving as a game and play it with all their heart. There are penny savings banks where newsboys and bootblacks carry their tiny savings, but other children regard their penny bank at home with unfriendly eyes. There are working girls who put away their five cent pieces and fatten their small bank accounts by walking instead of riding and making other petty sacrifices. But the majority of working girls spend as fast as they can earn and declare that they cannot help it.

One reads of a man who began his career by regarding every dollar as a worker and getting all the profit he could. With that quaint conceit in his head saving became a pleasure, and he won riches without realizing that it was a struggle. I know of more than one woman who receives each night from her husband every dime he has received in change through the day, for he is careful to avoid spending such a piece of money. These, with her own savings in the same direction, make a respectable weekly showing.—Kansas City Journal.

Only Seeking Information.

The average New York boy is not a wonder of wit and wisdom, but most of them know a good thing when they see it. Also the contrary. Not long ago one of them saw a sign in front of a Sixth avenue place, "Boy Wanted." He was looking for something of that kind and walked in. There was nobody in sight, and he stood gazing. Presently the proprietor, a most grouchy person, appeared.

"What do you want here?" he inquired with scant courtesy.

"Well," replied the boy, disturbed by the man's manner and hesitating, "do you want a boy here?"

"That's what the sign says, don't it?" snapped the man.

"Yep," responded the boy, getting his second wind.

"Then we want a boy."

"Aw right," grinned the boy, backing away. "You git one. You can't have me," and he wiggled his fingers at the man and went out quickly.—New York Herald.

Stop That Cold

To check early colds or Grippe with "Preventics" means sure defeat for Pneumonia. To stop a cold with Preventics is safer than to let it run and be obliged to cure it afterwards. To be sure, Preventics will cure even a deeply seated cold, but taken early—at the sneeze stage—they break, or head off these early colds. That's surely better. That's why they are called Preventics.

Preventics are little Candy Cold Cures. No Quinine, no physic, nothing sickening. Fine for the children—and thoroughly safe too. If you feel chilly, if you sneeze, if you ache all over, think of Preventics. Prompness may also save half your usual sickness. And don't forget your child, if there is feverishness, night or day. Herein probably lies Preventics greatest efficiency. Sold in 25 boxes for the pocket, also in 25c boxes of 48 Preventics. Insist on your druggists giving you

DORMITORIES FOR GIRLS.

U. of M. Regents to Be Asked to Use Trust Funds For Their Erection.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 18.—The University of Michigan regents will be asked at their next meeting to devote part of the trust funds held by them for fellowships, or special endowments, to the building of residence halls or dormitories for girls. The main worker to bring this state of things about is Mrs. Hussey, wife of the professor of astronomy in the university, but she is being strongly backed by Dean Jordan, the women's dean, and, it is stated, by Dean Read of the literary department.

The plan is to build up an entire city block with girl dormitories, one on each side of the block, and eventually to place a girls' commons in the center of the block, in the back yard, at it were, of the dormitories, where all the girls could get their meals.

IT'S UP TO JEFFRIES.

Must Meet Johnson Now That Latter Has Defeated Ketchel.

New York, Oct. 18.—Jim Jeffries will be compelled to make a match with Jack Johnson for the heavyweight championship of the world or admit that he does not intend to reenter the prize ring. Jeff is on the Lusitania, which will reach here early Thursday morning, and has promised to make arrangements for the big fight without further delay. Johnson will be in Chicago probably by the end of the week and says he will be ready to sign articles and post a forfeit to go as a side bet.

Johnson's victory over Ketchel, the latter being knocked out in the twelfth round, has put the pugilistic situation squarely up to Jeffries. The sporting public is ready to admit that Jeffries is the only white man in the world who has the physical strength and science necessary to bring about the defeat of Johnson.

Highest Cross in the World.

The highest cross in the world is said to be that which caps the loftiest peak of the Harz mountains. The cross is in reality a tower, and it commands a magnificent view of the country around. The height of the tower is 120 feet, and it stands on a mountain 1,731 feet above the sea level. A stair of 200 steps leads to the top of the cross, but there is an elevator of which people may avail themselves who for any reason wish to avoid the long climb.

PITTSBURG IS REJOICING

Today is Holiday in the Pennsylvania City.

JOYOUS OVER THEIR VICTORY

Athletic and Civic Organizations Will Parade to Forbes Field Tonight and Watch Team Get Paid Off—Admiring Fans Raising Purse of $1,000 For "Babe" Adams.

Pittsburg, Oct. 18.—Today is celebration day. The victory of the Pirates over the Tigers has made this a local holiday, to culminate in a grand street parade tonight. Mayor Magee sanctioned the celebration by issuing a proclamation calling on the athletic clubs and civic organizations to get in line down town and march to Forbes Field. The right of the line will be taken up by the victorious Pittsburg players in uniform.

Colonel Albert J. Logan of the Eighteenth regiment, N. G. P., has been appointed chief marshal, and he has appointed a large staff of aides.

At Forbes Field a stand will be erected in the center of the field, and on it the players will be presented with their checks by Barney Dreyfuss. Mayor Magee has invited Presidents Johnson, Heydler, Herrmann and other league magnates to be the city's guests.

"Babe" Adams, who pitched three games successfully for the Pirates, has sprung into fame like a flash. The "Adams" cocktail was invented in his honor by a saloon keeper Saturday, following the victory of the Pirates, and the drink got in its insidious work as Adams did on the Detroit batters. About twenty-seven men were lined up before Magistrate Matthews Sunday morning. Each drunk of the night before pleaded that he had been introduced to a new drink named the "Adams" cocktail and it had floored him. Judge Matthews being somewhat of a fan, considered the excuse a legal one and discharged his prisoners without even a reprimand.

On the train Saturday night from Detroit bringing the Pittsburg rooters and the Pirate crew to Pittsburg, Johnny Harris of the Harry Davis amusement enterprises started a fund for Pitcher Adams with $100. By the time the train reached Pittsburg $600 had been subscribed. The news was telegraphed to Pittsburg, and by midnight the contribution had been increased to $800. It is expected that a purse of $1,000 will be subscribed by tonight, and will be presented to Adams at Forbes Field after the parade.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 18.—After three efforts to clinch the world's championship, with this season offering a better opening than either of the two that have preceded it, the Tigers remain in the same position that they have occupied since Manager Jennings came here—American league pennant winners. They can beat anything that the American league has to send against them, but they failed again to cop the inter-league series. They lost to Pittsburg Saturday in the final number of the world's title argument, 8 to 0, after carrying the argument further than in either of their other two pennant years.

Pittsburg sent Adams back against the Tigers for his third appearance in the series. It was a game decided entirely by the pitching. Donovan was sent by Detroit to start the fray. Three rounds ended the incumbency of the slinger. He retired at the end of this inning, Mullin succeeding him.

Now that it's all over, the impartial observer will be forced to admit that there isn't enough difference between the strength of the two clubs to be worth mentioning, and that it was a toss of the coin which would win the series. The score:

An Indigestion Remedy Free

Many people who are otherwise healthy suffer from indigestion, or dyspepsia. When you consider that the stomach and allied digestive organs are the most important organs of the body, it would seem that a disorder there is to be taken very seriously.

Dyspeptics cannot eat the things they like; food sours in the stomach; then chronic constipation begins, or, as is often the case, you have been constipated all along, and the stools are forced and irregular.

But there is no use letting indigestion go until it becomes chronic and undermines your health. It is good advice to suggest to you that you go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, the wonderful cure for stomach, liver and bowel troubles. That is what C. Fowler, of Carson City, Mich., did and he is well today. Others who did the same and are cured are Ida A. Fortune, of Grand Junction, Tenn., B. F. Thompson, of Shenandoah, Ia. Who actually considers that it saved his life. You can obtain a 50-cent or $1 bottle of the druggist, and, taken according to directions, it will probably be all you need. It is a liquid, acts gently, never gripes, and besides the laxative effect, contains exceptional tonic properties which tone the stomach, and that is what is especially needed in indigestion.

All sufferers from indigestion who have never used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can obtain a free test bottle by writing the doctor. It will be sent direct to your home without any charge. In this way thousands have proven to their own satisfaction Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the very remedy they needed to cure indigestion. When once you use this grand remedy you will throw violent cathartics, tablets, salts, etc., away.

If there is anything about your ailment that you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 666 Caldwell bldg., Monticello, Ill.

He Beat the Baker.

His name was Johnny, and he was the idol of his mother's heart in spite of what the neighbors might say to his detriment.

"You'll get my bread today before returning to school, John," remarked his mother to the boy while he indulged in his midday meal.

"Yes, mother," answered he and shortly went forth to carry out his mother's wishes.

"A quarter of bread—yesterday's please," murmured John sweetly as he tendered twopence halfpenny in payment of the two loaves forthcoming.

"Bread has gone up, my boy, one halfpenny," remarked Mr. Dough as he held out his hand for the needful balance.

"When?" queried John thoughtfully as the prospect of a distasteful double journey flashed across his mind.

"This morning, my lad, if that is any consolation."

Johnny's face brightened visibly. "Yes, I think it is," he remarked spasmodically, "for it was yesterday's bread I ordered."

The baker concluded he had no claim.—London Telegraph.

The Candle Tree.

One of the wonders of the vegetable kingdom is undoubtedly the candle tree of Panama, known to botanists as Parmentiera cerifera. This tree produces from its stem and older branches a great profusion of yellowish, cylindrical, smooth fruits, twelve to eighteen inches long, which appear exactly like wax candles, as the botanical name implies. So close is this resemblance that travelers, seeing the tree for the first time, are liable to be temporarily puzzled as to whether the candles of shops are made in factories or grown on trees! The candle-like fruits are suspended from the branches and bare stem by short, slender stalks, dangling in the air, and readily give the impression of the chandler's shop. As night falls and the numerous fireflies move among the fruit this impression is intensified. The inexperienced traveler is not infrequently informed that the fireflies perform the duty of lighting up these "candles" at night when light is required by the denizens of the jungle—London Strand.

A Lich Gate.

A lich gate is a shed, generally of oak, over the entrance of a churchyard, beneath which the bearers paused when bringing a body for interment. Here the clergyman met the body and read the introductory part of the burial service as he preceded the funeral train into the church. Examples of old lich gates are still to be seen in many country churchyards. In Wales they are more modern and are usually built of stone. Some of the old lich gates are formed with one wide door turning on a central pivot and self closing by means of a rude pulley wheel in the roof and a stone weight inclosed in an iron frame, a primitive but effective piece of machinery. In Herefordshire they are also called "scallage" or "scallenge" gates. "Lich gate" is derived from the Anglo-Saxon lich, a corpse; hence the north country "lyke wake."—London Answers.

Hypnotic Power in Animals.

An interesting instance of the hypnotic power possessed by a good many animals is given by a correspondent of the Glasgow Herald. One morning outside Elgin a blackbird was observed to be standing by the roadside, paying no heed to the footsteps of the passerby. It was gazing fixedly at four young weasels under the hedge, which were approaching in a semicircle, apparently to surround it. Just then a warning cry was heard from behind, uttered presumably by the parent weasel, and the young ones disappeared in the hedge. The bird still remained powerless and immovable, and only after repeated urging did it fly to a tree near by, when it gave forth a weak, frightened sound, as though still under the influence of the terror which had arrested its faculties.

A Mild Hint.

Two guests came to spend the evening and didn't know when to depart. The host and hostess were patient with them, very patient, but when 11, 12 and finally 1 o'clock struck the husband realized that something must be done. He was an original chap, and in his droll way he looked over at his wife and said mildly:

"My dear, hadn't we better get up to bed? Our friends may want to be going."

The Better Way.

"Awfully rude of him to throw a kiss at me."

"Yes, my dear; those are things which always ought to be delivered in person."—Illustrated Bits.

BUY SISAL IS HIS MISSION

Will First Join Taft Party in Trip Down Mississippi—Prison Trustees Are Skeptical About Buying Binder Twine Material Through Middle Man.

Lansing, Mich., Oct. 21.—Next Saturday, Governor Warner, Secretary F. W. Shuinway of the state board of health and Banking Commissioner H. W. Zimmerman will leave for St. Louis, Mo., where the governor will become a member of the party accompanying President Taft down the Mississippi river to New Orleans to attend the national conference of the deep waterways commission.

Ostensibly the governor's trip to New Orleans, it is said, is for the sole purpose of attending the conference, at which the chief executive of nearly every state in the Union will be present, but in spite of the efforts of Warner's friends to keep it quiet, it has gotten out that he will journey a few hundred miles beyond the borders of the United States into Yucatan, to negotiate for the purchase of a large amount of sisal to be used in the binder twine plant at the Jackson prison.

It is said that for some time the prison board has had under consideration the proposition of securing sisal direct from the growers at Yucatan as the shady transactions involving Milton J. Daly, who is now under indictment by the grand jury, have made the members skeptical about purchasing from anyone handling the fiber on a commission basis.

Governor Warner will be absent from the state about six weeks, during which time Lieutenant Governor Patrick H. Kelley will take up his abode in the executive office.

WINS OVER ANN ARBOR.

Dr. Cook Tells of His Trip to North Pole.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 21.—Dr. Frederick A. Cook lectured here last night to a large and enthusiastic audience, who sat spell-bound through two hours, hanging with interest upon every word. At its close many who had come to scoff left resolved in their minds that they had listened to the man who had discovered the North Pole.

Throughout the entire lecture Dr. Cook so conducted himself that there was no doubt left that he was entirely honest in all his statements.

Dr. Cook was told that a telegram had been sent him from Chancellor Strong of Kansas university, offering the services of Professor L. Dyche to scale Mt. McKinley and secure the records left there by Dr. Cook in 1906.

"The telegram has not yet reached me," he said, "and this is the first I have heard of it. I shall accept, without a moment's hesitation, if the offer is made officially."

FEDERATION PROSPERS.

Sixteen New Clubs Added to Women's Organization.

Hillsdale, Mich., Oct. 21.—Reports to the convention of Women's clubs show that the state federation is prosperous. During the year sixteen new clubs were added, making a total of 318. The treasury has a balance of $151. The credentials report showed 200 in attendance, and more are expected during the day.

The new public health committee and bureau of information reports received by Miss Clara N. Bates of Traverse City, corresponding secretary on civic improvement, led her to believe that Michigan must be the cleanest state in the country.

Spanish Deputies in Uproar.

Madrid, Oct. 21.—The growing intensity of political animosities has led to a great row in the chamber of deputies. Senor Moret, the Liberal leader, accused Senor De La Cierva, minister of the interior, of issuing misleading statements to the press, whereupon the Liberals cheered loud and long, while the Ministerialists bellowed against them.

Typhoon Caused Many Deaths.

Manila, Oct. 21.—A typhoon in central Luzon, last Monday, wrecked all communication with the interior and caused many deaths. Great damage is reported from San Fabian.

EXAMINING BOARD SELECTED

Admiral Chester, Henry Gannett and O. H. Tittman Will Examine Peary's Report in Interest of National Geographical Society—They Hoped to Also See Cook's Data.

Washington, Oct. 21.—Henry Gannett, chairman of the United States geographical board; Rear Admiral C. M. Chester, U. S. N., formerly superintendent of the naval observatory, and O. H. Tittman, superintendent of the United States coast and geodetic survey, will compose the membership of the committee of the National Geographic society which will pass on the records and proofs submitted by Robert E. Peary to substantiate his claim that he reached the North Pole on April 6.

At a meeting of the board of managers of the National Geographical society, just held here, the records and observations furnished by Commander Peary were presented, and Mr. Gannett, who had previously been appointed chairman of the committee of polar research, named Admiral Chester and Mr. Tittman as the other members of the committee to determine Commander Peary's claims.

It was the desire of the National Geographical society, of which Professor Willis L. Moore, chief of the United States weather bureau, is president, that Dr. Frederick Cook and Commander Peary should submit their records and proofs to the society simultaneously.

Request that this be done was sent by the society to Commander Peary and Dr. Cook. Dr. Cook left it to the determination of the University of Copenhagen whether his data should be passed on exclusively by the university or should be presented also to a board of experts in the United States. The National Geographic society received this cable message from Rector Torp of the Copenhagen university, in response to the societ request that the university waive its claim to an original examination of Dr. Cook's records:

"University regents not able to comply with your request."

In view of this attitude of the University of Copenhagen, the only question to be determined by the committee of the National Geographic society is whether Commander Peary reached the pole in April of this year.

STICKS TO PROMISE.

Cook Could Not Think of Asking Danes to Waive This Claim.

Toledo, O., Oct. 21.—Dr. Frederick A. Cook was informed here of the action of the Copenhagen university in refusing to waive its claims to review his North Pole records before any other scientific society had seen them. He said:

"I could not think of asking the University of Copenhagen to waive its claim to examine the records of my trip to the pole. I had given my promise to submit all my proofs to the Danish school of learning, and it would be a breach of faith on my part not to do so now.

"It will make no difference to the scientific world whether the University of Copenhagen or the National Geographic society first sees the records of my exploration. They will be open to the world as soon as the university gets through with them, and the National Geographic society may examine them if the members desire. Any geographic society in the country will have the same privilege.

"My lecture course will be concluded at Minneapolis on Monday night, after which I will go east to prepare the records. I think the proofs will be ready for examination in two months and possibly in half that time. They will consist of astronomical, meteorological and geographical data. The instruments with which I made observations are still at Etah and will not be in America until next year."

Alleged He Fired Woman's Hat.

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 21.—T. J. Noblett, proprietor of a laundry, has been arrested on a warrant charging him with having touched a lighted match to an ostrich plume on a lady's hat, in the Gaiety theater, last night, because she refused to remove the lid during the performance. Noblett admits lighting the match, but denies touching it to the plume.

MRS. PANKHURST ARRIVES

Not Very Enthusiastic Gathering to Greet Her—About Score of Suffragettes Shouted and Waved Flags. Says She Cannot Foretell When American Women Will Vote.

New York, Oct. 21.—No flag draped tug went down the bay to meet Mrs. Pankhurst, the English suffragette, who arrived on the liner Oceanic. Nor did any brass band play "Hail to the Chief" when the ship docked. There was, of course, some cheering, but it all came from the throats of about twenty suffragettes.

Many more had planned to go down to welcome the English leader, but the customs officials were mean enough to limit the number of passes for the pier. Those present did the best they could in the way of shouting and waving green, white and purple banners, but they all looked as if they realized that it was a pretty small demonstration to put up for a woman who is accustomed to collecting twenty thousands persons of both sexes for a parade or a meeting.

When Mrs. Pankhurst appeared she was hustled into a taxicab and escorted to the Women's University club.

Those who had not had time to get in their greetings on the dock followed with all possible speed, and for at least an hour Mrs. Pankhurst was bombarded with questions.

"Do you think the American women are going to get the vote before you do?" chorused several voices.

"I really am not in a position to express an opinion on that subject," was the reply. "I do not know anything about American politics, but I am sure that if you do get it before we do, you will have to get it quickly, for we expect to get it before the Liberal party goes out of power if they stay in their natural length of time—two years longer."

WRIGHTS ASK INJUNCTION.

Believe Saulnier's Machine Infringes Their Patent.

New York, Oct. 21.—The Wright brothers have applied to the United States district court for an injunction to prevent Ralph Saulnier, the aviator, from using a type of flying machine that the brothers think infringes their patent.

Saulnier, who made a number of successful ascents in France, brought to this country not long ago a biplane that the Wrights contend is modeled after their own invention. They ask the court to stop Saulnier from using or exhibiting the machine and from receiving money for its use or exhibition.

Wilbur Wright went before a notary at College Park, Md., last Monday, and made the affidavit that forms the basis of the application. The Wrights state that they patented their ideas on May 22, 1906.

Wright Flies by Moonlight.

College Park, Md., Oct. 21.—Wilbur Wright piloted his flying machine in the moonlight last evening, with Lieutenant F. E. Humphreys as a passenger, for 27 minutes and 10 seconds—the longest flight he has made at College Park. Humphreys was in practical charge of the biplane most of the time and brought it to the ground in graceful fashion. Mr. Wright made four flights during the day.

The Lure of the Mask

By HAROLD MAC GRATH

Copyright, 1908, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

The mystery lifted its head again. One does not hate a country without a strong and vital reason. Was Giovanni partly right, after all? Was this a kind of trap—a play to gain his interest? Was her singing under his window purely accidental?

"Will you not sing?" he asked. This was an inspiration. Music might assist in melting her new reserve.

"You recollect, then, that I possess a voice?"

"It is all I have to recollect. Tell me, whither is all this to lead?"

"To the door and into the fog again."

"On my word, I'm half inclined to believe you to be an anarchist or a red or something on that order."

"Put yourself at ease. I am neither Leddy Lichtfinger nor a Socialist. There are no dynamite bombs in this house."

Her severity, her irony and her apparent lack of warmth were mere matters of calculation. Her plan was to inspire him with trepidation, to keep him always at arm's length, for his own safety as well as hers. She knew something of men. She was secretly pleased with his strong face and shapely head. The chin was square, but not heavy; the mouth humorous, kindly and firm; the nose bridged, and the brown eyes, sleepy, yet with latent fires, were really handsome. She was not afraid to be alone with him, nor was it really necessary to wear a mask. But the romance in her heart that she believed to be dead was not dead, only waiting to be rekindled.

"The song you sang under my window."

"I will sing!"

"That is more than I dared to hope."

"What shall it be?" she asked.

"The song you sang under my window."

"But that is for the male voice!"

"You sang it very well nevertheless. I have a good memory too." He leaned forward, his arms crossed on his knees. Was there ever in all the world such an Arabian night?

She sang, but without that buoyant note of the first night. One after another he called out the popular airs of the old light operas. She had them all on her tongue's end.

Where had he seen that copy of Botticelli before? If only there was a little more light!

"Pardon me," he said. "You asked"—

She repeated her question, wondering what had drawn his attention.

"I like my grand opera after dinner. After dinner I shall want Verdi, Berlioz, Gounod."

"But after dinner I may not care to sing." She spoke in German.

He was not expecting this tongue. Besides, his German had never been a finished product. For all that, he made a passable reply.

"You speak as many languages as a Swiss hotel concierge."

"I wish I did. My mother had one idea in regard to my youth—I should speak four languages and eventually become a great diplomat. My mother had one of the loveliest voices. It was a joy to hear her speak, now Italian, now German, now French. We were great comrades. It was rare fun to go with her on an antique hunting expedition. They never fooled her nor got the better of her in a bargain."

She liked the way he spoke of his mother.

"But you," he said—"you are not Italian?"

She smiled.

Her fingers stirred over the keys again, and Grieg's "Papilion" fluttered softly from flower to flower.

CHAPTER VI.

INTO THE FOG AGAIN.

PRESENTLY she spoke, still playing softly.

"My father was an American, my mother Italian. But I have lived in Europe nearly all my life. There! You have more of my history than I intended telling you." The music went dreamily.

"I knew it! Who but an American woman would have the courage to do what you are doing tonight? Who but one of mine own countrywomen would trust me so wholly and accept me so frankly for what I am—an American gentleman?"

"Softly!" she warned. "You will dig a pit for your vanity."

"No. I am an American gentleman, and I am proud of it, though this statement in your ears may have a schoolboy ring."

"A nobility in this country? Impossible!"

"Not the kind you find in the Almanach de Gotha. I speak of the nobility of the heart and the mind." He was very much in earnest now.

"Indeed!" The music stopped, and she turned. She regarded his earnestness with favor. He continued:

"I have traveled much. I have found noblemen everywhere, in all climes, and also I have found beasts. Oh, I confess that my country is not wholly free from the beast! But the beast here is a beast—shunned, discredited, outcast. On the other side, if he be mentioned in the Almanach, they give him sashes and decorations. And they credit us with being money mad! It is not true."

"But, if you are not money mad, why these great fortunes?" dubiously.

"At a certain age a fortune in this country doubles itself without any effort on the part of the owner. Few of us marry for money, and when we do we at least have the manhood to keep the letter of our bargain."

"And when you marry?" she queried.

"Well, it is generally the woman we love. Dowries are not considered. There is no social law which forbids a dowerless girl to marry a dowerless man," laughing. "But over there it is always and eternally a business contract simply. You know that."

"Yes, a business contract," listlessly.

"But they talk of nobility on the other side. That is it; they talk, talk—Italy, France, Germany! Why, I had rather be the son of an English farmer than a prince on the continent. And I had rather be what I am than the greatest nobleman in England."

"Go on, go on! I like it. What do you call it—jingo?" she laughed.

"Call it what you will. Look at the men we produce. Three or four hundred years ago Europe gave us great poets, great artists, great soldiers, great churchmen and great rascals. I admire a great rascal when he is a Napoleon, a Talleyrand, a Machiavelli. But a petty one! We have no art, no music, no antiquity, but we have a race of gentlemen. The old country is not breeding them nowadays."

"Signora, dinner is served," the maid announced.

"Signora!" thought Hillard.

"After you, Mr. Hillard," she said.

He bowed and passed on before her, but not till he had passed did he understand the maneuver. To follow her would have been nothing less than the temptation to pluck at the strings of her mask. Would he have touched it? He could not say.

That dinner! Was he in New York? Was it not Bagdad, the bottle and the genii? Had he ever, even in his most romantic dreams, expected to turn a page so charming, so enchanting or so dangerous to his peace of mind, a game of magical hide and seek?

And she? A whim, a fantastic, unaccountable whim—the whim of a woman seeking forgetfulness, not counting the cost nor caring, simply a whim.

On the little table was a Tuscany brass lamp of three wicks, fed by olive oil. It was sufficient to light the table, but the rest of the room was sunk in darkness. He half understood that there was a definite purpose in this semi-illumination. She had no wish that he should by chance recognize anything familiar in this house.

"May I ask you one question?" he asked.

"No," promptly. There was something in his eyes that made her grow wary of a sudden.

"Then I shan't ask it. I shall not ask you if you are married."

"And I shall not say one way or the other."

She smiled, and he laughed quietly.

A running conversation; a fencing match with words and phrases; time after time she touched him, but with all his skill he could not break through her guard.

"And that interesting dissertation on the American gentleman?" she said icily.

"That's the trouble with posing as a moralist. One must live up to the precepts. Would you believe me if I told you that at the age of three and thirty I am still heart whole?"

She deliberately drew a line across the center of the table.

She parried, "I trust you will not spoil that excellent record by making love to me." She reached for the matches, touched off one, watched it burn for a moment, extinguished it and then deliberately drew a line across the center of the tablecloth.

"Now, what might that represent?" he asked curiously.

"A line, Mr. Hillard. The moment you cross that line that moment you leave this house. On guard!"

"Come, that is not brave. You can retreat till your shoulders touch the mat, but I must stand this side of the line, unable to reach you. And you have the advantage of the mask besides. You are not a fair fencer."

"The odds should be in my favor. I am a woman. My wrist is not so strong as yours."

"Physically, of course, I may pass the line, to reach the salt, for instance. Will that be against the rules? You have put temptation in my path."

"Bid Satan get behind thee."

"I wish I knew the color of your eyes. Behind those holes I see nothing but points of fire, no color."

"They are blue. But supposing I wear this mask because my face is dreadfully scarred?"

"Vanity, yes; but scars, never. At least never so deep as you yourself can make. You wear that mask but out of mercy to me."

Once she rose and approached the window, styly raising the mask and breathing deeply of the cold air which rushed in through the crevices. When she turned she found that he, too, had risen. He was looking at the steins, one of which he held in his hand. Moreover, he returned and set the stein down beside his plate.

"Tell me, why do you do that?" There was an anxious note in her voice.

"I have an idea. But let us proceed with the dinner. This salad"—

"I am more interested in the idea." She pushed aside the salad and took a sip of the ruby burgundy. Had he discovered something?

"May I smoke?" he asked.

"By all means."

He lighted a cigarette and put the case near the line.

"Do you enjoy a cigarette?"

"Sometimes," she answered. "But the idea"—

"Will you not have one?" He moved the case still nearer to the line.

She reached out a firm round white arm.

"One moment," he said. "Let us understand each other thoroughly."

"What do you mean?" her arm poised in midair.

"If you touch a cigarette you must cross the line to this side."

She withdrew her arm slowly.

"I shall not smoke. If I crossed the line I should establish a dangerous precedent. And I must have that idea."

"The mirror over the piano confused me. I have seen it somewhere before. Then there is that old copy of Botticelli. The frame is familiar, but I could not place it. This stein, however!" He laughed. The laughter was boyish, even triumphant.

"Well, that stein?" She was now leaning across the table, her fingers tense on the cloth.

"I bought that stein two seasons ago. This is the Sandfords' place, and you are the veiled lady who has been riding Mrs. Sandford's favorite hunter in the park."

They stood up simultaneously. In a matter of this sort he was by far the quicker. In an instant he had caught her by the wrist, at the same time drawing her irresistibly round the table toward him.

"I must see your face. I shall never be at peace if I do not."

"Certainly you will never know any peace if you do. Be careful."

His free hand stole toward the strings of her mask. She moved not. His face was very close to hers now. If only she would struggle! He released her wrist.

"No; I haven't the courage. If I take that mask from your face it will be the end. And I do not want this ever to end. If you will not let me see your face of your own free will, so be it. I shall see it some day, mark me. Fate does not cross two paths in this manner without a purpose." He stepped back slowly. "You do not understand the lure of that mask."

"Perhaps I do. I am beginning to admire your self control, Mr. Hillard. But I am tired now, and I must ask you to go."

"Once more, will you let me see your face?"

"No. If, as you say, fate intends for us to meet again you will see it. But I have my doubts. So it is my will to pass out of your life as completely as though I had never entered it—from one fog into another. No, I am not a happy woman. I am not happy in my friendships. Listen to me," and her voice grew low and sweet. "Let me appeal to your imagination. This light adventure shall be a souvenir for your old age. One night romance stepped into your life and out of it. Think! There will always be the same charm, the same mystery, the same enchantment. I shall always be Cinderella or the sleeping beauty or what your fancy wills. Do you understand me?

"Nothing," she proceeded, "nothing lasts so long in the recollection as a pleasant mystery—in other days, in other times. Well, on my side I shall recall this night pleasantly. Without knowing it you have given me a new foothold in life. I did not believe that there lived a single man who could keep to the letter of his bargain. Good night! And do not lean out of any more windows," she added lightly.

"You are right," he said reluctantly, "something to dream over in my old age. And certainly I shall dream of it—a flash of sunlight in the window."

Then slowly he reached down toward her wineglass. She understood his purpose and essayed to stop him.

"Do not deny me this little thing," he said.

She let her hand fall. He took the glass, held it against the light to see where her lips had touched it. Carefully he poured out the wine from the opposite side and kissed the rim.

"I shall keep this glass. I must have some visible object to make sure that this hasn't been a dream."

"You may kiss my hand, Mr. Hillard."

To be Continued.

Matching the Braid.

After ten years he returned, footsore and weary. His wife met him at the door.

"I thought you were dead," she told him.

"You should have known better than that," he said. "Do you remember that last piece of net I tried to match for you? You scolded because there was a difference of an eighth of an inch in the width of the folds, and I vowed that I would never again return from matching anything for you until I had found the exact thing you wanted."

He handed her a package.

"Here is that old rose binding braid that you told me to buy. I found it last Monday in Billings, Mont. I have looked for it in thirty-seven states."

She tore off the wrappings.

"It is a little too dark," she said.

"But the sample has faded some in ten years," he reminded her.

"It is a little too heavy besides."

"But handling by thousands of clerks has worn the sample away some. It was heavier when I started out."

"I suppose I can make it do," she said.—Newark News.

The Men's class subject Sunday is, "The modern teachings of Jesus." Matt. 6 16-72. All men invited.

This year is the 100th anniversary of Calvin's birth. The young people will comemorate the event at their meeting Sunday when an interesting program will be given on Calvin.

In spite of the storm 34 were present at prayer meeting Wednesday. The meetings are growing in interest.

Plans are being considered for remodeling the gallery of the church to make more room for Sunday school classes.

METHODIST CHURCH.

Next Sunday the pastor will be in Chelsea. He goes to investigate the plan there worked so successfully in the merging of the Sunday school with the morning service. We expect to inaugurate this plan in the Tecumseh church beginning Nov. 7.

Rev. R. E. Griggs will preach Sunday at 10 a. m. Sunday school at 11:30.

At the business meeting of the League Tuesday evening Miss Layle Snedicor was elected president in the place of Miss Harriett Hurrey who resigned. Miss Hurrey is going south for the winter. The prayers of the League will follow her and we all hope she will return much improved in health. She has been one of our most efficient workers and we shall miss her very much. Miss Snedicor who takes her place is also a tried worker and has been first vice president. Her place was filled by Miss Lillian Smith.

It's Boys In Olive Now

DRAB UNIFORMS FOR M. N. G. SOUND "TAPS" FOR THE BLUE.

Lansing, Mich., Oct. 19.—Shipments are being made this week by the quartermaster general's department of olive drab woolen uniforms to all national guard organizations in the state. Included in the shipment are caps, coats and breeches and fine new olive drab overcoats which will replace the old-fashioned blue overcoats with capes which have been worn by the troops since the civil war.

The new coats are double-breasted, with hoods for cold weather. With the issue of this equipment the military department state that the guard will be fully equipped for service either in winter or summer for the first time in the history of the state.

THE WORTH OF FOOTBALL.

From Walter Camp's "American Sports" in the Nov. Century.

The physical and mental development produced in the individual player is not all that may be cited in its support. Those who look beneath the surface find in football in the United States something to supply that lack of rigid discipline for which the American youth, except possibly at West Point, and Annapolis, suffer in comparison with those of other peoples. Not only does the rigid training establish self-control in those who who play, but the game holds up a standard of discipline to those who observe it. And it must be admitted that this side of the argument is a strong one, while the fact that it offers almost the ideal measure of effort followed by immediate relaxation renders it far less a tax on the vital organs than the majority of our contests. As it involves personal physical contact, it always will be a strenuous sport, appealing to the vigorous, healthy boy.

Deerfield Bank Robbery.

Deerfield, Oct. 20.—An attempt was made to rob the Deerfield state bank some time during Tuesday night or early Wednesday morning. When the employes of the bank came to their work in the morning they found the evidence of the work of the thieves. They had placed a charge of dynamite in the safe but when it was discharged it did not open the door so they were unable to secure any money. The safe was badly twisted, however. The robbers went to Howe Bro's blacksmith shop and the hand car sheds and secured some tools. Evidently they were frightened away before they secured any cash.

While hunting north of town last Friday Fred Freeman saw a large bird soaring in the air. It was a long way off but he resolved to chance a shot at it and was astonished to see it come to ground. He ran up and with a bush held it down, and called to Rev. Wulfman who was hunting with him and they captured the bird which proved to be a young eagle. It was slightly wounded in one wing and they tied its feet together and brought it to town. The bird prepared to scrap when the men approached but they secured it without much difficulty.—Manchester Enterprise.

THE "BIG FIVE" OF EUROPE

Five men—King Edward, Monsieur Isvolsky, William Hohenzollern, the Archduke Franz Ferdinand and Cardinal Merry del Val—comprise "Europe"; these five and no more. There used to be two others; but one of them, Von Bulow by name, has passed into that realm of obscurity from which few statesmen return, and the other, the most sinister figure of them all, is a prisoner in a Salonikan villa.—E. Alexander Powell, in the November Everybody's.

Southern Michigan League Meeting

HELD AT FLINT THIS WEEK WITH EIGHT CLUBS REPRESENTED.

Reports Show 1909 a Successful Season.

The annual meeting of the Southern Michigan League opened at Flint Tuesday with representatives present from the eight clubs in the circuit. Saginaw was represented by John Reid; BayCity by A. J. Lambert; Flint by George McKinley; Lansing by John Morrisey; Kalamazoo by Harold Frank; Jackson by Charles Sarvis, Adrian by Archie Segar and Battle Creek by William Morgan.

There will be no change in the makeup of the league circuit. An application for consideration of Muskegon was made by Charles Cassell and Ed Herr, but there was no sentiment in favor of any switches. The Adrian association which operated under a special contract the past season was admitte to full membership, doing away with special sharing terms to which it had agreed for the first in the league.

There was no friction of any sort, though a couple of hard battles had been predicted. One change came as a result of the annual election. Joe S. Jackson of Detroit was re-elected president, but James Frank of Jackson, who recently disposed of his Kalamazoo interests as a club owner, succeeds Dr. Percy R. Glass as secretary-treasurer. Dr. Glass had held the office one season, and probably will return to Lake Linden, where he has business interests outside of baseball, Mr. Frank has been identified with the league, as a Kalamazoo stock holder and officer, since its inception.

The pennant matter, about which there has been much talk, was disposed of in accordance with the report of Secretary Glass, based on the correspondence in the Taylor case, and an opinion on the same by Secretary Farrell, of the national board. The title goes to the Saginaw club with the standing as shown by the actual results of games played by that team.

Messrs. Lambert of Bay City Morrissey of Lansing and Sarvis of Jackson are the new executive board.

All the clubs are signing men and the season of 1910 poomises to be one of the best in the league's history.

SUFFERING ENDED.

C. A. Wright Sells the Remedy that Cured Stomach Trouble of 14 Years

And best of all C. A. Wright & Son guarantees it to cure you or money back. Read this:

"I have been a great sufferer for 14 years, everything I ate gave me heartburns. I have never been able to get anything that would give me any relief until a friend of mine insisted on my taking MI-O-NA. I took a 50c. box and I believe I am entirely well." F. M. Bryant, Newman, Ga., June 5th.

MI-O-NA is not a nostrum; it is the prescription of a celebrated physician who is a specialist in stomach diseases.

One clever woman calls MI-O-NA the Sunshine Prescription because it changed her from a miserable, nervous dyspetic into a bright, healthy, happy woman in a few weeks.

These little MI-O-NA tablets are surely wonder workers. They absolutely cure indigestion whether acute or chronic.

They stop belching, gas in stomach, and heaviness, in a few minutes. Distress after eating vanishes as if by magic, when one one or two little MI-O-NA tablets are swallowed.

Only 50c. a box at leading druggists everywhere and in Tecumfeh by C. A. Wright & Son. Test sample free from Booth's Mi-o-na, Buffalo, N. Y.

THE CHILDREN LIKE IT
KENNEDY'S LAXATIVE COUGH SYRUP

Go to the blood if you would drive out Rheumatism. A Wisconsin physician Dr. Shoop, does this with his Rheumatic Remedy—and with seeming success. Rub-ons, says the doctor, never did cure Rheumatism. It is more than skin deep—it is constitutional, always, because of this principle, Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy is perhaps the most popular in existence. It goes by word of mouth from one to another, everywhere. Grateful patients gladly spread results. It is an act of humanity to tell the sick of a way to health. Tell some sick one. Sold by C. A. Better than Pills for Liver Ills

FOR SALE BY B. J. BULVER, TECUMSEH, MICH.

Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the idea of treating the cause, rather than the effect, would come into practice. A tiny, inside, hidden nerve, says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branche also goes to the Heart, and one to the kidneys. When these "inside nerves" fail, then the organs must falter. Dr. Shoop's Restoratives is directed specifically to these failing nerves. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment patients say they realize a gain. Sold by C. A. Wright & Son,

A girl who can manage to get three engagement rings must have a circus of her own.

If you haven't the time to exercise regularly, Doan's Regulets will prevent constipation. They induce a mild, easy, healthful action of the bowels without griping. Ask your druggist for them. 25c.

Most women are troubled with Kidney complaint, and you know very many serious and even fatal diseases result from these neglected Kidney troubles. If you will take DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills as directed you may be confident of good results. Try them and see how really good they are. TO AILING WOMEN

A Little Sound Advice Will Help Many a Sufferer in Tecumseh.

No woman can be healthy and well if the kidneys are sick. Poisons that pass off in the secretions when the kidneys are well, are retained in the body when the kidneys are sick. Kidneys and bladder become inflamed and swollen and worse troubles quickly follow. This is often the true cause of bearing-down pains, lameness, backache, sideache, etc. Uric poisoning also causes headaches, dizzy spells, languor, nervousness and rheumatic pains.

When suffering so, try Doan's Kidney Pills, a remedy that cures sick kidneys. You will get better as the kidneys get better, and health will return when the kidneys are well. Let a Tecumseh woman tell you about Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. George Burrough, W. Potawatamie St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "About a year ago my health began to fail and my whole body began to ache. My kidneys did not act as they should and my back ached a great deal. Knowing of persons who had used Doan's Kidney Pills for similar troubles with the best of results, I procured a box at C. A. Wright & Son's drug store. A few weeks after beginning their use I felt much better and at the present time I am free from the aches and pains. I willingly recommend Doan's Kidney Pills as I know that they are reliable." Sold by C. A. Wright & Son.

INCOMPETENT, SHE SAYS.

Mrs. Crane Makes Charges Against Agricultural Department.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 21.—Direct charges of incompetency in the federal department of agriculture and of disregard of the rules of the bureau of animal industry in the federal inspection of meat were made by Mrs. Caroline Bartlett Crane of Kalamazoo, Mich., in an address Wednesday afternoon before the American Public Health association, in convention here.

Mrs. Crane specially attacked the department for misleading the public into believing that the meat inspected by federal officers was passed upon justly and with the best interests of the public at heart. She stated that the standards of health of animals slaughtered had decreased since the scandal in meat inspection of 1906.

The matter of her address was taken up by the convention in executive session.

Business Men Hope to Start a Boom on Farming.

Lansing, Mich., Oct. 21.—Extensive plans for booming the upper section of the lower peninsula are being framed by the people of that section for the purpose of bringing to the attention of homeseekers and farmers the opportunities there for engaging in farming in any of these counties.

Authority has been secured from the railway commission for the railways traversing that part of the state to provide a train which will be loaded with the produce and fruits of those pine barren farms and taken to Chicago and other points as an exhibit of the possibilities of that section.

Babe Dying, Found on Doorstep.

Port Huron, Mich., Oct. 21.—A week-old child was found on the doorstep of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Semon, half a mile west of Memphis, early in the morning. The baby was found to be in a critical condition, and physicians who examined it declare it is suffering from pneumonia, and probably will die.

Weak Kidneys

Weak Kidneys surely point to weak kidney nerves. The Kidneys, like the Heart, and the Stomach, find their weakness, not in the organ itself, but in the nerves that control and guide and strengthen them. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is a medicine specifically prepared to reach these controlling nerves. To doctor the Kidneys alone, is futile. It is a waste of time, and of money as well.

If your back aches or is weak, if the urine scalds, or is dark and strong, if you have symptoms of Bright's or other distressing or dangerous kidney disease, try Dr. Shoop's Restorative a month—Tablets or Liquid—and see what it can and will do for you. Druggist recommend and sell

Liver Trouble Remedy Free

Any intelligent person can be his own doctor in the ordinary case of liver trouble, for the symptoms cannot be mistaken. If the white of the eye becomes yellowish, if the skin becomes sallow, if pimples and blotches appear, if the bowels do not move, if you have sick headache, if you are bilious, you may be sure that your liver is torpid or inactive.

The quickest and surest remedy yet found for the cure of liver trouble or any of its symptoms is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, the great herb laxative compound. This wonderful remedy is not only a laxative, but a tonic as well. It will stare the flow of gastric juice, thereby soon enabling the liver to do its work naturally. A bottle of this great liver remedy can be bought of any druggist for 50 cents or $1, and in many cases a single bottle has cured a chronic case.

For example, John W. Lee, 212 S. Pennsylvania ave., Indianapolis, Ind., had a stubborn and very long-standing case of liver trouble, with pimples, blotches, jaundice, etc., and it cured him. Mrs. E. Flinchum, Jackson, Ky., says the same of it. Thousands of families keep it in the house against just such an emergency, as you can never tell when some member of the family will need a good laxative.

In order to have you or any other sufferer from the liver blues try it, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, without personal expense, Dr. Caldwell will send you a free test bottle, if you will send your name and address. The sample will show you how pleasant it is to take, how gentle it works. It will start you on the cure of your trouble and convince you that you have found a cure. That is the object of the sample, and the doctor urges you to send for it today.

If there is anything about your ailment that you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 500 Caldwell bldg., Monticello, Ill.

ROUND-UP WAS TAME AFFAIR

But Taft Took Ginger Out of Horse He Rode.

Gregory, Tex., Oct. 21.—President Taft saw a cattle round-up on his brother's ranch Wednesday afternoon. It was a tame affair compared with the broncho bucking and steer riding stunts that were pulled off in the west for President Roosevelt's amusement.

The president rode from this place to Rincorn, a distance of eight miles, in an automobile. The only exciting event of the day occurred a few minutes before his arrival at the ranch. A rattlesnake, five feet long and with eighteen rattles, was discovered near the house and killed. The snake was hanging up on the ranch fence for the president's inspection upon his arrival.

Hanging to the same fence were about seventy-five ducks and geese that Secretary of War Dickinson and other members of the Taft party had brought down in an early morning hunt.

"So this is the result of the day's chase!" said the president, gazing on the ducks and the rattlesnake.

Then the cowboys came up with Sam, the biggest and the gentlest horse on the ranch, but even Sam allied at the presidential load. It was some minutes before the cowboys could get Sam quieted and the president was safely in the saddle. That saddle had been made especially for the president's use while he is on the ranch.

"Goodness," said Mr. Taft, "it's wide enough to split me."

Sam's spirits began to subside after the president was astride him, and by the time the round-up was over the old horse's ears were lying back on his head, and he was wet with sweat.

The president today will visit Taft, a town of 500 population, on his brothers' ranch.

SUES FOR $25 000.

Murray Says He Was Falsely Imprisoned During Taft's Visit.

San Antonio, Tex., Oct. 21.—Because he was imprisoned during President Taft's visit here, John Murray of Chicago has filed suit for $25,000 damages against John E. Wilkie, chief of the United States secret service; Joe E. Priest, local detective, and Fred M. Lancaster, deputy United States marshal.

Murray alleges he was jailed on a false charge. He is secretary of the Political Refuge and Defense league and was arrested on a charge of violating the neutrality laws. He was released later for lack of evidence.

Washington, Oct. 21.—Mrs. Gertrude M. Hubbard, widow of Gardiner Hubbard, the distinguished scientist and founder of the National Geographic society, was injured fatally last evening, when the motor car in which she was riding was struck by an electric street car. Mrs. Hubbard died at the Garfield hospital soon after. Mrs. Hubbard was eighty-four years old. She was the mother of Mrs. Alexander Graham Bell, wife of the noted inventor.

He is traveling incognito at present, but will appear as the czar when he reaches Bordonecchia, the first Italian railway station after leaving France, where he will meet King Victor Emanuel Morgan Buys Manuscripts.

London, Oct. 21.—J. Pierpont Morgan has bought the original manuscripts of the late George Meredith's novels, "Diana of the Crossways," "Lord Ormont and his Aminta" and "The Amazing Marriage," paying therefor the sum of $4,000. Meredith gave the manuscripts to an old and faithful servant, who refred him for thirty years but who received no legacy in the author's will, which stated that adequate provision had been made for him.

SCORE OF PERSONS WERE INJURED

Street Car in Detroit Ran Into Open Switch.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 25.—More than a score of persons were injured, a dozen of them seriously, when a Jefferson line car ran into an open switch at Jefferson and Mt. Elliott avenues shortly after 10 o'clock last night. The motorman of the car was pinned in the wreckage.

Speeding westward on Jefferson avenue, the car ran head on into an open switch at Jefferson and Mt. Elliott avenues shortly after 10 o'clock last night, jumped the tracks and plowed its way over the pavement towards the northwest corner of the crossing.

The front trucks climbed the curbing and the impact caused the body of the car to be wrenched from the trucks. The car fell over on its side, the front and rear trucks standing on end. There were many passengers aboard and many injuries are reported.

Every hospital in the city rushed ambulances to the scene and the injured were rushed to hospitals.

ONE HUNDRED KILLED.

Nicaragua Rebels Put Government Troops to Rout.

Bluefields, Nicaragua, Oct. 25.—By wireless to Colon.—The first important battle of the revolution occurred last Friday between the forces of Gen. Chamorro and 1,000 of President Zalaya's troops. The scene of the engagement was on the San Juan river below

PRESIDENT ZELAYA.

Rock de San Carlos. The rebels won with slight losses. The government forces lost 100 killed and 300 wounded. The rebels captured two Krupp siege guns and 400 rifles.

News has been received from the interior to the effect that President Zelaya is recruiting and mobilizing troops at Menagua. Apparently none of his army is enroute to the Atlantic coast. Gen. Chamorro is advancing slowly into the interior strengthening his forces as he goes.

APPEAL TO GOVERNOR

Want Him to Take Hand in Hilborn Fishing Tug Affair.

Cheboygan, Mich., Oct. 25.—The board of supervisors has taken a hand in the controversy between the state game warden's department and J. R. Hilborn, local independent fisherman whose tug, Ogontz, was seized by the game warden for fishing without a license.

The board adopted a resolution reciting that the breach of the law by Mr. Hilborn was a purely technical one, and that "the seizure of his boat by the game and fish warden's department was an unwarranted assumption of authority and a gross and malicious abuse of power," and demanding of Governor Warner that he "cause a rigid examination to be made of the action."

MOTHER WANTED HIM.

Man Found His Picture in Salvation Army Paper.

Saginaw, Mich., Oct. 25.—Washington Spencer ran away from his home and mother, in Toledo, four years ago. Since that time he has been wandering over the country and has not once communicated with his home. Recently he came to Flint from Kansas City, and then moved to Saginaw.

A comely Salvation Army lass asked him to buy a copy of the War Cry on the street. When Spencer paid for the paper he turned to the back page and was dumbfounded to see a picture of himself. Accompanying the picture was an appeal from his mother, saying she was seriously ill and asking the Salvation Army to aid her in finding her son. Young Spencer, who had a roll of $200 in his pocket, took the next train for Toledo.

The dead are: Oscar Price, engineer, Springfield, Ohio; Charles Wyckoff, engineer, Middletown, Ohio.

Eloped With Brigham's Grandchild.

Santa Fe, N. M., Oct. 25.—John Allen, a Gentile, who eloped with and married a daughter of Brigham Young, Jr., Sept. 9, and whose wife was kidnaped by her mother the next day, has appealed to the federal court to restore his wife to him. Mrs. Young backed by a large Mormon community at Farmington, where she resides declares she will fight the case to the bitter end. Her daughter left home for the county fair, met Allen and they ran away and were married. As soon as Mrs. Young learned of it she went to Allen's home, found he was absent and forced her daughter to go home with her.

CORPORATION TO BUY BREWERIES

United States Steel Concern to Control Employes' Drinking.

IN COKE OVEN DISTRICT

Believed Greater Efficiency May Be Obtained From Men by Stipulating When and Where They Shall Drink —Selling of Liquor to Them in Bulk Is Evil Which Corporation Seeks to Overcome.

Pittsburg, Oct. 25.—The U. S. Steel Corporation has decided to make an effort to control the drinking habit of 25,000 persons in Fayette county, Pa., interested in the manufacture of coke and will invest $10,000,000 in the project to obtain possession of the nine breweries now running inside the county. While the effort being made to merge these breweries is being conducted in the name of the Pittsburg Brewing Co. it is understood that the steel corporation is back of the whole move and will try to regulate the drinking of the foreigner, it being figured at least 3 per cent better returns can be gleaned on the millions invested there by regulating the drink of the coke workers—permitting him to drink but stipulating where and when he shall drink.

The sale of beer by the keg or by the barrel to the coke worker is what the corporation objects to, and this it will try to remedy. For more than a year figures have been gathered on drinking among the coke workers and it is found that for 72 hours after each pay day the coke ovens do not run more than two-thirds capacity and there is scarcely a pay day when hundreds of tons of coke are not ruined by inability to get proper men to care for it in the ovens.

The idea is to announce the number of licensed drinking places in the county so that all the workmen will be supplied but to kill the sale of drink in bulk to the coke worker, it being alleged that the workman lies in a great store of drink when he is flush with money then "lies down beside it."

Absolute possession of the nine breweries inside the county, it is thought will accomplish this and for this purpose $10,000,000 has been offered. It is purposed to block all other beers in bulk from the county and not permit any of the nine breweries to sell in bulk to the workmen.

In this move the corporation is backed by the saloonkeepers of Fayette county, the business houses and most of the taxpayers, as it has been shown that 75 per cent of the county crimes are committed within 48 hours after each pay day when the foreigners have been permitted to carry home great bulks of liquors for a spree. It is believed that barring liquor from the home of the coke worker will revolutionize the coke making. In any event, the corporation is willing to spend a few millions trying it.

COOK AFTER BARRILL.

Will Start Proceedings Against His Mount McKinley Companion.

Minneapolis, Oct. 25.—Dr. Fred A. Cook is about to begin legal proceedings in the Mount McKinley controversy which may take a criminal libel turn against Edwin Barrill, the guide.

This was learned from Dr. Cook here.

Today Dr. Cook proceeded to Missoula, Mont., the home of the mountaineer who so frankly accuses Dr. Cook of fixing data to bolster up the foundation of his book "To the Top of the Continent." Dr. Cook's legal representative already is on the ground and has indicated that inducements were offered Barrill to make the scathing affidavit discrediting the Brooklyn physician's expedition to the summit of the highest mountain in North America.

CHANGES COUNSEL AGAIN.

Attorneys Kellogg and Rose Will Attempt to Free Thaw.

New York, Oct. 25.—Supreme Court Justice Bischoff has signed an order substituting Kellogg and Rose as counsel for Mrs. Mary C. Thaw, in the suit brought by Dr. Allen McLane Hamilton for services as alienist, in place of Morschauser and Hoysradt of White Plains. It is understood that Kellogg and Rose will make the future efforts to have Harry Thaw released from Matteawan.

POSTOFFICE IS BROKEN INTO

Safe Is Blown in Place at East Lansing.

WATCHMAN WAS NEAR THERE

Gave Alarm, but Robbers Fled After Grabbing Stamps.

East Lansing, Mich., Oct. 25.—The East Lansing postoffice was broken into at an early hour Sunday morning, the safe being blown into pieces and the building damaged to a large extent. Members of the M. A. C. faculty heard the report about 2 o'clock, but thinking that some students were celebrating, paid little attention to it. Alphonso Smith, the college night watchman, was near the postoffice at the time and appeared on the scene within a minute after the explosion. He ran to the power house on the opposite side of the campus and telephoned Deputy Sheriff Noah Snyder.

While Smith was telephoning the robbers grabbed a few packages of stamps of small denominations and made their getaway. Within an hour, however, Deputies Snyder, Harton and Blizzard were in pursuit of the burglars, following their track along the road to Pine Lake.

Some bills and other papers in the safe were torn into fragments by the great force of the explosion, which also blew out a large number of windows in the building. Postmaster B. L. Rosencrans is not yet able to estimate the value of the supplies lost. The robbers took only packages of one and two-cent stamps, leaving a big package of high denomination stamps untouched. They broke open the till in the outer room of the postoffice, and took all but three cents of the dollar of change left in it.

W. S. Abels, a Lansing detective, is confident that the work was that of amateurs as the safe was of the sheet iron variety and could have been more easily broken to pieces with a pickaxe than with the big charge of nitro-glycerine that tore everything to pieces.

An attempt was made to "blow" the safe six weeks ago, as former Postmaster C. B. Collingwood found the cracks all soaped up ready for an explosion one morning. It is thought that the burglar alarm frightened the men away the first time, but as the wires of the alarm bell were cut last night it is generally believed that both attempts were made by the same persons.

The deputies followed the supposed tracks of the burglars for a long distance this morning but no clue to their identity has been discovered.

CONVICT GREEK PROMOTER

"Dr." Attias Found Guilty of Obtaining Money Falsely.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 25.—"Dr." Peter G. P. Attias, Greek promoter and one-time physician, has been convicted by a jury in Judge Connolly's courtroom of obtaining money under false pretenses.

Unless a new trial changes the verdict, or the supreme court reverses it, the conviction of the stylish little Greek was the sad ending of the dreams of many Detroiters, mostly Italians, who sank their money in the proposed Globe Radiator company, of which Attias was president.

The complaint on which Attias was convicted was only one of a dozen or more made by Detroiters who invested sums of money ranging from $150 to $1,500 in the Globe Radiator company. In his argument, Prosecutor Aldrich pointed out each of the false promises by which Attias extracted money from persons whom he interested in the project of manufacturing steel metal radiators. Joseph Droishagen was the complainant in the case. He sank $190 in the firm.

Jap Store Blown Up.

Eureka, Cal., Oct. 25.—The Tauchia brothers, Japanese, opened a store in this city a few days ago. At 2:45 Sunday morning some one exploded a bomb in the entrance of the store. The explosion demolished the store front and broken windows in a number of buildings near by. There is no clue to who fired the bomb.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for testimonials.

The Lure of the Mask

By HAROLD MAC GRATH

Copyright, 1909, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

He bent quickly and kissed not the hand, but the wrist where the marks of his fingers still remained faintly. He squared himself and gazed long and steadfastly into her eyes. There was a flutter in her heart that she was unable to define. On his part he realized the moment he was gone the better. There was a hint to his self control. He gained the street somehow. There he stopped and turned. Did the curtain move? He wasn't sure, but he raised his hat, settled it firmly on his head and walked rapidly away.

There was little sleep for him that night, and in the morning the first thing he did was to pick up the wine-glass. It was all true. And then his good resolutions melted and vanished. He must have one more word with her, happen what might. So at 10 o'clock he called a cab and drove rapidly to the Sandford place. Snow had fallen during the night, and many of the steps were still spotless white. Impossible! He leaned from the cab and rubbed his eyes. Absolutely impossible! For what did he see? Wooden shutters over all the lower windows and the iron gates closed before the doors! And not a footprint anywhere. This was extraordinary. He jumped from the cab, ran up the steps and rang the bell—rang it ten times with minute intervals. And no one answered. Then he heard a call from across the street. A man stood in one of the areaways.

"Be careful!"

"Nobody home!" he shouted. "Gone to Egypt."

"But there was some one here last night," Hillard shouted back.

"Dreaming. That house has been empty since November. I happen to be the caretaker."

Hillard went back to his cab dazed. No one there last night? Come, come; there was a mistake somewhere. He would soon find out whether or not he had dined there the night before.

"A cable office!" he cried to the cabby. "Hurry!"

Once there he telephoned downtown and secured Sandford's cable address. Then he filled out a blank, which cost him $10. Late that night at the club he received his reply. It was terse—

You are crazy. House absolutely empty.
SANDFORD.

CHAPTER VII.

THE TOSS OF A COIN.

HILLARD made an inexcusably careless shot. He grounded his cue and stood back from the table. That was the way everything seemed to go—at tennis, at squash, at fencing, at billiards, it was all the same.

"I say, Jack, what's the matter with you anyhow?" asked Merrihew, out of patience.

"It was bad," Hillard agreed. "Perhaps I am not taking the interest in the game that I formerly took."

"And when I make a proposition," pursued Merrihew, "to ride to the Catskills and back, something you would have jumped at a year ago, you shake your head. Think of it! By George, you had a bully time last year! You swore it was the best trip we ever took on the horses. Where's your spirit of adventure?"

"I'm sure I don't know where it is. Shall we finish the game?"

"Not if you're going to throw it like this," declared Merrihew.

"Ten and a string against your half a string," said Hillard, studying the score. "I'll bet a bottle that I beat you."

"Done!" said Merrihew. Being on his mettle, he made a clean score of twenty, five to go. "I can see you paying for that check, Jack."

But the odds tingled Hillard's blood. He settled down to a brilliant play and turned sixty-one in beautiful form.

Later the two passed upstairs to the secluded alcove. Merrihew filled the glasses with the air of one who would like to pass the remainder of his days doing the same thing—not that he was overfond, but each bottle temporarily weeded out that crop of imperishable debts. To him the world grew roseate and kindly viewed through the press of the sparkling grape, and invariably he saw fortune beckoning to the card tables.

"Now, then, Jack, I've got you where I want you. Who is she?"

"On my word, I don't know."

"Then there is a woman!" cried Merrihew. "I knew it. Nothing else would so demoralize you. Drink a health to her."

Hillard raised his glass and touched that of his comrade. For the peace of his mind he determined to tell Merrihew the whole adventure.

"To the lady in the fog!" he said.

"Fog?" blankly.

"Well, the lady in the mask."

"Fog, mask? Two of them?"

"No, only one. Once I met her in the fog, and then I met her in the mask."

"I'll drink to her, but I'm hanged if I don't believe you're coddling me," said Merrihew disappointedly. "This is New York."

"The whole story, Jack, details and all, no half portions."

Hillard told the yarn simply, omitting nothing essential. He even added that for three weeks he had been the author of the personal inquiry as to the whereabouts of one Mme. Angot.

"I don't know, Dan, but this has taken so strong a hold on me that I shan't forget it soon. Imagine it yourself. Oh, but she could sing! I am a man not to be held in the leash of an adventure like this, but she held me. How? By the hope that one day I might see her face with no veil of mystery to hold her off at arm's length."

Merrihew was greatly excited. He was for ordering a second bottle, but Hillard stayed him.

"By George! And you are sure that it was at the Sandfords'?"

"I am positive. But there is a puzzle that I have failed to solve—Sandford's cable and the caretaker's declaration. I know that I was in that house. The patrolman says that he has seen no light in the house since the family sailed for Africa. It is no dream, but it begins to look as if I were the victim of some fine hoax."

"It is more than a hoax, in my opinion. Wait till Sandford returns and finds his silver gone."

Hillard started.

"And his gold plate," continued Merrihew, pleased with the idea. "My boy, that's what it is—the best dodge I ever heard of. It will make a good story for the Sunday papers. You won't be in it unless she ropes you in as an accomplice."

"I'm a romantic ass!" Hillard sighed. Leddy Lightfinger! If this turned out to be the case he would never trust a human being again.

"Let's take that ride on the horses," Merrihew urged. "That'll clear your brain of this sentimental fog."

"No!" Hillard struck his hands together. "I've a better idea than that. I shall go to Italy, and you shall go with me."

"Impossible. Why, I'm all but broke."

"I'll take you as a companion. I'm a sick man, Dan. I'm likely to jump overboard if some one isn't watching me every minute."

"I'd like to go, Jack. Heaven and earth, but I should! But I can't possibly go to Italy with a letter of credit no more than twenty-five hundred, and that's all there is in the exchequer at present."

"Between such friends as we are"—

"That racket won't work. I could not take a moment's peace if I did not feel independent."

"But I'm not going to give it to you," Hillard protested. "I am going to lend it to you."

"And could I ever pay you back if I accepted the loan?" humorously.

"There's Monte Carlo. You might pull down a tidy sum," said the tempter.

"That's the way, you beggar. Hit me on the soft side." But Merrihew was still obdurate.

"Now, listen to reason, Dan. If you wait for the opportunity to go to Europe you'll wait in vain. You must make the opportunity. One must have youth to enjoy Italy thoroughly. The desire to go becomes less and less as one grows older. Besides, it completes every man's education. I'll put the proposition in a way you can't possibly get round. You will always have that thousand, so don't worry about that. You have twenty-five hundred on hand, you say. With that you can see Italy like a prince for three months."

A scar ran from his cheek to his chin.

"What's the proposition?" Merrihew drained the bottle.

"This—I'll agree to take not a penny more than twenty-five hundred myself. We'll go on equal terms. Why," confidently, "besides living like a prince you'll have four hundred to throw away at roulette. Boy, you have never seen Italy; therefore you do not know what beauty is. When we eventually land at Bellagio, on Lake Como, and I take your lily white hand in mine and lead you up to the terrace of Villa Serbelloni and order tea, then you will realize that you have only begun to live—gardens, towering Alps, the green Lecco on one side and the green Como on the other and Swiss champagne at $1.40 the quart! Eh?"

"And then," Hillard added, "there's Kitty Killigrew singing her heart out to a people who can't understand a word she's singing."

"Can it be done for twenty-five hundred?"

Merrihew chewed his cigar with subdued fierceness. He knew very well that he was destined to go to Europe. Kitty Killigrew, who had promised to mail the route they were to play and hadn't!

"It is written, Dan, that you shall go with me."

"We'll settle this argument right here now." Merrihew drew out a coin. "Call it," he cried recklessly.

"Heads!"

The coin flickered in the light, fell and proved that all money is perverse by rolling under the davenport upon which they were sitting. An amusing hunt followed. They ran their hands over the floor, turned the rug, pulled out the davenport and looked behind, burned innumerable matches and finally rang for the attendant. The situation was explained, and he procured a candle. He was ultimately successful.

"Here it is, sir."

"What is it, head or tail?" asked Merrihew weakly.

"Head, sir," said the attendant.

"Keep it," said Merrihew generously, even sadly. He never got up a game of chance that he did not get the worst of it. And now, Italy! All that way from home! "Boy, bring up a bottle of '96."

"And the lady in the mask?" asked Merrihew as they at length stood up.

"I must relegate her to the fog she came out of. But it would be a frightful thing if—if"—He hesitated to form the words.

But Merrihew had no such scruple. "If the silver and plate were missing when the Sandfords return?"

"Oh, bosh! It's all some joke, and I'm the butt of it. She was in that house by the same authority she rode the horse."

"A woman of that sort would have no difficulty in hoodwinking the stablemen," declared Merrihew.

"By the way," he continued, "received a postal from Kitty this morning from Gibraltar. Fine trip. Visited the gun galleries and the antique furniture shops. Says no sign of prima donna as yet, but believes her to be on board. O'Mally's on the water wagon. But Kitty aggravates me."

"What has she done now, refused you by marconigraph?"

"No, but she promised me her address."

"Address her care Cook's, Florence, Rome, Venice. It's the popular mail box of Europe, and if she has given them the address they will forward."

"That helps considerably. I'm glad there's one Cook which can be relied on."

"In the morning I'll arrange for passage. We'll try the Celtic."

"I'll leave the business end of the trip to you."

"The first Saturday in March, then, if we can get booking. That will be in less than two weeks."

In the lobby of the club as they were about to enter the coat room Hillard ran into one of several gentlemen issuing.

"Pardon me," he said, stepping aside.

"Non importa!" said the stranger, with a graceful wave of the hands.

Hillard looked quickly into the gentleman's face. "I am clumsy," he said in Italian.

Then the other stared at him and smiled. For a moment there was a brief tableau, in which each took the other's measure and noted the color of the eyes. The man was an exceedingly handsome Italian, for all that a scar ran from his cheek to his chin. It was all over in a moment, and Hillard and Merrihew proceeded to the street.

"Handsome duffer," was Merrihew's comment. "But you never can tell a man by his looks. Gaze on me, for instance."

"Go home!" Hillard slapped him jovially on the shoulder.

"Home! Ah, yes! But shall I have a home to go to when I get back? You have roped me in nicely. My poor little twenty-five hundred! But Swiss champagne at $1.40 the quart! Well, every cloud has its lining."

As Hillard never received any answer to his personal, he discontinued it. Truly, she had returned to the fog out of which she had come. But it was no less difficult for him to take up the daily affairs again. What mystery veiled her? Whither had she gone?

Giovanni was delighted when he heard the news. He would go, too, and act as valet to the signor and his friend till they put out for Rome. Then, of course, he would be obliged to leave them. Occasionally Hillard would reason with him regarding his deadly projects. But when a Latin declares that he has seen through blood, persuasions, arguments, entreaties, threats do not prevail. He comforted himself with the opinion, however, that Giovanni's hunt would come to no successful end.

"You will surely fall into the hands of the police."

"What God wills comes true. But by this time they will have forgotten me."

"But your man might be dead."

"He is not dead. If he were something would tell me."

"It is a bad business, and I wish you no luck."

Giovanni smiled easily. Wishes seldom interfere with any one.

"I will double your wages," said Hillard, "if you will go where I go and return with me when I come back to America."

A deprecating movement. "Money? It is nothing. I am rich after my kind."

"Are you still in the church?"

"I confess regularly once a week. Oh, I am a good Catholic."

"Take yourself off. I am displeased with you."

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Adelia M. Wheeler died Thursday Oct. 21 at 11 o'clock at Paw Paw, Mich. Death was due to old age. Deceased was born in New York in 1823, and when a child came to Michigan with her parents and settled on a farm in Macon. Mrs. Wheeler was a resident of Tecumseh for over 50 years and during this time occupied the house west of the Methodist church on the site of which Mr. Osborne erected his house.

She is survived by one son, Lavern Wheeler who is in the west, three grandchildren and one great grandchild.

Mrs. Wheeler although 86 years old, was active until the last, retaining all her faculties, so she never became a burden to her children.

It was here in Tecumseh the best days of her life were spent and when her last hour came, and the God of eternity called her to her everlasting rest, it was her desire that beneath the shady trees of our Silent City, should be the eternal abiding place of all that is mortal of her.

The funeral was held Monday afternoon from the Presbyterian church, Rev. Dunning officiating.

The remains were laid to rest beside those of her husband, Solomon Wheeler, in the family lot at Brookside cemetery.

William A. J. Russell.

William A. J. Russell, a well known painter residing in Tecumseh, passed away Monday morning at his home at 2:30 o'clock after several months' illness caused from Bright's disease.

Deceased was 44 years old and is survived by his wife, four children and two sisters.

The funeral will be held at the Friend's church, Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Burial at Brookside.

DEATHS IN THE COUNTY.

Mrs. Bert Lanning

Mrs. Pearl Lanning, wife of Bert Lanning passed away Monday night at her home in Raisin at 10:30 o'clock after several days' suffering from blood poisoning.

ROLAND RICH IS A FREE MAN

Took Jury Nineteen Hourst to Reach Verdict.

Bay City, Mich., Oct. 11.—After being out nineteen hours, the jury that has heard the Roland Rich murder trial returned a verdict of not guilty. A number of women rushed upon the young man when the verdict was made known and kissed him hysterically, even preventing his young wife who attempted to embrace him, from being the first to demonstrate her joy.

A curious situation developed in the jury room. The jury determined that Mrs. Coryeon came to her death by foul means. Several jurymen talked freely after their dismissal and said that they decided to determine first what the twelve men thought of Mrs. Coryeon's death. The first ballot on the question of whether a crime had been committed resulted in 11 to 1 in favor of a crime, and a few moments later, after some discussion, the vote was unanimous in favor of the belief that the aged woman had been murdered. The first ballot on the question of guilt stood 7 to 5, it is declared, in favor of acquittal.

One of the jurors declared that two important links were missing in the prosecution's case. First, the absence of a weapon and the prosecutor's frank declaration that he had done his best to find one, without success; second, that the suit produced in court by Rich's attorney as Roland Rich's wedding suit was of no value whatever to either side, as it had been newly cleaned and pressed.

Burglars Frightened Away.

Deerfield, Mich., Oct. 21.—An attempt was made to "blow" the Deerfield state bank vault, at night, by yeggmen. The men failed to get between $5,000 and $6,000 because of a poorly placed charge. They were frightened away and did not try a second time.

ALMA COLLEGE.

Last Monday evening Zeta Sigma room thundered and echoed with the din of a forensic battle. The question of controversy was: Resolved, that the United States Government should levy a progressive income tax, constitutionality conceded. The affirmative was upheld by Blaske, Waring and Philips, the first speaker also handling the rebuttal. Graves, Call and Thompson conducted the negative line of firing. Blaske's clear cut contentions were more than met by Call's piercing logic, while Graves and Waring bombarded their respective opponents with telling effect. On a whole, the debate was a pronounced success. Both sides had the material well in and were direct and convincing in thier arguments. The decision of the judges was 2-1 in favor of the affirmative.

Following the M. A. C. game, where at Alma was defeated by the score of 34-0, Prof. Mitchell gave a stirring heart to heart talk in chapel. Our defeat was briefly analyzed and it was shown that what the Varsity needed was a bunch of scrubs to scrimmage with. Every male student was made to feel that it was his duty to old Alma to get out and buck the 1st team. Last Friday, the scrubs lined up against the Varsity. Enthusiasm and animation ran rampant on Davis Field. The first team played fast and certain while the newly formed Reserves tackled, plunged, smashed interferance, and even circled the ends for gains. Once on a fumble they secured the ball for a touchdown. For the scrubs Frost at full Blaske at at quarter played good ball, while "Ole" Anderson and Law on the Varsity were up to their old standard. Be it said that much of the ardor and agility of the Reserves is due to Frank Hurst's able coaching.

Last Saturday Alma defeated the Ypsi Normals in a hard fought battle. Throughout the first half Alma threatened to score at least half a dozen times, but the heavier Normals held our men, forcing the ball by splendid resistance or by punting to a less dangerous territory.

The second half started with Alma kicking to Ypsi against a strong wind. The Normals were held for downs. Attempting to punt on the third down they failed, big "Ole" of Elk Rapids, blocking the kick and Hooper securing the pig skin on the visitor's 40 yard line. Line plunging and a forward pass to King gave Alma 20 yards. Cook then plunged off tackle for a touch down. Von Thurn failed to kick goal. Alma was penalized 35 yards. This infused new energy infused new energy into the visitors for they carried the ball to Alma's two yard line, but were held there for downs. Cook punted out of danger and time was called.

Law of Cadillac entered during the last half playing a good game. Anderson, Keigen and Cook starred for the Presbyterians. Time of halves—25 minutes. Score—Alma, 5; Ypsi, 0. Referee—Ashley. Umpire—Helmer.

The Family Reading Problem

To find reading that satisfies one's craving for the bright and attractive, and is at the same time perfectly suitable for impressionable young people, is at times difficult. The best magazines are admittedly published for mature readers only. The Youth's Companion alone is for all the family. While the editors keep in mind the eager desire of the young for tales of action, enterprise and adventure, these stories in The Companion are so well written as to fascinate men and women in all stages of life's journey. And this is true not only of the fiction in The Companion, but of the entire contents. The articles, by famous writers, convey knowledge that is useful to the wisest and most experienced as well as to the immature. In short, The Companion solves the reading problem for the entire family. It is entertaing and it is "worth while". Every new subscriber will find it of special advantage to send at once the $1.75 for the new 1910 Volume. Not only does he get the beautiful "Venetian" Calendar for 1910, lithographed in thirteen colors and gold, but all the issues of The Companion for the remaining weeks of 1909, from the time the subscription is received.

WASHING NEW FLANNELS—It is surprising how a little care in washing new flannel lengthens its life and preserves its appearance. First of all put the garment or the piece of flannel into a large tub filled with cold water, rain water where obtainable, but otherwise with a little ammonia added. The water must be cold; no other method will extract the sulphur which is contained in all new flannels. Steep it for at least two hours. Have ready a tub of hot, not boiling, water, add a little soap jelly (too much soap makes flannel shiny) and a tablespoonful of ammonia. Put the flannel into this and rub lightly with the hands, giving extra attention to seams, gathers and thick places. Wash again through warm water with a smaller quantity of soap jelly in it, and rinse in tepid water. Pass twice through the wringer, and hang out-of-doors, if possible, with the thickest and heaviest part uppermost. This precaution is necessary, otherwise the water drains into the yoke, coller or waistband and thickens those parts.—"Household Information and Economies," in The Ladies' World for November.

Dock ensions below the Casino at a cost of hundreds of thousands of dollars are also forecast by Mr. Zimmerman.

Her Dime.

Somebody had given the east side woman a bad dime. It was composed largely of lead. She tried to pass it at several places, but they are wary for some reason or other on the east side. They invariably ring a dime on the counter once or twice and bite it besides. When she got home with the dime it had several holes in it from the pressure of east side teeth. "It is more impossible than ever," she said.

The impecunious man called that evening. He had a dollar with him which was wholly intact—that is to say, it had not been broken.

"I am afraid they'll give me bad money for it," he said upon taking his departure, "over here in these east side cars. Will you change it for me?"

"I shall be delighted," said she.

He called a week later with a grouch.

"You can't seem to get away from the bad money over here on your old east side," he complained. "Somebody or other stung me with an old lead dime that was full of holes."—New York Press.

Convincing the Waiter.

"I have learned how to make the foreign waiters in the restaurants where I eat think I have lived in Europe half a lifetime," said a woman who never dines at home. "I dawdle over my dinner twice as long as anybody else in the place. It requires no effort for me to do that. By nature I eat in the same leisurely manner that I do everything else. Most of my compatriots bolt their food. As a consequence the foreign waiters who are used to leisurely dining regard them with amazed horror.

"'Ah, those Americans!' they exclaim. 'Some day they choke. But as for madame'—meaning me—'well, madame is different. Madame nibbles, she sips, she lingers; therefore she is not as those of common American clay. It takes madame never less than two hours to eat her dinner. That marks her as one of the European elect.'"—New York Globe.

Some Odd Spelling.

Americans, says the London News, employ the word "Britisher," which they invented, in a contemptuous sense. It was a certain Philadelphia wit who is said to have asked his friends what a "Britisher" would mean to convey by the written word "ghoughphtheightteeau." He had to explain to them that, according to the genius of the English language, it meant "potato." Thus: Gh—p, as in "hiccough;" ough—o, as in "dough;" phth—t, as in "phthisis;" eigh—a, as in "neighbor;" tte—t, as in "gazette," and eau—o, as in "beau." This was at least as puzzling as the livery stable keeper's bill which contained the two lines—

Unappreciated Efforts.

Unselfish goodness is seldom appreciated in this world of ours. There was that man in the electric car, for instance. Having rung up three fares in his efforts to stop the car for the lady that sat on the opposite side, he tossed after her the umbrella that belonged to the little gray whiskered man on his right. Neither the gray whiskered man nor the conductor liked the thoughtful Samaritan for his altruistic efforts.—Boston Transcript.

New York, Oct. 14.—Japan's desire for close and friendly relations with the United States was again emphasized Wednesday at a luncheon given at the Hotel Astor by the American Silk association to the honorary commissioners of Japan. "The Americans are the best friends Japan has among the nations," said Baron Kanda, a professor in the Peers' Institute at Tokio, spokesman for the visitors at the luncheon.

The Japanese earlier in the day visited the stock exchange, the sub-treasury, the clearing house and the city hall, where Mayor McClellan tendered them the freedom of the city. Last night they were entertained at dinner at the Hotel Astor by the Presbyterian board of foreign missions and the philanthropic Christian church institutions of New York.

There are some remarkable short stories in the November Lippincott's. One of them is "Mary and Martha at Lunch," by Marion Hill, author of "The Pettison Twins." This has rare originality and subtle humor, with a dash of pathos by way of seasoning. "Love and a Morning Ride," by Elizabeth Maury Coombs is a striking tale of the Southland. Other good stories are: "A Dead Letter Come to Life," by Anne Warner; "Lost—a Turkey," by Elliott Flower; "The Sight of the Soul," by Helen Talbot Porter; and "Much Ado About Nothing," by Thomas L. Masson. The complete novel in this issue is "The Magnate of Paradise," by Mary Imlay Taylor.

SOCIAL EVENTS.

BASKET BALL TEAM

Gave Box Social Friday Evening.

Friday evening the basket ball team of the Tecumseh high school gave a successfnl box social and dance at the Witherell hall, about 100 being present.

Many guests were present from Britton, Clinton and Holloway schools.

At 8:30 the grand march took place and at the close of it Frank Snell the auctioneer announced the sale of boxes.

Many of the boxes were sold for good prices the highest being $1.90. Mr. Snell proved himself well fitted for his position and made the boys "divy."

After supper the hours were pleasantly passed away until 12 o'clock in dancing. Music was furnished by Miss Edna Lucas.

The girls took in about $65.75 and out of this cleared over $25 which will be a great help to their team.

CLUB NOTES.

Mrs. T. R. Mead is entertaining a company of lady friends at bridge at her home on Pearl street this afternoon.

The members of the Baptist church will give a reception at the church parlors this evening in honor of their pastor Rev. Hartzog. A program will be given and refreshments will be served.

The Monday club meeting held Monday afternoon was an unusually interesting one and the attendance was large there being 39 members and five guests present. Aside from the program published in Friday's Herald, readings from Longfellow's "Idylls of the King" were given by Mesdames Wright, James and Harris.

The first meeting of the Merry-go-round club was held at the home of James McCann and wife Monday evening. Eight tables of pedro were played progressively and prizes were awarded to Miss Ethel Garlinghouse and Mrs. R. A Heesen. Refreshments were served at the conclusion of the games. The house was prettily decorated for the occasion with Hallowe'en decorations, the color scheme being black and yellow, and black cats and pumpkins being used.

AMUSEMENTS.

The Majestic Stock company was not up to the standard it was expected to be and after the first performance Mr. Marks cancelled the remainder of the week's engagement.

Mr. Marks is trying to please the public by securing good plays and so far this season has secured some very good ones, but when he finds he has booked a company which will hurt the house he immediately cancells the engagement.

Action will remove the doubt which theory cannot solve.

FATAL ACCIDENT

E. A. ROSE, LAKE SHORE MAIL CLERK, INSTANTLY KILLED.

Stepped in Front of Switch Engine.

Friday night at 6:30, E. A. Rose, mail clerk on the Jackson branch of the Lake Shore stepped in front of a switch engine in the Adrian yards and was instantly killed.

Rose had left his mail car and had taken the mail from the box at the east end of the depot and was returning to his car. Just as he started to cross the track the engine struck him breaking both legs, his neck and cutting him badly about the waist. The body was taken to Mott's undertaking rooms where it was cared for and Saturday afternoon it was shipped to his home in Jackson.

Those who saw the accident say that Rose could not have known the engine was coming, either because his glasses blinded him or because in his hurry to get back to his car he did not look to see if the track was clear. No blame was laid on the switching crew, as he stepped on the track when the engine was only a few feet away, and they had no time to signal.

Mr. Rose was 60 years old and for the past three years has been employed by the L. S. & M. S. as mail clerk on the Jackson branch.

SCHOOL NOTES.

Adelaide Putnam was absent a few days last week on account of sickness.

The boys of the 12th grade room enjoyed a short talk by Miss Nellie D. Mingay, who took for her subject, "Tip your Hat." It was very instructive and it is hoped that the boys of the H. S. will profit by it.

ADDISON MAN HAS A CLOCK THOUGHT CENTURIES OLD

Marcenus Whitcher of Addison, Mich., possesses a rare old clock, several hindred years old; big, massive and strange in its modern surroundings of the twentieth century. For many generations this old timekeeper has been passing down from father to the oldest child of each succeeding family. They trace its history back through 200 years and most of this time it has been doing efficient service by keeping good time, even as it does today.

It not only keeps a record of the seconds, minutes, hours, days, weeks and months, but a moon rises and wanes in true time with our natural luminary in the heavens. A large map of the eastern hemisphere in a somewhat crude form adorns a part of its big face, no western hemisphere being thereon, thus leading its possessors to suspect that it was made centuries ago. Many times Mr. Whitcher has been offered a good price ror it, but because of loyalty to family custom of handing it down through the generations, he has refused to part with it.

Any man who plots another's undoing is arranging his own.

The man who pursues pleasure will never catch up with her.

SAFE BLOWING

AT RIDGEWAY LAST SATURDAY MORNING.

Yeggs Secure $20 in Cash.

An attempt was made early Saturday morning to blow the safe in S. C. Eastlick's general store at Ridgeway. The safe was blown and the entire front of his store was wrecked. The yeggs secured about $20. The postoffice is in Mr. Eastlick's store and it was to this department the money belonged.

As near as can be learned the robbers forced an entrance by way of the front door, having first secured tools along the railroad track where the section men had been working. It is supposed that dynamite was used, for not only was the door blown off the safe but every pane of glass in the front of the store was smashed. The store presented a sorry appearance Saturday morning.

A number of the people in the village claim to have been awakened by the explosion about 3 o'clock Saturday morning and immediately got up to see what the trouble was. Several claim they saw a single rig containing two men drive east on the main road and it is thought they were headed for Toledo.

General belief is that the robbery was committed by the same men who tried to rob the Deerfield state bank last week.

About Divorces.

Divorces seem to increase in popularity in Michigan as a means of settling family troubles, statistics gathered by the secretary of state showing that 3,019 were granted by the courts of the state during 1908 and 10,557 bills were pending at the end of the year. Secretary of State Martindale also furnishes comparative figures showing that the number of applications for divorce are increasing.

Most of the applicants for freedom from their marital ties seem to have convinced the courts of their right to a decree, for only nineteen were refused, while 264 cases have been withdrawn during the year. There were 430 new cases started in 1908 the remainder of the big total being cases which had been carried over from the previous year.

C. A. Wright Sells a Remedy for Catarrh on that Liberal Basis.

Breathe HYOMEI over the germ-ridden membrane, and it will kill the germs, and cure catarrh.

There is no other way—you must get where the germs are before you can destroy.

And when catarrh germs have disappeared, other things will happen: there will be no more hawking, not even in the morning; that offensive breath will disappear; there will be no more obnoxious mucuos, or coughing, or sneezing, or huskiness of voice, or difficulty in breathing. All these disagreeable accessories of the demon catarrh will disappear, and as they go the glow of health will return, and all the strength and energy that was formerly used in combating the inroads of catarrh, will bring back your vitality and ambition, will make a new, healthy, happy being of you in a few weeks.

C. A. Wright & Son will sell you a complete Hyomei outfit for $1.00. This includes a fine inhaler, a bottle of Hyomei (pronounced High-o-me), and instructions for use. Sold by leading druggists everywhere. Extra bottles 50c. And bear in mind, money back if Hyomei doesn't cure.

Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the idea of treating the cause, rather than the effect, would come into practice. A tiny, inside, hidden nerve, says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branche also goes to the Heart, and one to the kidneys. When these "inside nerves" fail, then the organs must falter. Dr. Shoop's Restoratives is directed specifically to these failing nerves. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment patients say they realize a gain. Sold by C. A. Wright & Son.

TO AILING WOMEN

A Little Sound Advice Will Help Many a Sufferer in Tecumseh.

No woman can be healthy and well if the kidneys are sick. Poisons that pass off in the secretions when the kidneys are well, are retained in the body when the kidneys are sick. Kidneys and bladder become inflamed and swollen and worse troubles quickly follow. This is often the true cause of bearing-down pains, lameness, backache, sideache, etc. Uric poisoning also causes headaches, dizzy spells, languor, nervousness and rheumatic pains.

When suffering so, try Doan's Kidney Pills, a remedy that cures sick kidneys. You will get better as the kidneys get better, and health will return when the kidneys are well. Let a Tecumseh woman tell you about Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. George Burrough, W. Potawatamie St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "About a year ago my health began to fail and my whole body began to ache. My kidneys did not act as they should and my back ached a great deal. Knowing of persons who had used Doan's Kidney Pills for similar troubles with the best of results, I procured a box at C. A. Wright & Son's drug store. A few weeks after beginning their use I felt much better and at the present time I am free from the aches and pains. I willingly recommend Doan's Kidney Pills as I know that they are reliable." Sold by C. A. Wright & Son.

Rheumatism

I have found a tried and tested cure for Rheumatism! Not a remedy that will straighten the distorted limbs of chronic cripples, nor turn bony proyrths back to flesh again. That is impossible, but I can now surely kill the pains and pangs of this deplorable disease.

In Germany—with a Chemist in the City of Darmstadt—I found the last ingredient with which Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy was made a perfected, dependable prescription. Without that last ingredient, I successfully treated many, many cases of Rheumatism; but now, at last, it uniformly cures all curable cases of this heretofore much dreaded disease. Those sand-like granular wastes, found in Rheumatic Blood, seem to dissolve and pass away under the action of this remedy as freely as does sugar when added to pure water. And then, when dissolved, these poisonous wastes freely pass from the system, and the cause of Rheumatism is gone forever. There is now no real need—no actual excuse to suffer longer without help. We sell, and in confidence recommend Passes Away at His Summer Home Near Albany.

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 25.—Rufus W. Peckham, an associate justice of the United States supreme court, is dead at his summer home, Coolmore, in Altamont, a short distance from Albany, in the Helderberg mountains. His death was due to angina pectoris.

The father, too, was a supreme court justice and later elected to the court of appeals of this state and lost his life in the wreck of the steamship Ville de Le Havre, Nov. 22, 1873. which he studied law in his father's office and was admitted to the bar when 21 years old. Soon after he became a member of the firm of Peckham and Tremain and that firm lasted until the death of Mr. Termain, when the firm became Peckham & Rosendale. This was in 1878.

Mild Laxative for Baby Free

The child of today is the parent of the future, and whether it grows up healthy and strong, or puny and weak, depends upon the intelligence of its parents, for most children are born into the world healthy, but thousands become future weaklings between birth and the age of ten, when the parents are still in greatest control.

The prime cause of trouble is in the stomach. A baby that is digesting its food seldom cries and always looks cheerful; the little child whose stomach is good romps and plays and never whines; the growing child learns well at school and is eager for fun if its head is clear and its stomach light, and that means if it has no constipation.

The best and safest way to cure any irregularity of the stomach and bowels in children is by the use of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. This is a liquid laxative wonderful in its effect as Mrs. John W. Dunham, Apple Creek, O., Mrs. H. L. Cullum, Flatville, Ind., and numerous others can testify who give it to their children with extraordinary results.

A bottle only costs 50 cents or, if according to the size you want, and even one 50-cent bottle will do a wonderful amount of good in a family, it can be given to any member of the family in constipation, sour stomach, indigestion, torpid liver, dyspepsia, heartburn, sick headache and similar digestive troubles. It never gripes or strangles like pills, tablets, salts and powders, which should not be given to children, women or old folks.

If you have a child or other member of the family who needs, but has never used this grand laxative tonic, send your name and address to the doctor and a free trial bottle will be sent to your home. In this way you can find out what it will do without personal expense.

If there is anything about your ailment that you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 500 Caldwell bldg., Monticello, Ill.

SHOT CHORUS GIRL WIFE

Irate Husband Then Puts Bullet Into Own Brain.

TRAGEDY IN RAILWAY STATION

William Short, Paroled Convict, Attempts, in Washington, to Take Life of Wife, Member of Chorus of "Motor Girl" Company—Shooting Followed Series of Quarrels.

Washington, Oct. 25.—Mrs. Evelyn Short, whose stage name is Evelyn Howard, a chorus girl with the "Motor Girl" company, was shot three times by her husband, William Short of New York, a paroled convict, at the Union station, in this city. Short then turned the pistol on himself, sending a bullet through his right temple, and died about a half hour later at the Casualty hospital. Mrs. Short is at the same hospital, with three bullets in her left side. The physicians said there was a good chance for her recovery.

The shooting was the culmination of a married life filled with trouble. The couple were married about seven years ago. Short was a teller in a New York bank, was found short in his accounts a year later. He fled, but was captured and sentenced to six years in Sing Sing. While he was in prison their only child, a boy, died.

Joined Chorus and Earns Living.

Mrs. Short, to support herself and her mother, and to send her husband many little things not furnished to convicts, went on the stage as a chorus girl. She appeared in the "Follies of 1909," "American Idea," Forty-five Minutes From Broadway" and other companies. When Short was released from Sing Sing his wife lived with him for a while, but left him and returned to the stage.

The shooting followed a series of quarrels which the couple have had since Friday, when Short came here and endeavored to have his wife leave the stage and return to New York with him. She had started for the station to go to Pittsburg, where the company will begin its performances on Monday. With her, in a cab, were her husband and Miss Caldwell, another member of the "Motor Girl" company. According to Miss Caldwell, Short acted in an ugly way toward his wife on the way to the station, and several times took hold of her roughly. Mrs. Short threatened to scream. Short told her if she screamed he would make her sorry. Short kept on insisting that his wife return to New York with him, but she declined and said she was going to Pittsburg with the company.

Pursues Wife With Pistol.

When the station was reached, Miss Caldwell said, the husband was infuriated, and Mrs. Short sprang out of the cab terrified. Her husband followed, and both stumbled. Both regained their feet, and Mrs. Short, who had evidently caught a glimpse of the revolver, ran down the portico screaming. Short followed and called for her to stop. She half turned and cried out, "Don't shoot me, Will; please don't."

Short fired, and she sank to the pavement. Short came up and, standing over her, fired two shots more into her body. Short then placed the weapon to his right temple, pulled the trigger and fell unconscious beside his wife.

Mrs. Short, who did not lose consciousness, struggled weakly to her feet. She was helped to a taxicab and taken to the hospital. While the surgeons were dressing her wounds she inquired about the condition of her husband and said that she hoped he would get well.

Mrs. Short is twenty-four years old, and good looking. She has chestnut hair, very dark eyes and regular features. Short was about thirty-four, tall, with dark hair and eyes.

The police telegraphed to Inspector McCafferty, at New York, asking him to notify Mrs. Short's mother, and also friends or family, of the tragedy.

ROBBED IN LONDON.

Detroit Man Loses His Money and Valuables.

London, Oct. 25.—An American named Voelkner, said to be president of the Voelkner & Harry Manufacturing company of Detroit, has sailed on the Mauretania, after being the victim of a robbery which left him practically stranded and penniless in London since last Tuesday. He had been at a hotel in Great Russell street.

As far as can be learned, a day or two ago three gentlemanly-looking men picked up an acquaintance with him and, after luring him to a room, at the point of a revolver made him deliver up everything of value he possessed. This is said to have included several thousand dollars in cash, a valuable gold watch and a steamship ticket to America.

Rich Spice Importer of Jamaica, L. I., on Death Bed, Directed That Michigan Be Searched For Descendants of His Brother — Fruitless Search Has Been Going on For Two Years.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 4.—Edward E. Dean, an attorney from Jamaica, L. I., is in the city in an effort to locate the children of Edward Kinnilly, who are heirs to the estate of his brother, William, a wealthy bachelor who died leaving about $250,000.

A great many years ago William and Edward Kinnilly came to this country from Ireland, locating at Amherstburg, Ont., just below Detroit, where they finally separated. William went to New York city, where he accumulated great wealth through importing teas, coffees and spices.

Upon his deathbed he caused his attorney to draw up a will, and in it he specified that a thorough search be made to find his brother, and suggested that Michigan be thoroughly searched.

An exhaustive search for the heirs has been going on for two years, but as far no such name could be found in any court records of this state. The courts of the state of New York have notified Mr. Dean that unless the heirs are found within two months the estate will revert to the state of New York.

PUNISH CARELESS EMPLOYES

Dickinson Believes Laws Should Be Passed Giving Power to Commission.

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 4.—"Ultimately, I believe, the commission will have to ask for laws under which it or some other state authority may proceed against railway employes who are responsible for train wrecks though no one is injured," declares Railway Commissioner Dickinson. "Carelessness is often the cause, and men who do not obey railway laws should be taken in hand by the state, not left to the railways for punishment. Simple discharge is often not a sufficiently severe punishment."

Commissioner Dickinson's comment was brought out by an inquiry relative to a wreck in Detroit one week ago, when a Pere Marquette switch engine crashed into the side of Wabash train No. 3, slicing the sides off a day coach and Pullman sleeper and injuring several persons.

Chambermaids Are Arrested, Charged With Theft.

Saginaw, Mich., Nov. 4.—Bedecked in gorgeous finery, including expensive tailored gowns, French lingerie and stunning hats from a fashionable millinery store, Florence and Eva Weaver, pretty chambermaids at the Pacific hotel here, were arrested at the culmination of one day's splendor and now languish in jail on suspicion of larceny.

George Lawler, a guest at the hotel, reported to the police the theft, on Oct. 25, of his pocketbook containing $135, which he left under his pillow on leaving his room. Suspicion fell on the Weaver girls.

Shot by Playmate.

Tekonsha, Mich., Nov. 4.—Leo Shedd, the three-year-old son of George Shedd, was shot through the side by Albert Abrams, aged fourteen. The boys had been playing with a 22 caliber rifle and didn't know that it was loaded. The bullet entered the right side below the arm and came out on the left side just above the hip. The little fellow is in a very serious condition, but has a chance to recover.

INTERESTING FIGURES ABOUT STATE TAXES

Lansing Records Show Assessments For Years Past.

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 4.—At this time, when taxes are receiving considerable attention, owing to the amount which has been levied for various governmental purposes, there are interesting figures in the auditor general's office showing the gradual increase since the state was established and the first levy spread in 1838, which amounted to $85,906.95. This year the levy was $5,929,000.74.

During the years since the organization of the state a total of $88,490,195.87 has been levied for the expenses of government. In 1841 the levy had increased to $103,000, dropping back to less than $75,000 until 1845, when it increased again to over $100,000. In 1853 only $10,000 was raised, which was the smallest tax levy in the history of the state. The next year it had increased to $30,000, the following year to $40,000, and in 1859 it jumped from $85,000 to $202,000, which probably created as much commotion in the state as did the levy of the last legislature.

In 1861, when the war came on, the levy was $464,000, running about that amount until 1865, when it increased to $642,000. The first $1,000,000 tax levy was spread in 1877. In 1878, 1880 and 1884 it dropped below the $1,000,000 mark, but since 1884 the budget has always been over $1,000,000. In 1895 the first $3,000,000 levy was raised. It dropped back to $2,000,000 the following year, and that has been the low water mark since.

EXCELLENT YEAR.

Michigan Sugar Company Will Turn Out 100,000,000 Pounds of Sugar.

Saginaw, Mich., Nov. 4.—In the midst of what is likely to prove the most prosperous season in its existence, the Michigan Sugar company held its regular quarterly directors' meeting here.

A dividend of 1 1-2 per cent on the preferred stock was declared and of 1 per cent on common. These were the same dividends declared at the last quarterly meeting.

The indications are that this year's output of the company will reach 100,000,000 pounds of refined sugar, which will be a heavy advance over last year and the record to date. The company's six plants are slicing over 6,000 tons of beets and turning out 1,500,000 pounds of granulated sugar every twenty-four hours.

Peter Richards, aged eighty-one, and married for the third time six weeks ago, is dead at St. Johns, as the result of taking a large dose of opium. It is alleged that the domestic relations of the couple were not pleasant.

At a meeting of the board of education of Ypsilanti it was decided to abolish fraternities and sororities in the high school. An effort will be made by the faculty to establish literary societies.

An epidemic, said by Standish physicians to be chickenpox, but it is believed by many to be smallpox, is worrying residents of Standish, and Dr. Warren, county health officer, has sent for an officer of the state board of health to investigate.

John Marrooney, a negro waiter in a Battle Creek hotel, is under arrest on suspicion of having robbed Mrs. A. Hirsch of Chicago of $5,000 worth of diamonds last August. The man admits having been in Chicago at the time, but denies the theft.

Louis O. Bannister, who conducts a small poultry farm at Holland, thinks he has hens that are record breakers. Twenty-two of the fowl, he says, laid 3,493 eggs during the year, which sold for $75.31. As the total outlay for food and other necessities was only $35.36, this shows a snug profit.

HIS FOLLOWERS READY TO QUIT

Roosevelt Has Tired Out Those With Him In Africa.

REGRETS CRITICISM IN U. S.

Has Killed Only One Specimen of Each Animal, Except Lions—People of the Land Amazed at Energy of Former Chief Executive—Tells Chicagoan He Is Having "Bully Time."

Chicago, Nov. 4.—Members of the party of Theodore Roosevelt, on his hunting trip in Africa, are "tired to death and ready to quit," according to E. W. Newman, who has returned to Chicago from a tour through East Africa, over the same ground as that traversed by the former president.

Mr. Newman met the Roosevelt party last July at Nairobi, British East Africa, and had a long talk with the former president and his hunting companions. Regret over criticism aroused in America by the slaughter of animals was expressed by Mr. Roosevelt, according to Mr. Newman.

"I regret very much the criticism and claim of wanton slaughter of animals which I have heard has come from Americans," Mr. Newman quotes Colonel Roosevelt, "because I have only been killing one specimen and no more, except in the case of lions, a pest to humanity. In the case of the lions I have received the heartiest thanks of the people of the neighborhood in which I have killed the beasts.

Shoots Often.

"I am not a good shot," the famous hunter said to the Chicagoan, "but I shoot often."

"The people of the land are amazed at the energy of the former president," said Mr. Newman, "the individual members of his caravan have been marched to death and are anxious to quit.

"The people of British East Africa declare that Colonel Roosevelt talks finance to a banker, farming to a farmer and politics to a politician with equal ease.

"'I am having a bully time and am perfectly delighted with the treatment which I have received in this country,' the great hunter said to me on the occasion of my first meeting with him. 'We did not talk politics, and I did not ask him how many animals he had killed, being warned beforehand that these were two questions which were barred. The last time I saw Colonel Roosevelt was in August, at Lake Naiwasha. I did not know the Roosevelt party was in the vicinity until I came to the edge of the lake and saw Kermit Roosevelt sitting on the bank, waiting for a hippo which he had shot to come up, an event which sometimes takes several hours.

High School Students Strike.

Cleveland, Nov. 4.—Over 200 boys and girls of the west side high school went on a strike Wednesday, demanding single sessions and better lunches. The strikers, who come principally from the two upper classes, walked out in a body, and the boys held a mass meeting on the public square, where Henry Roegge, a senior, addressed them. It was decided that none should return to school until single sessions were restored and better lunches provided.

Wrote His Will on Wall.

Savannah, Ga., Nov. 4.—Peter G. Leist, fifty years old, was found dead in a chair at his residence on the Augusta road. An indication that Leist feared death would soon come was evidenced by the fact that he had written his will on a wall of the room in which he lived. Leist decreed that all his property, his house and lot and adjoining lot and cash in the bank, be left to his eight-year-old son, Peter G. Leist, Jr.

The Forests on the Niger.

The insects of Africa are expert disease carriers, and they come in such numbers on the Niger that one hardly dares to use one's lamp or go too near a light of any sort at night. These forests on the Niger are deadly places for all their haunting attraction and take a big toll both of European and native life. Yet the first three days on the Niger, with all its mud and its smell and its mangrove files and its frogs and its crickets, are enough to give the newcomer an inkling of the drawing power, the fascination, of what is probably the most unhealthy country in the world.—W. B. Thompson in Blackwood's.

CHAPTER X.

CARABINIERI.

"SIGNORI," began Hillard calmly, "before you act will you not do me the honor to explain this visit?"

"It is not he!" said one of the carabinieri. "It is the master, and not the servant. This is Signor Hillar, is it not?" he continued, addressing himself to Hillard. "The signor has a servant by the name of Giovanni?"

"Yes. And what has he done to warrant this visit?"

"It is a matter of seven years," answered the spokesman. "Your servant attempted to kill an officer in Rome. Luigi here, who was then interested in the case in Rome, thought he recognized Giovanni in the street today. Inquiries led us here."

"At any rate, it looks as though Giovanni had been forewarned of your visit," answered Hillard. "And may I ask what is the name of the officer Giovanni attempted to kill?"

"It is not necessary that you should know."

Hillard accepted the rebuke with becoming grace.

"And now, signor," with the utmost courtesy, "permit us to apologize for this intrusion. We shall wait in the hall, and if we find Giovanni we shall gladly notify you of the event."

"Hello! What's this?" exclaimed Hillard, going to the table when the officers had gone. It was a note addressed to him:

My Kind Master—The carabinieri are after me. But rest easy. I was not born to rot in a dungeon. I am going north. As for my clothes, send them to Giacamo, the baker, who lives on the road to El Deserta. He will understand. May the Holy Mother guard you should we never meet again!

Hillard passed the note to Merrihew.

"That's too bad. I've taken a great fancy to him. It seems that the peasant has no chance on this side of the water. His child a painted dancer in Paris and a price on his own head! It's hard luck. And the fellow who caused all this trouble goes free."

"He always goes free, Dan, here or elsewhere."

"Why, we'd have lynched him in America."

"That's possible. We are such an impulsive race," ironically. "Yes, no doubt we'd have lynched him, and these foreigners would have added another ounce of fact to their belief that we are still barbarians."

"I hadn't thought of that," Merrihew admitted.

Merrihew became impatient.

"Now out with it. Where and how did you learn that Kitty is in Venice?"

Hillard told him briefly.

"And so they are all in Venice, broke? By George, here's our chance—everlasting gratitude and all that! We'll bail 'em out and ship 'em home! How is that for a bright idea?"

"Let me see," said Hillard practically. "There are five of them—five hundred for tickets and doubtless five hundred more for unpaid hotel bills. It would never do, Dan, unless we wish to go home with them."

"But I haven't touched my letter of credit yet. I could get along on two thousand."

"Not with the brand of cigars you are smoking, 30 cents each."

"No; we can't bail them out, but we can ease up their bills till money comes from home. Not one of them by this time will have a watch. O'Mally will remain sober from dire necessity. Poor Kitty Killigrew! All the wonderful shops and not a stiver in her pockets!"

Merrihew paced the floor for some time, his head full of impossible schemes. He stopped in the middle of the room with an abruptness which portended something.

"I have it. Instead of going directly to Venice, we'll change the route and go to Monte Carlo. I'll risk my four hundred, and if I win"—

"Then the announcement cards, a house wedding and pictures in the New York papers. Dan, you are impossible. You have gambled enough to know that when you are careless of results you win, but never when you need the cash. But it is Monte Carlo if you say so. Two or three days there will cure you of your beautiful dream. After all," with a second thought, "it's a good cause, and it might be just your luck to win. The masquerading lady! Monte Carlo it is."

Merrihew danced a jig. Hillard stepped to the mirror and bowed profoundly. The jig ceased.

"Madame, permit me, a comparative stranger, to offer you passage money home. We won it at Monte Carlo. It is yours. Polite enough," mused Hillard, "but hanged if it sounds proper."

"To the deuce with propriety!" cried Merrihew buoyantly. "We'll start tomorrow?"

From her window Kitty looked down on the Campo, which lay patched with black shadows and moonshine. How still at night was this fairy city in the sea! There were no horses clattering over the stone pavements, no trains, no omnibuses. The stillness which was of peace lay over all things. And some of this had entered Kitty's heart.

But for one thing the hour would have been perfect. Kitty, ordinarily brave and cheerful, was very lonesome and homesick. The denial failure of it all! She had danced, sung, spoken her lines the very best she knew how, and none had noticed or encouraged her. It was a bitter cup after all the success at home. If only she could take it philosophically like La Signorina!

And there were so many things she could not understand. Why should La Signorina always go veiled? Where did she disappear so mysteriously in the daytime? And those sapphires and diamonds and emeralds? Why live here with such a fortune hanging round her neck?

"Kitty?" The voice came from the doorway. Kitty was startled for a moment, but it was only La Signorina. Kitty furtively wiped her eyes.

"I am over here by the window. The moon was so bright I did not light the lamp."

La Signorina moved with light step to the window, bent and caught Kitty's face between her hands and turned it firmly toward the moon.

"You have been crying, cara!"

"I am very lonely," said Kitty.

"You poor little homeless bird!" La Signorina seized Kitty impulsively in her arms. "If I were not"— She hesitated.

"If you were not?"

"If I were not poor, but rich instead, I'd take you to one of the fashionable hotels. You are out of place here in this rambling old ruin."

"Not half so much as you are," Kitty replied.

"I am never out of place. I can live comfortably in the fields with the peasants, in cities in extravagant hotels. My mind is always at one height. Where the body is does not matter much."

There was a subtle hauteur in the voice. It subdued Kitty's inquisitiveness.

"Sometimes," said Kitty, drying the final tear—"sometimes I am afraid of you."

"And wisely. I am often afraid of myself. I always do the first thing that enters my head, and generally it is the wrong thing. Never mind. The old woman here will trust us for some weeks yet." She leaned from the window and called, "Pomp-e-o!"

A good stroke sent the gondola up the canal.

From the canal the gondolier answered.

"Now then!" said the woman to the girl.

Kitty threw a heavy shawl over her head and shoulders, while the other wound about her face the now familiar dark gray veil, and the two went down into the Campo to the landing.

Pompeo threw away his cigarette and doffed his hat. He offered his elbow to steady the women as they boarded, and once they were seated a good stroke sent the gondola up the canal. Under bridges they passed. They glided by little restaurants where Venetians in olden days talked liberty for themselves and death to the Austrians, and at length they came out upon the Grand canal where the Rialto curves its ancient blocks of marble.

"There! This is better."

"It is always better when you are with me," said Kitty.

For years Kitty had fought her battles alone, independent and resourceful, and yet here she was leaning upon the strong will of this remarkable woman, and gratefully too.

"Now, my dear Kitty, we'll just enjoy ourselves tonight, and on our return I shall lay a plan before you, and tomorrow you may submit it to the men."

"I accept it at once without knowing what it is."

"What a beautiful palace!" Kitty cried presently, pointing to a house not far from the house of Petrarch. The moon poured broadly upon it. The gondola posts stood like sleeping sentinels, and the tide murmured over the steps.

Pompeo, seeing Kitty's gesture, swung the gondola diagonally across the canal.

"No, no, Pompeo!" La Signorina spoke in Italian. "I have told yo never to go near that house withoi express orders. Straight ahead."

"Who lives there?" asked Kitty.

"Nobody," answered La Signorina, "though once it was the palace of a great warrior. How picturesque the gondolas look, with their dancing double lights!"

"The old palace interests me more than the gondolas," declared Kitty. But La Signorina was not to be trapped.

From the Grand canal they came out into the great canal of San Marco, the beginning of the lagoon.

"La Signorina"— began Kitty.

"There! I have warned you twice. The third time I shall be angry."

"Hilda, then. But I am afraid whenever I call you that. You do not belong to my world."

"And what makes you think that?" There was a smile behind the veil.

"I do not know unless it is that you are at home everywhere, in the Campo, in the hotels, in the theater or the palace. Now, I am at home only in the theater, in places which are unreal and artificial. You are a great actress, a great singer, and yet, as O'Mally would say, you don't belong." Kitty had forgotten what she had started out to say.

La Signorina laughed. "Pouf! You have been reading too many novels. To the molo, Pompeo."

At the molo, the great quay of Venice, they disembarked. The whilom prima donna dropped 50 centesimi into Pompeo's palm, and he bowed to the very gunwale of the boat.

"Grazie, nobilita."

"What does he say?" asked Kitty.

"He says 'Thanks, nobility.' If I had given him a penny it would have been thanks only. For a lira he would have added principessa—princess. The gondolier will give you any title you desire if you are willing enough to pay for it."

The Piazza San Marco, or St. Mark, is the mecca of those in search of beauty. Here they may lay the sacred carpet, kneel and worship. There is none other to compare with this mighty square, with its enchanting splendor, its haunting romance, its brilliant if pathetic history.

There were several thousand people in the square tonight, mostly travelers. The band was playing selections from Audran's whimsical "La Mascotte." The tables of the many cafes were filled, and hundreds walked to and fro under the bright arcades or stopped to gaze into the shop windows.

The two women saw no vacant tables at Florian's, but presently they espied the other derelicts—O'Mally, Smith and Worth—who managed to find two extra chairs.

Through her veil their former prima donna studied them carefully, with a purpose in mind. The only one she doubted was Worth. Somehow he annoyed her. She could not explain, yet still the sense of annoyance was always there.

"Gentlemen," she said during a lull, "I have a plan to propose to you all."

"If it will get us back to old Broadway let us have it at once," said O'Mally.

"Well, then, I propose to wait no longer for letters from home. My plan is simple. They say that a gambler always wins the first time he plays. I propose that each of you will spare me what money you can, and Kitty and I will go to Monte Carlo and take one plunge at the tables."

A glorious green emerald lay in the palm of her hand.

"Monte Carlo!" O'Mally brought down his fist resoundingly. "That's a good idea. If you should break the bank think of the advertisement when you go back to New York."

"Be still," said Worth.

"Dash it, business is business, and without publicity there isn't any business." O'Mally was hurt.

"Mr. O'Mally is right," said La Signorina. "It would be a good advertisement. But your combined opinion is what I want."

The three men looked at one another thoughtfully, then drew out their wallets, thin and worn. They made up a purse of exactly $150, not at all a propitious sum. But, such as it was, O'Mally passed it across the table. This utter confidence in her touched La Signorina's heart. She turned aside for a moment and fumbled with the hidden chain about her neck. She placed her hand on the table and opened it. O'Mally gasped. An emerald—a glorious green emerald—lay in the palm of her hand.

"I shall give this to you, Mr. O'Mally," said the owner, "till I return. It is very dear to me, but that must not stand in the way."

"Ye gods!" cried O'Mally in dismay. "Put it away. I shouldn't sleep o' nights with that on my person. Keep it. We'll trust you anywhere this side of jail. But you're a brick, all the same." And that was as near familiarity as O'Mally ever came.

She turned to Smith, but he put out a hand in violent protest; then to Worth, but he smiled and shook his head.

She put the ring away. It was her mother's. She never would smile scornfully in secret at these men again.

"Thank you," she said quietly. "If I lose your money we will all go to Florence. I have another plan, but that will keep till this one under hand proves a failure."

O'Mally beckoned to a waiter.

"Tom!" warned Smith.

"You let me alone," replied O'Mally. "A quart of Asti won't hurt anybody."

Early the next morning she and Kitty departed for Monte Carlo in quest of fortune. Fortune was there, waiting, but in a guise wholly unexpected.

CHAPTER XI.

A BOX OF CIGARS.

ON the way up to Rome Hillard and his pupil had a second class compartment all to themselves. The train was a fast one, for the day of slow travel has passed in Italy, and the cry of speed is heard over the land.

There was a change of cars at Rome and a wait of two hours.

After luncheon Merrihew secretly bought two boxes of cigars to carry along. They were good cigars and cost him $15. He covered them with some

O. B. Finch after 23 years of continous teaching in our Sunday School has resigned the leadership (he objected to the word teacher) of Class No. 6. The class was very loath to let him go but we all felt he had earned a rest and at his earnest wish, his request was granted; his successor has not yet been named but for a few weeks the class will take turns in teaching or directing the lesson.

The reception at the church for the pastor and family Tuesday evening was a very delightful affair, with about 125 in attendance.

The room under the supervision of Lester Heesen was prettily decorated along the ceiling with green and red; the electric light bulbs were all covered with different colored shades, while lace curtains at the windows and couches and easy chairs all around the room, made you feel almost home; the piano stood in the center of the room and was lighted by candles; beautiful palms and potted ferns were placed through out the room. At the proper time Dr. North turned off the electric lights calling the attention of the people and saying he did it on purpose that we might come to order and listen to something Mr. Bramble had to say; C. H. Bramble then in behalf of our church and homes very cordially welcomed the new pastor and family. Mrs. Ruthruff followed with a beautiful solo. Albert Howard as superintendent of the Sunday School welcomed the pastor and family causing a good deal of merriment by his remarks.

The pastor in behalf of himself and family responded in a pleasing manner to their welcome, remarking to Mr. Howard (apropos to the latter's talk) that he should expect a chicken for Sunday dinner. Gladys and Joy Harrison gave us a piano and violin duet. Mrs. Albert Howard, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Harry Moore gave a delightful reading; the program was closed with a solo by Mrs. Grace Moore, she responding to an encore as did the others.

The committee then in charge served refreshments of chicken sandwiches, pickles and coffee, ice cream and wafers. We trust that the coming of Rev. Hartzog and family in our midst may be a great blessing to the church and community and that his work among us may have good results.

ALMA COLLEGE.

Nearly a hundred Alma alumni were present at the banquet held last week in the parlors of the Warren Ave., Presbyterian church, Saginaw. A. P. Bush, Tuscola county school commissioner presided over the festive board, and right well did Mr. Bush play the part of toast-master. H. S. Babcock, editor and Emmet county school commissioner, responded to "Old Times at Alma" in a way that deduced lusty rounds of applause. He was followed by Miss Elizabeth Hunt, Caro, who discussed Co-Ed days.

Dr. Bruske closed the responses by a splendid talk on the student and the college.

Prof. Mitchell responded informally, and as usual that gentleman gave an able talk.

There were also several musical selections, with Prof. Ewing at the piano, led by Howard Griffin.

Alma was represented by a continuous line of students, there being present students of the first class and on down to the class of 1909.

Last Saturday, Olivet defeated Alma by the score of 30 to 0, the team being thoroughly disorganized by the absence of the two Van Thurns and the physical depression of Call, Edgerton and Anderson.

The team was met at the depot and escorted to the gymnasium by a motley bunch of students, costumed in outlandish garbs. Here occured the festivities of the evening in the form of a Hallowe'en party. The gym. was cleverly decorated with leaves, pumpkins and stalks of corn. In one corner, in a booth, two antiquated witches told fortunes. Thither came blatant knights, silent ghosts, chattering clowns, maidens, imps and whatnot. At another place, refreshments were served. There was a prepared program so successful that the audience demanded an encore. A grand march comprising Monks, devils, gobblins, tittering maids, nimble clowns, sedate savants, etc., concluded the entertainment.

Wade Frost, Tecumseh, has accepted the position of assistant professor under Dr. Macurdy in the Biology laboratory.

Burt Waring spent several days with his son Roger. Incidentally he got acquainted with the fellows and inspected Wright Hall and its flowery contents.

Rev. W. M. Ward gave an interesting talk in chapel last week. Mr. Ward visited his daughter, Lena, who is a student in the Kindergarten department.

Mrs. Frank Gridley.

Mrs. Ann Eliza Sholes-Gridley, who recently died at the residence of her son in Washington, D. C., was not Miss Cheney (as mentioned in the Tecumseh papers) but was formerly Miss Ann Eliza Sholes. She was a sister of the late Mr. Dudley Sholes who for many years was a business man and resident of Tecumseh. The Sholes homestead is on the corner of Chicago and Oneida streets. Mr. Frank Gridley and Miss Sholes were married at the Cheney homestead on Union street, now occupied by Mrs. Munger. Mrs. Ella Sholes-Moir of Elizabethtown, N. J., also Mrs. Cornelia Strong-Strickland (deceased) had the pleasure of calling this noble woman their aunt. Mrs. Gridley was the mother of Captain Charles Gridley, the hero of Manilla Bay, who married Miss Hattie Vincent of Erie, Penn., a relative of Dr. B. F. Snyder of Tecumseh. HATTIE STRONG-SNYDER.

The deceased about whom the above article was written made her home with the Cheney family while in Tecumseh and went by that name.

A Leading Educator on the International Live Stock Exposition.

Here is what Dean Davenport at the Illinois Agricultural college says of the International Live Stock exposition of Chicago, which is to be held at the Union Stock Yards from Nov. 27 to Dec. 10:

"Not one, not even those responsible for its development, has adequate conception of the influence of the 'International' upon American live stock interests. As a practical educator it cannot be surpassed; as a stimulous to trade, it has no equal; as a means of shaping policies and correcting ideals, its influence is supreme.

"A decade or two ago such a thing would not have been possible in this country. It seems incredible now that a company organized primarily for business, should see its way to expend so much time, energy, and money in the establishment of such an exposition. That it will pay there is no doubt. The pay will come in a thousand ways. The live stock interests be more prosperous; the individual farmer who lives by it will be more successful, and the multitude of interests that depend upon live stock will thrive the better for it."

ENJOYS AN EVENING OF WORK AND REFRESHMENT

Eleven Candidates Being Initiated Tuesday Night.

Tuesday evening is one that will long remain bright in the minds of the large body of Royal and Select Master Masons who assembled at Masonic Temple, to witness and participate in the rites and ceremonies attendant upon the initiation of eleven candidates into the ancient rites and mysteries of the Royal Masters, Select Masters, and Superexcellent Master's degrees.

In addition to the large gathering of resident Masons, there were visitors from Brooklyn, Clinton and Adrian.

The officers of Blanchard Council have the reputation of doing about the finest work of any council in this locality, and Tuesday night, they surpassed all previous efforts, the degrees being conferred in such an impressive manner that the candidates, at least, will never forget any of the stirring lessons taught therein.

Special music—elaborate and classical—was prepared for the occasion and a bounteous, two course banquet followed the work.

The evening closed with a smoker and a general social visit.

The Treadwell-Whitney Stock Co. will be at the Opera House all next week, commencing Monday Nov.8. This same company played a week's engagement here last season and gave the best of satisfaction. SUFFERING ENDED.

C. A. Wright Sells the Remedy that Cured Stomach Trouble of 14 Years

And best of all C. A. Wright & Son guarantees it to cure you or money back. Read this:

"I have been a great sufferer for 14 years, everything I ate gave me heartburns. I have never been able to get anything that would give me any relief until a friend of mine insisted on my taking MI-O-NA. I took a 50c. box and I believe I am entirely well." F. M. Bryant, Newman, Ga., June 5th

MI-O-NA is not a nostrum; it is the prescription of a celebrated physician who is a specialist in stomach diseases.

One clever woman calls MI-O-NA the Sunshine Prescription because it changed her from a miserable, nervous dyspetic into a bright, healthy, happy woman in a few weeks.

These little MI-O-NA tablets are surely wonder workers. They absolutely cure indigestion whether acute or chronic.

They stop belching, gas in stomach, and heaviness, in a few minutes. Distress after eating vanishes as if by magic, when one one or two little MI-O-NA tablets are swallowed.

CONFIRMED PROOF.

Residents of Tecumseh Cannot Doubt What Has been Twice Proved.

In gratitude for complete relief from aches and pains of bad backs from distressing kidney ills—thousands have publicly recommended Doan's Kidney Pills. Residents of Tecumseh who so testified years ago, now say their cures were permanent. This testimony doubly proves the worth of Doan's Kidney Pills to Tecumseh Kidney sufferers.

Mrs. Charles Stevenson, Wyandotte and Pottawatamie Sts., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "Sharp, shooting pains across the small of my back were the first symptoms of kidney trouble in my case. My kidneys gradually became disordered and I was very miserable. Being advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills, I did so and the pains disappeared. For years I had also been distressed by gravel but Doan's Kidney Pills removed this trouble and I have not been bothered since."

Above statement was given on Dec. 10, 1906, and on Dec. 9, 1908, Mrs. Stevenson confirmed it in detail adding that her cure had been permanent. For Sale by all Dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York. Sole Agents for the United States.

JAPANESE DINE IN WASHINGTON

Japan's Charge D'Affairs Gave Banquet to Visitors.

KNOX ONE OF SPEAKERS

Refers, in Lengthy Address, to Happy Relations Existing Between Two Nations—Shibusawa Replies—Ballinger and MacFarland Other Speakers.

Washington, Nov. 4.—The members of the Japanese delegation which is touring the United States celebrated the anniversary of the birth of the emperor of Japan last night at a banquet given in their honor by Keishiro Matsui, charge d'affaires of Japan. All the members of the delegation, the staff of the Japanese embassy and many prominent officials were present. There were four speakers—P. C. Knox, secretary of state; R. A. Ballinger, secretary of the interior; Hon. H. B. F. MacFarland, president of the board of commissioners of the District of Columbia, and Baron Shibusawa, chairman of the delegation.

Mr. Knox's speech was the feature of the evening. Baron Shibusawa replied in Japanese.

After proposing the health of the emperor of Japan, Secretary Knox spoke, in part, as follows:

Knox's Address.

"This is an opportunity of which I gladly avail to speak of the ties which have continued to unite our two nations in amity and essential harmony ever since the days when to American representatives first of all you opened your doors for the reciprocal exchange of good will and civilization and trade. We have learned from you as you from us. We admire your for all of your national gifts and virtues, and not the least for those qualities in which you differ from us; for the eminent qualities drawn from a long and glorious past through which you must teach and we must learn.

"The great modern movement of accord and good understanding between nations are after all the lofty achievements and the crown of all international relations. The controlling principle of these movements is peaceful and beneficial international intercourse and the peaceful settlement by arbitration of differences and controversies extending that principle by friendly diplomacy as rapidly as possible to embrace an increasing number and variety of disputes and ultimately, by voluntary international compacts, making peaceful settlements of all differences compulsory, or practically so.

"The long and unbroken friendship of the United States and Japan, of which your visit and this occasion are such happy symbols, and the laudable common purpose of Japan and the United States to respect each other's rights, and with frankness, patience and good temper to adjust such differences as inevitably arise ever between nations of sympathetic and common purposes will be examples which will bear fruit and aid in the gradual realization of the noblest ideals, unity, concord and prosperity of the world."

Taft Congratulates Emperor.

Washington, Nov. 4.—President Taft has sent the following telegram to the emperor of Japan, through the state department: "I tender your majesty my congratulations on the anniversary of your birth, with wishes for your happiness and expressions of the desire of the American people for the welfare of the Japanese empire and people."

A Constipation Remedy Free

There is no action of your daily life of greater importance than to see that your bowels move. They should move at least once a day naturally, and by that is meant without any help. If they do not move at least once a day you can consider yourself constipated and it is time you did something about it.

You will be glad to know there is a way out of the difficulty. Lemuel Landerdale, an old soldier at Quincy, Ill., Elmer McMillan, of Steed, Mo., Mrs. Monahan, of Stonewall, Miss., and many others were as you are now. But one day they awoke to the fact that Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin was curing their friends, so they bought it too and it cured them. Today they are loud in praise of it.

What Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin did for them it should do for you. Surely your constipation is no worse than theirs, one of whom had it since 1861. It only remains for you to realize that salts are of but temporary good, and what you want is a permanent cure; that purgative tablets, cathartic pills and such violent things make a great show of doing something but do nothing that is lasting. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a scientific preparation, a laxative tonic, a mild syrupy liquid that contains ingredients that not only cure the constipation, but tone the intestinal muscles so that they learn again to work without help. A bottle can be bought of any druggist for the small price of 50 cents, and there is a dollar size for families who have already found out its wonderful value in stomach, liver and bowel troubles, in old or young.

Send your name and address to the doctor and a free trial bottle will be sent you so that you can test it before buying.

If there is anything about your ailment that you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 509 Caldwell bldg., Monticello, Ill.

SPLENDID ACTRESS.

But Mme. Steinheil Has Lost Much of Her Beauty.

Paris, Nov. 4.—Mme. Steinheil, innocent or guilty, will not need to reproach herself for the manner in which she endured her four hours' ordeal on the stand Wednesday. She parried, with lightning-like rapidity, every thrust of the presiding judge, who in the French assize court acts as the prosecuting attorney. Once she drove him from his line of questioning by the scornful way in which she said, "You seem to take me for a common street walker."

When Mme. Steinheil appeared in court, dressed in black and wearing a small toque, with a long black veil behind, a feeling of disappointment went through the male audience. She had lost much of her beauty. Her eyes alone retained their wondrous beauty. After she had conducted her case for a short time, however, her old-time charm reasserted itself.

It must be said that the dominant thought of the audience was, "What a splendid actress."

GOMPERS DOESN'T TALK.

Course of Procedure Will Be Decided on In Few Days.

Washington, Nov. 4.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, who has returned to this city, has declined to discuss further the action of the court of appeals in sustaining the jail sentences imposed on him, John Mitchell and Frank Morrison in the Bucks Stove & Range company case.

Mr. Gompers and Messrs. Mitchell and Morrison expect to have a conference with their attorneys, Ralston and Siddons of this city and ex-Judge Alton Parker of New York, within a few days, when a course of procedure will be decided on. The mandate of the court of appeals will not be sent down to the court which inflicted the sentence for fifteen days, and within that time the attorneys representing Messrs. Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison must take steps to bring the case before the supreme court of the United States.

MODEL TENEMENTS.

Vanderbilt and His Wife Will Erect Them in New York.

New York, Nov. 4.—Henry Atterbury Smith, an architect for William K. Vanderbilt, has filed with Building Superintendent Murphy plans for a group of four six-story fireproof tenements to be built on a site covering eighteen city lots on Avenue A, between Seventy-seventh and Seventy-eighth streets. These are to be unique among model tenements for the reason that they are designed especially to afford sanitary homes for tuberculosis sufferers.

This is a philanthropic enterprise in which Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt and her husband have been interested for some years.

Cardinals Will Be Created.

Rome, Nov. 4.—It is learned that at the consistory to be held late in December or early in January ten cardinals will be created to fill vacancies in the college of cardinals. No American prelate will be raised to the dignity of a prince of the church. The ten to be named are three Italians, the Nuncio at Vienna being the one known to be sure of appointment; three Frenchmen, of which the archbishop of Paris is one; one Austrian, one Spaniard and the archbishop of Westminister and the patriarch of Lisbon.

ITALIANS HELD UP STREET CAR

Strenuous Scene Takes Place in Detroit.

BAGG'S "BANANS" ARE UPSET

His Wagon Blocks Track, and Fellow Countrymen Rush to His Assistance. Captured Conductor and Threatened Violence—Police Finally Succeed in Fixing Up Matters.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 8.—Enraged because one of their countrymen had suffered severe injuries and the loss of his wagon and stock of bananas in a street car accident, a half hundred Italians threatened to mob the conductor of Fort car No. 1003, at Monroe avenue and Rivard street.

Even the arrival of two policemen failed to soothe the anger of the foreigners. They held the conductor captive for ten minutes, until Patrolman Ernest W. Fullerin, forced to resort to diplomatic measures, convinced them that the police would investigate.

Joe Pacemino, 253 East Congress street, was the cause of the near-mobbing. Joe, with another Italian, was driving his wagon, laden with a shipment of "banana," northward on Rivard street. When he reached Monroe avenue he either failed to see the approaching car or sought to pass before it.

The fender struck the wagon amidships. Joe landed in the street amid a huge pile of crushed bananas. The man who was driving with him escaped.

Despite the strenuous efforts of the car crew and passengers, the foreigners refused to allow them to move. When the officers arrived and ordered the Italians off the car they steadfastly refused. Then Fullerin declared that he would see that the accident would be amicably settled. Reluctantly the besieging forces gave up the captured car.

Dr. P. H. Dodenhoff, 174 Rivard street, came after the car had departed. He drove Pacemino to his office in his automobile. A deep gash in his head is his most serious injury.

DELAY CENTRAL BANK IDEA

Will Probably Be Put Over Until Sixty-Second Congress.

MATTER HINGES ON ELECTION

If Democrats Win Next House, President Will Be Urged to Call Extra Session—Leaders See Importance of Carrying Out Aldrich's Plan of Education of People.

Washington, Nov. 8.—Unless the unexpected happens in the congress elections next fall, the chances are that no effort will be made to pass a bill revising the banking and currency laws of the United States until the Sixty-second congress assembles in December, 1911. This at least is the present plan of the monetary commission, which will meet in Washington soon after Senator Aldrich completes his present western tour. Members of the commission are convinced that before a central bank of issue bill can be passed a campaign of education such as Mr. Aldrich has inaugurated must be conducted in the east as well as in the west.

Advices from western states are to the effect that the impression prevails in several of them that the central bank as proposed by Senator Aldrich means that such an institution would be nothing more or less than a New York bank which is controlled by the Standard Oil company. Western men, in writing to the commission, have been frank in declaring that such a belief is widespread.

A member of the commission is authority for the statement that no effort will be made to push the central bank of issue plan at the coming session of congress. The indications are that the lawmakers will be busy with other matters, notably bills relating to interstate commerce, which will be given prominence in President Taft's message.

Should the Democrats win the next house, according to suggestions that have been discussed by members of the commission the president would be urged to call congress in session soon after the elections in November, next year, for the purpose of considering such legislation as the commission might have to recommend.

STRIFE ANTICIPATED.

Proposed New Periodical to Deal With Old Line Exposition of Bible Truths.

Chicago, Nov. 8.—Free thoughters and high thinkers should take notice. The $300,000 endowment of a mysterious Los Angeles millionaire is to be used by the Rev. A. C. Dixon of the Moody church to fight for orthodoxy, and anyone who gets in the way will be handled without gloves.

A monthly magazine is to be published under the direction of Dr. Dixon. It will be devoted to an old line exposition of bible truths and to a defense against the rationalistic school of preachers and professors.

It is the first organized effort of any consequence that has been made to check and turn back the growing hosts of higher criticism and to set the current of scholarly thought back into the channel of the ages.

Surface indications show that the new magazine is bound to stir up a lot of controversy and to make a sharp and continuing issue between the old and new schools of theology.

Exceptional Operation.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 8.—A most delicate operation was successfully performed upon Midshipman Earl D. Wilson, a vertebrae of whose neck was broken during the football game on Oct. 16. The laminae or outward covering was cut away from four of the vertebrae of the neck in order to remove pressure on the spinal cord. It is believed that all pressure has been removed and that Wilson's chance of ultimate recovery is greatly improved.

Another Man Operated On.

Utica, N. Y., Nov. 8.—Joseph Pickering, the seventeen-year-old Casenovia seminary student who suffered a fractured vertebrae during a football game, at Hamilton, Saturday, was operated upon at Faxton hospital, in this city, Sunday. The surgeons say that there is a bare possibility that he will survive. The boy was operated on, and the knife disclosed that both sides of the arch of the seventh cervicular vertebrae had been broken and the spinal cord badly lacerated. The pressure on the spinal cord was removed and subsequently the patient showed improvement.

NOT AN ENEMY TO CONSERVATION

Secretary Ballinger Replies to His Critics.

Washington, Nov 8.—Richard A. Ballinger, secretary of the interior, has replied to those critics who have endeavored to show that he was an enemy of the conservation policy inaugurated in the last federal administration. Mr. Ballinger has taken the ground heretofore that President Taft in his long review of the charges made by Special Agent Glavis of the land office, involving Mr. Ballinger, had exonerated the secretary of the interior in every way, and no word from the latter was necessary in his own defense.

But Mr. Taft's statement giving Mr. Ballinger a clean bill of health did not serve to stop the attacks on Mr. Ballinger. In magasines and newspapers they have been renewed in a way to give rise to a suspicion that a concerted plan was being carried out to discredit the Taft administration with the supporters of Theodore Roosevelt, through an endeavor to create the impression that Mr. Taft, judged by the alleged actions of his secretary of the interior, is not in sympathy with Mr. Roosevelt's efforts to preserve the natural resources of the country.

According to Mr. Ballinger, the verbal assaults made on him involve a mass of misrepresentation. He pointed out that the order of James A. Garfield, his predecessor in the interior department, withdrawing a million and a half acres of public land from entry and settlement in order to protect water power sites within this vast area, had been issued under the stress of emergency and was not intended to be permanent.

Inaugurated Governor.

San Juan, P. R., Nov. 8.—Colonel George R. Colton, a former collector of customs of the Philippines, has been inaugurated as governor of Porto Rico. The oath of office was administered by Chief Justice Hernandez, and Bishop Jones, the Roman Catholic bishop of the island, delivered the invocation.

Mysteriously Fatally Hurt.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 8.—Otto Obaransk, twenty-seven years old, 1476 Scotten avenue, an employe at the Northern Automobile company factory, is dead at Grace hospital from internal injuries sustained at the factory. The manner in which the man was hurt remains a mystery. A postmortem examination will be made.

BRIEF DISPATCHES.

Bradley Barlow Smalley, formerly secretary of the Democratic national committee, is dead at Burlington, Vt. He was seventy-four years old.

Dr. William V. Ames, aged eighty-eight, a prominent physician, reputed to be the oldest active member of the Elks in the United States, is dead at Fremont, O.

John H. Baker, aged seventy-nine, a well known farmer of Enfield, N. Y., is dead from the effects of inhaling flames and smoke at a fire which destroyed his home. Miss Martha Baker, his daughter, who lived with him, is in a critical condition as the result of the shock of the fire and her father's death.

Detention Home For Girls.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 8.—Club women of Detroit and others interested are working to supply what has long been felt to be a great need—a woman probation officer immediately and in the near future a detention home for girl charges of the juvenile court. The work has been going on quietly for the last year by the Detroit Federation of Women's Clubs.

LONG PROGRAM FOR CONGRESS

Will Be Recommended In Taft's Message.

LOOKS FOR PARTY OPPOSITION

His Recent Speeches Would Indicate Such Is His Belief—Proposes to Keep Promise of Carrying Out Policies of Roosevelt—Chief Policies Are to Make Corporations Obey.

Augusta, Ga., Nov. 8.—President Taft will begin the preparation of his message to congress soon after his return to Washington on Wednesday. He has indicated clearly enough in his speeches what that message will be. It will recommend an unusually long program for congress, and one that is likely to revive a good deal of hostility shown to the Roosevelt administration on the score of railroad rate legislation.

That the president has been looking forward to the possibility of serious opposition within the ranks of his own party is indicated by his recent speeches. On several occasions he has warned the public that congress, not the president, is to be blamed for failure to enact laws clinching the Roosevelt policies.

At Macon, the other day, he said, "I intend to recommend a good many measures at the next session of congress, and I take this method of intimating to you where the responsibility will be if these measures do not pass."

The president has indicated the idea on which his message will be based in this statement, "The administration was elected on the platform that we proposed to carry out the policies of Theodore Roosevelt, and we propose to keep that promise."

Knows Roosevelt's Policies.

Mr. Taft has declared that he, better than any other man, is able to say what those policies are. He has described Mr. Roosevelt's chief policies as the determination to make the great corporations of the country obey the law.

One of his most important recommendations to "clinch the Roosevelt policies" will be for the establishment of a court of five members to expedite litigation over the decisions of the interstate commerce commission. President Taft holds that the delays have largely nullified the effectiveness of the commission. Under the new recommendations the president will seek to establish a court of experts. When the interstate commerce commission holds that a rate is unreasonable this court may decide upon a reasonable rate without delay, with no appeal on the part of the railroads except to the supreme court. There will also be a recommendation in the message that the interstate commerce commission be given supervisory power over the issuing of stocks and bonds by interstate railroads. This is a safeguard against the watering of a stock.

The president will recommend also that no interstate railroad after a certain period be allowed to own stock in any other railroad.

TAFT AT AUGUSTA.

Has Good Rest Sunday, and Plays at Golf Today.

Augusta, Ga., Nov. 8.—For President Taft Sunday was a day of real rest—the first he has had since he left his brother's ranch in Texas, two weeks or more ago. Augusta has tried to make the president feel like an old homecomer instead if a visitor and with rare consideration refrained fro masking him to deliver a single Sunday sermon.

The president attended service at the Church of the Good Shepherd, at Summerville, in the morning. The president was the guest of Langdon Thomas at luncheon.

At 4 o'clock in the afternoon, Major J. B. Cummings, at whose home the president is stopping, gave an informal reception.

This morning the president tried his hand again on the Augusta "sand greens," and this afternoon he opened the Georgia-South Carolina fair.

Observes Fifty-fourth Anniversary.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 8.—The Detroit Light Guard, Michigan's oldest military organization, will celebrate its fifty-fourth anniversary on the night of Nov. 16, at the Light Guard armory. Instead of having the annual street parade and banquet the festivities will be in the nature of a Dutch lunch, exhibition drills and military ball.

The Lure of the Mask

By HAROLD MAC GRATH

newspapers and at the station succeeded by some legerdemain in slipping them into one of his cases. Hillard would have lectured him on his extravagance, and this was a good way to avoid it. But some hours later he was going to be very sorry that he had not made a confidant of his guide.

As they were boarding the train they noticed two gentlemen getting into the forward compartment of the carriage.

"Humph! Our friend with the scar," said Hillard. "We do not seem able to shake him."

"I'd like to shake him. He goes against the grain somehow." Merrihew swung into the compartment. "I wonder why the Sandfords dropped him?"

"For some good reason. They are a liberal pair, and if our friend forward offended them it must have been something outside the pale of forgiveness. But I should like to know where old Giovanni is. I miss him."

"Poor devil!" said Merrihew, with careless sympathy.

The train started.

"Monte Carlo! Gold, gold, little round pieces of gold!" Merrihew rubbed his hands like a miser.

"Hard to get and heavy to hold!" quoted Hillard. "I suppose that you have a system already worked out."

"Of course. I shall win if I stick to it."

"Or if the money lasts. Bury your system, my boy. It will do you no good. Trust to luck only. Monte Carlo is the graveyard of systems."

"But maybe my system is the one. You can't tell till I have tried it."

Soon the train began to lift into the mountains, the beautiful Apennines. By the time they arrived in Genoa, late at night, both compared favorably with the coolers in the harbor of Naples.

Early the next morning the adventurers set out for Monte Carlo—more tunnels; a compartment filled with women and children. But the beauty of the Riviera was compensation.

Ventimiglia, or Vintimille, has a sinister sound in the ears of the traveler if perchance he be a man fond of his tobacco. The train drew in. A dozen steps more and one was virtually in France. But there is generally a slight hitch before one takes the aforesaid steps—the French customs. A porter popped his head into the window.

"Eight minutes for examination of luggage!" he cried.

"Come, Dan," cried Hillard; "lively if we want good seats when we come out. We change trains."

After a short skirmish they located their belongings. They would have to be patient.

Among the inspectors at Ventimiglia is a small, wizened Frenchman with a face as cold and impassive as the sand blown sphinx. He possesses, among other accomplishments, a nose peculiar less for its shape than for its smell. He can "smell out" tobacco as a witch doctor in Zululand smells out a "devil." Fate directed this individual toward the Americans. Hillard knew him of old, and he never forgets a face, this wizened little man.

"Monsieur has nothing to declare?" he asked.

Hillard made a negative sign and opened his cases. With scarce a glance at their contents and waving aside the coupons the inspector applied the chalk and turned to Merrihew.

"Monsieur has nothing to declare?" he repeated.

Merrihew shook his head airily. "Niente, niente!" he said in his best Italian. He did not understand what the inspector said. He merely had suspicions.

"Look!" suddenly exclaimed Hillard.

Passing out of the door which led to liberty and to France, their luggage guaranteed by cabalistic chalk marks, were two women. One of them was veiled; the other was not.

"Kitty Killigrew, as I live!" shouted Merrihew, making a dash for the door.

But the inspector blocked the way, beckoned to a gendarme, who came over, and calmly pointed to Merrihew's unopened cases.

"Open!" said the inspector.

"But"— Merrihew struggled to pass.

"For heaven's sake," cried Hillard, "be patient and open the cases at once."

Merrihew handled his keys clumsily. It is ever thus when one is in a hurry. Finally he threw back the lids, feeling that in another moment he must have spouted Italian or French out of pure magic simply to tell this fool inspector what he thought of him.

"Oho, monsieur in a hurry!" mocked the inspector. "Nothing, nothing!" He took out two boxes of cigars.

"Why the devil didn't you tell me you had them?" Hillard demanded wrathfully. To find the women by this stroke of luck and then to lose them again for two boxes of cigars! It was maddening.

The inspector went through Merrihew's possessions with premeditated leisure. Everything had to come out. He even opened the shaving sets, the collar box, the pin cases and the tie bag.

"Will you hasten?" asked Hillard. "We do not wish to miss this train."

"Others follow," said the inspector laconically.

Hillard produced a five franc piece. The inspector laughed without noise and shook his head. This one inspector is impervious to money or smooth speeches. He is the law personified, inexorable.

Hillard strained his eyes, but saw neither Kitty nor the veiled lady again. Doubtless they were already on the train. Had Merrihew been an old traveler he would have left him to get to Monte Carlo the best way he could, but Merrihew was as helpless as a child, and he hadn't the heart to desert him, though he deserved to be deserted.

Ding-ding! went the bell. Wheewhee! went the whistle. The train for Monte Carlo was drawing out, and they were being left behind. Hillard swore and Merrihew went white with impotent anger. If only he could hit something! The inspector smiled and went on with his deadly work. When he was certain that they could not possibly catch the train he handed the cigars to their owner and pointed to a sign the other side of the barricade.

"What shall I do now, Jack?" Merrihew asked.

"I refuse to help you. Find out yourself."

So Merrihew, hopeless and subdued, went into the room designated, saw the cigars taken out and weighed, took the bill and presented it with a hundred lire note at the little window in the off room.

Procuring his change, he found Hillard sitting disconsolately on the barricade.

"I hope you are perfectly satisfied," said Hillard, with an amiability which wouldn't have passed muster anywhere.

"Oh, I'm satisfied," answered Merrihem. He stuffed his pockets with cigars, slammed the boxes into the case and locked them up.

"I warned you about tobacco."

"I know it."

"You should have told me."

"I know that, too, but I didn't want you to lecture me."

"A lecture would have been better than waiting here in this barn for three hours."

"Three hours?" despondently.

"Oh, there's a restaurant, but it's not much better than this. It's bad—flies and greasy plates."

And by the time they had found the Ristorante Tornaghi—miserable and uninviting—they were laughing.

"Only I wish I knew where they were going," was Hillard's regret.

"They?" said Merrihew.

"Yes. The woman with Kitty is the woman I'm going to find if I stay in Europe ten years. And when I find her I'm going to marry her."

"Sounds good," said Merrihew, pouring himself a third glass of very indifferent Beaune.

"And they may be going anywhere but to Monte Carlo—Paris, Cherbourg, Calais. In my opinion, Monte Carlo is the last place two such women are likely to go to alone."

So they sat in the dingy restaurant, smoking and laughing and grumbling till the next train was announced. At 4 that afternoon they arrived without further mishap at the most interesting station of its size in Europe, Monte Carlo.

And then into the omnibus adjoining came the man with the scar.

* * * * * * *

The Riviera, from San Remo on the Italian side to Cannes on the French, possesses a singular beauty.

Villefranche stands above Nice, between that white city and Monte Carlo. It is quiet and lovely. For this reason the great army of tourists pass it by. There is no casino, no band, no streets full of tantalizing shops. On the very western limit of Villefranche, on the winding white road which rises out of Nice, is a modest little villa, so modest that a ballerina would scorn it and a duchess ignore it.

In the balcony La Signorina reposed in a steamer chair, gazing seaward. The awning cast a warm glow as of gold upon her face and hair, a transparent shadow. She was at this moment the most precious thing upon which the eye may look, a wholly beautiful woman. Kitty Killigrew, standing in the casement window, stared at her silently, not without some envy, not without some awe. What was going on behind those dreamy eyes?

"Hilda?" said Kitty.

"Yes, Kitty."

"Who and what are you?" Kitty asked bravely.

La Signorina's eyes wandered till they met Kitty's.

"And what good would it do you to know? Would it bring money from home any sooner? You already know that I am unhappy. The adventuress always is."

"Adventuress?" Kitty laughed scornfully. "The proprietor pretends he does not know you, but I am certain he does. He forgets himself sometimes in the way he bows to you."

Kitty paused, then asked:

"Won't you tell me what the secret is?"

"How beautiful that white sail looks!"

"You know all about me," went on Kitty stubbornly.

"Because you told me. I never asked you a single question."

"Is it—love?"

"Love!" La Signorina shrugged.

To be Continued.

FROM OUR FRIEND IN TEXAS.

THIS IS ANOTHER OF THE GOOD LETTERS WRITTEN FOR THE HERALD.

The Author Being one of our own Town boys furnishes Good Reason why it should be Read With Interest.

Soda, Polk Co., Texas, Oct. 18, '09.

Dear Friend:

Perhaps you would like to have another letter bearing the T. X. brand. Silence gives consent, so here goes:

I am now temporarily located in Polk county, nearly one hundred miles from Houston and three hundred feet higher in elevation, among the yellow pine timber forests, where the balmy, scented air gives one new life and ambition.

The lumber business is one of the great industries of the state, and there are many counties in the eastern part that have not yet heard the buzz and roar of the saw-mill. But the mill owners of the north, having despoiled Michigan and Wisconsin of the best white pine, are moving to the Southland, buying timber rights on millions of acres, building railroads into the heart of the virgin yellow pine, and they seem to find it very profitable.

The output of the mills in this county alone will average one-half million feet per day and they are a direct benefit to the inhabitants, giving work to those who want it—and God knows, they all need it—drawing people from all directions, establishing towns, and enhancing the value of property.

In my perambulations, I've noticed good land lying idle, untilled, growing up to weeds and brush and, following a natural habit, have made inquiries. From an unusually energetic "sandhiller," a "cracker" white man, I learned that some of these country people only work the land spasmodically, live from hand to mouth, have been doing the same for fifty years or more, don't know anything different and don't care to know.

Yet they are of good stock, born in this country of English, Scotch, Irish, German and American parents, whose forefathers fought for Independence in '76.

I see the light of intelligence in the clear blue, gray or brown eyes, and character in the clean cut features, and well shaped heads, but they seem to be lazy and shiftless.

Some of the more ambitious, obtaining the advantages of education, town life and different environments, become very clever and successful in business and social life.

The reason for this, "Oh, how shiftless!" habit of the poor whites, is attributed by some learned ones, to the climate and to the fat, heat producing, slow digesting diet, but, Dr. C. W. Stiles in the Sept. Pearson's Magazine, blames it all on the hook worm. However, I'll leave this subject to abler minds and pens, and speak of other things, people, places and events, which have interested me.

Let me tell you about the city of Houston. And, by the way, pronounce it, Howston? No, Hooston? No, Hewston? Kee-rect.

I like Houston because her citizens are so full of civic pride, energy and enthusiasm. They have accomplished wonders in the past few years, building up a modern, hustling city from a straggling, grafting, vice ridden town.

Adopting the commission plan of civic government and ousting the political ring, they found it necessary to reorganize and rebuild the entire system of water works, sewers, police and fire forces, re-pave hundreds of miles of old streets as well as new ones constantly being added, build school houses, etc., etc. All public utilities received due attention and they haven't finished yet. Re-construction is still going on. A stranger visiting the city would find many faults, but he should bear in mind that it is growing fast and all this work requires time, perseverance and money. Some of the evils which are like a cancerous spot in northern cities, are well controlled here.

The State liquor law allows one saloon for every 500 inhabitants, and all bars must be in full view of the public. No card or wine rooms, no women or music, no gambling, no screens or curtains, and closing hours strictly enforced.

The social evil is segregated in a district or reservation outside of the city and kept under strict police surveillance. This segregation plan has proved so successful that the citizens wonder why they didn't do it before, and why other cities don't adopt it.

The vagrancy law also restrains and prevents many undesirables from locating here. You may perhaps see a few "down and outers," temporarily out of work, but the habitual "bum" cannot stay long in Texas.

But let us get away from the muck and mire, the dirty, torn-up streets, and take a walk out through the fine residence section. Ah! now we have it. Here are wide, well paved and well lighted avenues, built up with old stately mansions and modern style houses, surrounded by spacious grounds filled with semi-tropical plants and flowers, some of which, like the palms and banana plants, reaching up to second floor windows, dog-carts and every style of vehicle, filled with well dressed, smiling people. And their smile is the genuine smile that won't come off, radiating good will and happiness.

Here is wealth, beauty, culture and refinement. The southern people as a rule, take time to live, love and laugh, heeding one of the up-to-date mottoes, a part of which says: "Don't take yourself too d——d seriously."

Going back again to the land, it might be a broad assertion to say that the state of Texas could support the entire U. S. Yet it could do more toward a diversity of products than several large states combined.

There is but little real farming away from the towns and cities, which are usually surrounded by a few well kept places. But in between the towns are half cultivated farms on which the chief encumbrance is people, dawgs and razor-back hawgs that strop themselves against buildings and trees.

It is not in the nature of things that land of startling richness should remain long untouched, but the Texan won't get down to the back-breaking work which means success. He has never had to. He graciously permitted the Almighty to rain upon the prarles which he furnished the cattle to eat the grass.

This order of things is passing away and the energetic northerner, realizing the possibilities, is now beginning to reap the profits of his toil. He raises a diversification of crops besides the staples, corn and cotton. But the northern man coming here must lay aside some of his wisdom, born of long experience, and adapt himself to new conditions. He should not lose one bit of energy, but must be of that elastic disposition that can bend to suit a semi-tropical season, different mode of living, working, etc. Such a man will succeed if he works intelligently for the school books in Ireland say: "Industry itself is a treasure."

Some of the land boomers and real estate men resort to all schemes to get buyers. They give free excursions by rail and boat, barbecues, music, auto rides, lottery drawings on lots and farms, no taxes, and no interest to pay, and the fall months are their harvest time. Not a few of the buyers seem to think that, by their own shrewdness and foresight, or by some kind act of providence, they will get a good bargain and some other fellow will get the worst of it.

I happen to know of one man, allwise in his own mind, who went through some trying experiences in land deals, and when he was done—"done to the Queen's taste," he could truthfully say: "I was a stranger and ye took me in."

He usually "got in on the ground floor."

The American people are land hungry, and there is still enough land left in this state to support several millions.

One of the causes of annoyance to the new settler and to the entire Southland, is the large and increasing number of negroes. Nature fashioned the black man in a peculiar mould, evidently intending his habitat to be in a warm climate.

At any rate, he is here with us and will probably stay indefinitely. They are compelled to work and mix with their own kind, but always in subjugation to, or by, the white man.

Should he become rebellious or bloodthirsty, the white man promptly shoots him and the matter is ended for the moment. But this incident happening in any community, breaks the tie of racial peace and there may be further trouble. At such a time, both sides are very apt to carry a small arsenal equipment concealed about the person.

I asked an old resident what sort of punishment was inflicted on a white man should he happen to kill a negro? Oh, said he, they—meaning the legal lights, I suppose, get all the money he has got and then turn him loose."

Before I close, let me express the sincere hopes that the Herald's subscription list is growing, that Tecumseh streets, finances, etc., are in good condition, that the VILLAGE HAY CROP has been profitably sold or stored for winter and that the people generally are happy and prosperous.

I also trust that, at the next village election both parties, the "Incorruptible Rubes" mustered under the banner of Progress and "The Re-actionaries," will follow the good advice of President Taft in one of his recent lay sermons. He says: "It is best to avoid those acrimonious discussions which lead to personal villification and enmity." Adios,

SAM JAY.

William A. J. Russell.

Wm. Alexander J. Russell only son of Wm. A. J. and Laura Anna Smith Russell, was born in Adrian, August 29, 1865, and departed from earth at his home in Tecumseh, October 25, 1909, aged 44 years, 1 month and 26 days.

He was married to Alzina Lanning April 2, 1891, and to their home came six little ones, five of whom, four sons and a daughter, remain to comfort their sorrowing mother. Seven years ago Mr. Russell sought and found peace and joy and pardon in Jesus. Since which his life has told to those around him of the love that passeth understanding. Of a quiet, intense, yet strongly affectionate disposition, to him Christ became in very truth his all in all.

Besides his wife and children he leaves two sisters, Mrs. Minnie Tingle of Battle Creek and Mrs. Julia Belcher of Rollin. His father died before he was born and his mother when he was 9 years of age. Being thus bereft of his parents, all the love of his strong nature centered itself in his sisters, who alone remained to him, and the bond between them thus became an unusually strong one, and to them his going away was a most sorrowful one.

Will, as he was known to his friends passed nearly all his life in Tecumseh and vicinity, and perhaps no man here had fewer enemies or more of stronger friends. To those who knew him best he became ever dearer and dearer. To his loving wife his death means a loss hard indeed to bear. Since July 25 the asthma, from which he had suffered since a child, took the form of dropsy, but through painful days and restless nights his only thought was for wife and children. To all the friends and loved ones, his assurance was clear "it is all right."

President Angell Officially Retires.

President Angell's official retirement from the presidency of Michigan's state university marks the close of an era, not alone in the history of the University of Michigan, but in the history of American education as well. His years of service have bridged the gap between the old and the new in the middle West. He came to his life work at Michigan in his prime, when the success or failure of the revolutionary idea of education by the state was still unsettled and Michigan was almost the only effective representative of the "Prussian" idea.

In the four decades of Dr. Angell's service the state universities have become as effective as the privately endowed institutions, and they are entering equally with others upon an era of expansion the limits of which no one can foresee. How much the state universities of the West owe to James B. Angell through his services as President of Michigan, and as Dean of state university presidents, no one can say. His resignation marks the final break with the old regime for Dr. Angell has stood for some years almost the sole representative of the brilliant faculty which greeted him thirty-nine years ago this month.

Wagner to Manage Kazoo.

The Kalamazoo Gazette announces that an attempt has been made by that club to put through a deal whereby Charles Wagner, second baseman of last year's team, but drafted by Indianapolis, will be returned to the Kalamazoo club as manager. President Rosebaum, of the club, claims to have consulted with Wagner on the subject and says that he is not only willing but anxious to return. The Kalamazoo president will make a trip to Indianapolis next week, at which time he expects to be able to offer the Indianapolis club sufficient inducement to secure Wagner's release.

FRANK IS AT WORK.

New Secretary of Southern Michigan is Very Busy.

When the magnates of the Southern Michigan league elected James Frank of Jackson, secretary, they did not make any mistake. Mr. Frank has the business ability and enterprise to conduct the business of the league in a satisfactory manner and has already made out a tentative schedule for the games next season which has been submitted to the managers.

Doubtless with Mr. Frank at the helm, the average will be forthcoming somewhat earlier next season than they were this year, and the players and followers of the game can depend upon him to give out as accurate statements as can possibly be obtained.

IF YOU ARE IN DOUBT

as to which COAL is the best, read and digest these facts in regard to SCULLY ANTHRACITE.

CITY OF MARSHALL, MICH. Court House ordered their full supply of Scully Anthracite against all competition.

CITY OF TORONTO Though our coal was 85c. high in price Scully Anthracite secured contract because on test it gave MORE HEAT and LESS ASH than any other coal. On close figuring it was found that Scully Anthracite was 72c cheaper considering efficiency than the Companies' coal.

CITY OF SOUTH BEND, IND. On test between Scully Anthracite and best grade and quality of other coals, ours was proved to be the much better coal and the city gave contract to Scully Anthracite.

MARION, IND. The Board of Works after severe tests of Scully Anthracite with other coals awarded the contract to Scully Anthracite.

Buffalo, N. Y. Scully Anthracite was burned in competition with all other coals here and a close watch kept of results. They found that pound for pound it went further than any other coal. The City accordingly bought 15,000 tons of Scully Anthracite.

A BEULAH HOME INCIDENT.

Many of our Tecumseh readers can doubtless call to mind Mr. Herman L. Swift and his Beulah Home, commonwealth for homeless and neglected boys, located at Boyne City, Charlevoix county, Michigan. Here is a true incident in his experience which I will try to give from memory for the benefit of our Missionary Monthly readers. Perhaps many of our readers will exclaim is it possible in beautiful Detroit where the motto is: "Life is Worth Living."

He was in this beautiful City of Detroit and decided to go a fishing. It was not the finny denizen of the river he sought, but to see if there was some good boy he could angle for, down at the foot of Woodward avenue, where he knew the newsboys and bootblacks usually congregated. As he neared the place where the iron posts were set with chains running from post to post to prevent people from stepping off into the river, he was not surprised to find the crowd of boys and greeted, them in "Hog Latin", a language he knew and they all understood. This dialect is made up by putting the last two letters of each word first and when given in Mr. Swift's own style was very amusing.

He found a little lad called Jimmy whose mother was dead and who was neglected by his father. Mr. Swift asked the little chap to go home with him and he said he would if they would promise to keep his brother to. The little brother proved to be a little dog and the above picture shows the home they occupied.

Many just such pitiful cases has come before Mr. Swift and many little hearts have been made happy at the Beulah Home.

Mr. Swift will be in Tecumseh November 19 and will give free lectures and concerts at the M. E. church.

E. church as had been announced. This was a disapointment to the boys and others, as well as very annoying to Mr. May, but Pastor Campbell conducted the service and spoke in a way to enlist the interest of those present.—Morenci Items, Adrian Telegram.

Friend's Quarterly Meeting

Adrian Quarterly meeting was held in the church here, Friday to Sunday. All the ministers of the district were present and all the meetings well represented. The ministers who took the most prominent place in the meeting were, Edward Mott of Cleveland, Matilda Atkinson of Los Angeles, Lemuel M. Stanley of China, and George Cranston of Peoria, Ohio.

The object of the Quarterly meeting in the Friend's church is not merely to transact the business and attend to finances. This is attended to, but it occupies a subordinate place.

The main purpose of the meeting is the assembling together of the ministry and lay membership of all the meetings included in the Quarterly meeting with the object in view of quickening the spiritual life.

These occasions mean much to many Friends. They look forward to them and make their preparations to be on hand and attend all the meetings, for they remember with delight the blessed Christian fellowship and the inspiring preaching of past quarterly meetings. They recall the hearty greetings, the smiling faces, the emptying of the well filled baskets at the noon recess, the soul-stirring sermon, the mighty prayer at lethng, hy amens and they plan to go again. They count the days until next quarterly meeting.

Revival Meeting.

There is some indication of a revival at the Friend's church. Those who have attended the services held thus far cannot have failed to see that Miss Atkinson, the Evangelist, is able to make people "Sit up and take notice." There is unmistakable evidence of the working of the Holy Spirit in our midst and real progress is being made in the preliminary work of arousing the church.

As pastor of the church, I wish to extend a cordial invitation to every man, woman and child in the town and community, to attend these services. It will be your loss if you fail to do so.

Sincerely Your Brother,
J. WILLIAM CHANEY.

CONFIRMED PROOF

Residents of Tecumseh Cannot Doubt What Has been Twice Proved.

In gratitude for complete relief from aches and pains of bad backs from distressing kidney ills thousands have publicly recommended Doan's Kidney Pills. Residents of Tecumseh, who so testified years ago, now say their cures were permanent. This testimony doubly proves the worth of Doan's Kidney Pills to Tecumseh Kidney sufferers.

Mrs. Charles Stevenson, Wyandotte and Pottawatamie Sts., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "Sharp, shooting pains across the small of my back were the first symptoms of kidney trouble in my case: My kidneys gradually became disordered and I was very miserable. Being advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills, I did so and the pains disappeared. For years I had also been distressed by gravel but Doan's Kidney Pills removed this trouble and I have not been bothered since."

Above statement was given on Dec. 10, 1906, and on Dec. 9, 1908, Mrs. Stevenson confirmed it in detail adding that her cure had been permanent. For Sale by all Dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, Sole Agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury.

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free. Sold by Druggists. Price, 75c. per bottle. Mi-o-na cures dyspepsia. There isn't any doubt about it. Thousands of just such testimonials as the above from every city and town in America prove it. Mi-o-na does not digest the food in your stomach, but in a few days it tones up the walls of the stomach and makes it strong enough to digest its own food. Digesters never cured dyspepsia, and never will; they may help a tired stomach do its work, temporarily, but that is all. Mi-o-na tablets 50 cents a large box. Sold by all druggists.

SINGULAR ACCIDENT.

Boys Stumble With Guns, and One is Killed.

Port Huron, Mich., Nov. 8.—Lake Nesbitt, fourteen years old, is dead and Laverne LaGrange, seventeen years of age, lies in the hospital with a horrible wound in the left thigh as the result of an accidental shooting affair which took place on the Pere Marquette railroad tracks half a mile south of the Stone road bridge.

The boys left their homes to go on a hunting trip. They walked north on the Pere Marquette, and the supposition is that both fell to the ground after stumbling at the same time. Both guns were discharged, and Nesbitt was instantly killed, while La Grange was quite badly injured, but will recover. One of the lads had a rifle, while the other had a shotgun. LaGrange said that his companion had stumbled, and that the guns had been discharged at the same time.

ALL TO USE TUNNEL.

Grand Trunk Trains Will Be Among Those Going Under the Detroit.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 8:—Notwithstanding the repeated declarations from Canadian officials of the Grand Trunk railway that the Grand Trunk does not intend to use the Michigan Central tunnel, arrangements are being made to accommodate all the railways in the yards at the Windsor mouth of the tunnel.

A separate yard is being laid out for the Grand Trunk and another for the C. P. R. Michigan Central officials say negotiations have been practically completed by the Grand Trunk, and that while the car ferries may still be used to a certain extent, much of the through freight will pass through the tunnel.

GIRL SAVES OLD COUPLE.

Saw Flames of Burning House and Gave Alarm.

Vassar, Mich., Nov. 8.—Mr. and Mrs. William Lumley, an aged couple, living five miles east of here, owe their escape from death in the flames of their burning home to Miss Ruby Dennis, a young girl living near them. It is said the Lumleys went on a spree Saturday.

Late that night they arose and built a fire to prepare something warm to eat. The house caught fire. Miss Dennis saw the flames and gave the alarm. Neighbors reached the burning house just in time to drag the old couple out in their night clothes. The house and contents were destroyed.

JOHN HOINE FREE.

An Unaccountable Ten Minutes Prevented His Conviction.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 8.—John R. Hoine, former member of the crew of the United States revenue cutter Tuscarora, who was charged with the murder of Charles Orendorf, has been acquitted by a jury in Judge Connolly's court.

Hoine's attorneys admitted that he assaulted Orendorf on the dock at the foot of Second street, early in the morning of Aug. 28. But there was a ten minute lapse in the altercation between the intoxicated sailor youth and the denizen of the wharfs which the prosecution could not explain. It was in that interval that Orendorf went into the water and was drowned.

Naturally, this was the point in the case of the prosecution to which the attorneys for the defense directed their bombardment. They argued the impossibility of convicting a man when no testimony had been given showing that Orendorf had been thrown into the river by Hoine.

Cummins Replies to Cannon.

Chicago, Nov. 8.—Senator Cummins of Iowa, in an address before the Marquette club here, made a spirited reply to Speaker Joseph G. Cannon, who recently criticized the attitude of the senator and "insurgents" as to the tariff, and declared that Senator Cummins practically proposed to join hands with Bryan. Mr. Cummins branded the latter assertion as false, declaring it to be "simply an appeal to blind passion and a senseless prejudice."

Famous Race Horse Dies.

Traverse City, Mich., Nov. 8.—Prince, thirty-three years old, a pioneer horse of Traverse City, is dead of old age. Prince had started in practically every town that supported a race track in Michigan, Ohio and Indiana, and out of the hundreds of events in which he was entered was never outside the money. He was owned by Germaine brothers.

PECULIAR MOTIVE.

Mobile Man Allowed Himself to Be Run Over by Street Car.

Mobile, Ala., Nov. 8.—J. C. Wilson, a young man living with his family on Arabella street, and who was run down by a trolley car, says that he had purposely permitted himself to be run into by the car in order to establish and strengthen his faith in Christian Science. The remarkable part is that he escaped with a few bruises.

"It was a fine test. Everybody must work out his own salvation. If you are going to write anything about it, say that it was an unselfish motive that prompted me to throw myself in front of the car. It was to demonstrate control over fear. Word it that way if you do not want to mislead the public," declared the injured man to a reporter.

When incredulity was expressed, Wilson stated that the facts in the case ought to show that he was sincere.

Would Cancel Mortgages.

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 8.—Stacked away in the vaults in the auditor general's department are many mortgages against Michigan real estate given the state back in its early days, which Auditor General Fuller will ask the next legislature to allow him to cancel, the purpose for which the mortgages were given having long since become obsolete.

Morrice is experiencing a boom in real estate because of a report that the new Lansing-Saginaw electric line will form a junction there with another line which the M. U. R. wishes to build to Durand and Flint.

Thrown from a caboose by the sudden starting of a freight train, Hugh Kennedy, aged sixty-five, of Gaylord fell under the wheels and was instantly killed. Kennedy was one of the best known timber cruisers in that part of the state.

Two miners were killed at Republic by falls of rock. Isaac Niesula, employed in the Brotherton mine, was caught under several tons of rock. Oscar Ronkvist of the Newport mine was standing near an ore chute, and when the fall occurred his body was jammed into the chute.

Taking down the wrong bottle from the place in a cupboard where the calomel bottle was usually kept, Grover Carvin, aged twenty-four years, of Cadillac swallowed a dose of the contents and started for the cemetery to place some towers on the grave of his mother, who died recently. When near the cemetery gate he fell unconscious in the road. The sexton noticed him and called a doctor, who pumped him out, and he will recover.

BACK TO PRISON.

Greusel Must Return and Serve Out His Time.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 4.—Fourteen years in Ionia prison is what Dr. Nicholas Greusel, thirty-nine years old, 949 Fort street west, will have to serve for buying a woman's gown in a Woodward avenue store with a forged check. Greusel selected a gown for $86 and received the change, ordering the garment delivered to a woman on Brush street.

Greusel has given the police considerable trouble in the past by laying down worthless checks. He was sentenced to Ionia for fifteen years, but was released on parole last July. Now he must go back and serve the remainder of his time.

Sullivan May Referee.

New York, Nov. 4.—Will John L. Sullivan referee the Jeffries-Johnson fight? John says he is willing to officiate and declares that he will treat each man with perfect fairness. Johnson is quoted as being in favor of Sullivan, while Jeffries has always been John's greatest admirer. Sullivan's record for honesty and square dealing will count in his favor.

Animals and Instinct.

It is a mistake to imagine that animals are prevented by instinct from eating injurious food. A chicken will drink paint; a cow partakes of water in which noxious chemicals have been washed; ducks cheerfully swallow snails and choke themselves in the process. No; animals, like children, need watching.

Recently numerous cases of poisoning in ducks, which followed the consumption of cabbage leaves, have attracted much attention. A few hours after feeding poisoning has manifested itself by loss of appetite, great weakness, tottering steps and sometimes death. From time immemorial ducks have thrived on cabbage leaves. The poultry farmers were greatly puzzled.

Then it was discovered that various caterpillars were concealed in the cabbage leaves; hence these fears. But the point is that, far from instinctively detecting any danger and behaving accordingly, the ducks consumed great quantities of the leaves with much apparent relish.—London Answers.

Pleasure and Sacrifice.

An alert little five-year-old was visiting a city park with her mother for the first time. She had noticed the beautiful red and white swan boats as they passed through in the morning, and her mother had promised they should come back after the shopping was done and have a ride.

Shortly after dinner they stood on the bridge over the lagoon watching the boats below and listening to the cry of the barker as he tried to induce the passing crowds to patronize his swan boats.

But when her mother started toward the boat landing little Elsie declared very vigorously that she did not want to go at all and, as her mother urged her, broke forth in tears.

This sudden fear was so different from her former eagerness that her mother could not understand it until she noticed the boatman's call.

He was crying: "Come along! Come along! Ride clear round the pond. Only 5 cents for ladies and gents! Children thrown in!"

Apples as Omens.

In parts of England many quaint superstitions still center round the apple. Apples hung on strings and twirled before the fire are said to fall off in the order that the marriages of the various owners will proceed. An apple eaten before a looking glass is supposed to give a view of the inquirer's future husband, who will be seen peeping over milady's shoulder. Peel safely taken from an apple, tossed three times round the head and thrown to the ground unbroken forms the first letter of a future lover's name. A more recent, though hardly more serious, custom necessitates a bowl of water in which are floating a number of apples. Mothers must drop forks into the bowl from a distance of about four feet. If the fork pierces an apple the feat is believed to protect the performer's children from catching cold.—London Scraps.

Early English Scare.

In 1370 a report was circulated that "certain galleys, with a multitude of armed men therein, were lying off the foreland of Thanet," and an order was at once issued that "every night watch shall be kept between the Tower of London and Billingsgate, with forty men at arms and sixty archers." The watch was kept in the following order: "Tuesday, the drapers and the tailors; Wednesday, the mercers and the apothecaries; Thursday, the fishmongers and the butchers; Friday, the pewterers and the vintners; Saturday, the goldsmiths and the saddlers; Sunday, the ironmongers, the armorers and the cutlers; Monday, the lawers, the skinners, the bowyers and the girdlers." Even in 1616 pirate vessels were captured off the Kentish coast, between Broadstairs and Margate.—London Chronicle.

Cures Dyspepsia; Trial Is Free

It is a popular mistake that only wealthy people who eat rich and highly-spiced foods suffer from dyspepsia, or, as it is also known, indigestion. The laborer in the street, the worker in the field also finds himself a victim of this disorder. Among the very greatest sufferers from it are women.

Dyspepsia is indicated by a constant feeling of laziness, by loss of appetite and troubled sleep, by sour stomach and distress after eating, by bad complexion and listless eyes.

There is no surer and speedier cure for this trouble than Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which dyspeptics have been using successfully for twenty years. This great herb laxative compound cured Capt. Clark of Buffalo, N. Y., of dyspepsia and sour stomach that he had had for forty years, or until the lucky day that he heard of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It cured Joel Adams, of Montgomery, Ala., after suffering continuously for sixteen months. These are only a few of the many who find it is not expensive to be cured with this grand remedy, as it can be bought at any drug store in a 25-cent or $1.00 bottle.

Your very neighbors are probably lifelong users of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, but if you want to know without expense what it will do for you personally, send your name to Dr. Caldwell and he will be glad to send you a free trial bottle. He is actually anxious to have you make a test of his remedy.

Thousands of families everywhere keep it in the house always ready for emergency as constipation, sour stomach, indigestion, biliousness, dyspepsia, heartburn, torpid liver, etc., occur they come on a member of the family any day. It is pleasant to the taste, acts gently and does not gripe. It is the great children's laxative tonic.

If there is anything about your stomach that you don't understand, or if you want the MEDICAL advice, write Dr. Caldwell and he will tell you what he thinks you need. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 500 Caldwell bldg., Monticello, Ill.

RUMORS SURELY UNTRUE.

Tarlton of Nairobi, However, Has Not Reached Roosevelt.

Rome, Nov. 8.—Mr. Garrett, American charge d'affaires, has received a telegram from Mr. Tarlton, at Nairobi, saying that he has not yet been able to get in communication with Colonel Roosevelt, who is hunting in the interior, away from the railway. Mr. Tarlton ascertained that no telegram relating to Mr. Roosevelt's illness or death has been sent from the protectorate during the last few days. Hence it is obvious that the rumors that harm had befallen the ex-president are untrue unless a secret code was used.

Mrs. Roosevelt, who is visiting here, is now reassured and is convinced that the reports are baseless. She is not alarmed, but she has received no reply to the telegram she sent her husband. This is easily accounted for, however, by the fact that Mr. Roosevelt is a considerable distance from any telegraph line.

Tire Themselves Getting Ready.

Washington Irving tells a story of a man who tried to jump over a hill. He went back so far to get his start for the great leap and ran so hard that he was completely exhausted when he came to the hill and had to lie down and rest. Then he got up and walked over the hill. A great many people exhaust themselves getting ready to do their work. They are always preparing. They spend their lives getting ready to do something which they never do. It is an excellent thing to keep improving oneself, to keep growing, but there must be a time to begin the great work of life. I know a man who is almost forty years old who has not yet decided what he is going to do. He has graduated from college and taken a number of postgraduate courses, but all along general lines. He has not yet begun to specialize. This man fully believes he is going to do great things yet. I hope he may.—Success Magazine.

The Paper They Were Written On.

The average author would probably laugh at the statement that at one time in the world's history manuscripts, simply as such, irrespective of the nature of the text, were immensely valuable. In ancient times manuscripts were important articles from a commercial point of view. They were excessively scarce and were preserved with the utmost care. Even the usurers were glad to lend money on them when the owners were obliged to offer them in pawn. It is related in an ancient tome that a student of Pavia, who was reduced by his debaucheries, raised a new fortune by leaving in pawn a manuscript of a body of law, and a grammarian who was ruined by a fire rebuilt his house with two small volumes of Cicero through the ready aid of the pawnbroker.

The Herring.

A peculiar feature in the herring trade is that an exceptionally large catch during one season has no effect whatever upon the next year's supply; also, large as is man's consumption of herrings, naturalists say the number killed by fishermen is quite insignificant as compared with the quantity destroyed every year by sharks, porpoises, cod, dogfish, ling and other fish, each of which must have its daily meal of from one to two score herrings, to say nothing of the sea birds, which practically live on surface feeding fishes. Herrings are not at all a modern article of diet. A vast commerce in them was carried on in northern Europe all through the dark and middle ages. The herring's chief food consists of minute organisms, which it strains from the water by its gills, but it also eats worms and at certain seasons its own young, sprats and sand eels.—Pearson's Weekly.

Rule of the Corset.

If Cleopatra wore corsets she may rank as a royal champion of them with Catherine de' Medici, who is credited with having introduced the busked corset in France from Italy. Male moralists have been less friendly. Joseph II. of Austria tried to discourage the corset by making it part of the costume of a convicted woman of bad character. Napoleon, shaking his head over the tight lacing of his day, told Dr. Corvisart that he saw in it a sign of frivolous tastes and a menace of coming decadence. The restoration kings, Louis XVIII. and Charles X., were equally hostile. Formerly, said the latter, France had been full of Venuses, Dianas and Niobes, but now there were only wasps. The revolution alone temporarily put down the garment that has triumphantly defied kings.—London Spectator.

MONORAIL RAILWAY GREAT SUCCESS

Demonstration on Full Scale Made in England.

London, Nov. 11.—The new monorail railway, which works on the principle of the gyroscope and which was first shown here in model form some eighteen months ago, before the Royal society, by its inventor, Louis Brennan, C. B., received its first public demonstration on a full scale Wednesday, on the war office grounds near Chatam.

The guests witnessed a spectacle as marvellous and as revolutionary from the standpoint of transportation as that which aeroplanes have furnished during the past two years. They saw a car, 40 feet long, 10 feet wide and 13 feet high, weighing 2 tons, mounted on a single rail, running freely about curves of all sorts and angles, carrying forty passengers with safety as complete and vibration far less than the ordinary passenger car.

The vehicle runs in a circle an eighth of a mile in circumference at a speed of 25 miles an hour, with 85 horsepower, without the slightest tendency to leave the rail. Two gyroscopes, weighing three quarters of a ton each, automatically supply perfect stability.

BANKER DISAPPEARED.

His Body Found Later in Bed of New York Hotel.

New York, Nov. 11.—Edwin Hills, the banker and manufacturer of Plainville, Conn., who disappeared Tuesday afternoon, and for whom the police had sent out a general alarm, was found dead in a room at the Gilsey House. He had gone to the hotel and registered, with a woman, as Mr. and Mrs. Charles French of Hartford, Conn. Coroner Shrady said that death was undoubtedly due to natural causes, and probably by heart disease.

The clerk of the Gilsey House said he did not notice the pair particularly. He said the woman was a blonde and apparently about thirty or thirty-five years old.

They were assigned to a room and went upstairs. Some time in the morning the woman came down and left the key at the desk. Later a chambermaid found Hills dead in bed.

MICHIGAN TEAM OFF FOR EAST

All In Good Shape Save Captain Allerdice.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 11.—Yost led his Michiganders out of Ann Arbor last night, prepared to land them in Wayne Pa., this afternoon.

Allerdice is hurt on this trip eastward, but his hand is not thought to be in a serious condition. The rest of the men are in good shape.

The Notre Dame defeat hurt Michigan. It wasn't a crushing blow, but it left a sting.

"Get Pennsylvania and Minnesota; forget Notre Dame," is the slogan.

Conklin will play at left end. Edmunds may try out for the position next week, preparatory to the Minnesota game, but the coaches have decided best to give him lighter work Saturday on account of his weakened condition.

Much depends upon Saturday's game. In the first place the men of Yost will endeavor to partly redeem Michigan in the eyes of the east. And if Michigan fails to make a favorable showing they may be dropped from the Quaker schedule.

Penn Men in Poor Shape.

Philadelphia, Nov. 11.—In preparation for the Michigan game, Pennsylvania's football squad was given its last practice on Franklin Field, Wednesday afternoon. At 2 o'clock, this afternoon, the varsity squad, consisting of twenty-three men, leave for Winslow Junction, N. J., where the coaches intend to put the finishing touches to the team in preparation for the Wolverines. All of the men are in rather poor physical condition.

STEAMER SMASHED LOCK; DAMAGED FOR SEASON.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Nov. 11.—The steamer Isaac L. Ellwood rammed the upper gate of the Poe lock Wednesday, demolishing the south leaf of the gate and putting the big American lock out of commission for the balance of the season.

A repetition of the Canadian lock disaster was only prevented by a fortunate circumstance. The lower gate of the lock was closed, consequently beyond the injury to the upper gate no damage was done.

At the time of the accident four vessels were in the lock chamber, locking down. They were the steamers Hecker and Lycoming and the barges Sweetheart and Mary N. Burke. All but the Sweetheart had tied up to the lock walls, and the latter was almost wholly within the lock and the south leaf of the upper gates were closed when the Ellwood, approaching from above, swept down, ramming the gate in place and injuring the mechanism.

Captain Cummins of the Ellwood declares the accident due to failure on the part of the engineer to obey orders.

MICHIGAN BRIEFS.

Thomas Bocham, seventy years old, a retired farmer living in St. Joseph, tried to end his life by drinking laudanum. Bocham, however, drank more than enough to end life.

Sadie and Lena Robinson, daughters of a farmer living near Cadillac, donned boys' clothing and hired out to neighbors to pick up potatoes. They helped harvest 1,800 bushels of the tubers and earned good wages.

Emil Anderson, the young man in all in Muskegon for attempting to poison his parents by putting paris green in the coffee pot, has broken his two days' fast. The officers believe the man is feigning insanity.

The report of the special appeal committee which cited the re-assessment of Alpena township, Alpena county, whereby the city was to pay 70 per cent of the tax on the $45,000 valuation, was turned down by the board of supervisors.

Attorneys for the M. U. R., in the suit brought to dissolve the injunction recently secured by the city prohibiting the running of big interurban cars down town, in Kalamazoo, blame the local newspapers for the trouble between the company and the city.

Frederick B. Davis & Son of Battle Creek have filed a petition for voluntary bankruptcy in the United States court, in Detroit. The assets are given as $1,932.76 and the liabilities at $7,234.70. The assets consist largely of real estate and bills receivable.

Franklin A. Niles of Flushing celebrated his seventy-first birthday anniversary the other day as he has been celebrating birthday anniversaries for half a century or more. He clapped on his hat and walked a dozen miles or more to Flint.

WOMEN CAUSED HIS TROUBLES

One of Warriner's Friends Has Broken Silence.

DENIES GETTING ANY MONEY

Lays All Blame on Shoulders of Rivals in Affections of Cincinnati Railroad Man—Officials Wonder What He Did With $643,000 He Admits Having Stolen.

Cincinnati, Nov. 11.—Mrs. Jeanette Stewart, also known as Mrs. Ford, one of the women accused by Charles L. Warriner, defaulting local treasurer of the Big Four railroad, of having shared in his peculations, by blackmailing him, declares she will tell the whole inside story of the $643,000 theft when the case comes to court. Mrs. Stewart denied she had ever received money from Warriner

The sudden breaking of her silence was caused, according to her, by a quarrel which she had with another woman, who has also been mentioned by Warriner. This quarrel resulted in the attachment of Mrs. Stewart's furniture. The officers who made the attachment were quickly followed by reporters, and in the stress of the excitement Mrs. Stewart's reserve broke down.

"I never received a cent from Warriner," she said, "and I never gave any information to the railroad about his shortage. It was another woman that did it all; a woman I thought was my friend. I know the whole story, and I will tell it in court too."

One of the women said to be involved in the case started to leave Cincinnati last night, but was advised by detectives that if she left the city her arrest would follow. She then abandoned the plan.

At present the question that is exercising the railroad officials is: What became of the $643,000 which Warriner admits having stolen?

Warriner says he lost it in stock speculation and in satisfying the demands of blackmailers, but that explanation is not satisfactory to the officers.

From a high official source, it is learned that the first intimation of the impending scandal in the office of the local treasurer came through a Chicago woman, who, it is alleged, had been sharing in the ill-gotten spoils and whose income had been shut off.

FOURTEEN KILLED.

Flat Car Loaded With Timbers Hits Passenger Coach.

Victoria, B. C., Nov. 11.—Through the breaking away of a flat car loaded with heavy timbers, tail ending an early freight on the British Columbia Electric company's Vancouver to New Westminister interurban line, a following passenger car was smashed to splinters and all aboard either instantly killed or seriously (in three cases fatally) injured. The victims were almost exclusively workmen bound for the company's car construction shops, fourteen of whom were killed instantly.

MANY DIE IN MINE.

Nine Taken From Burning Hole at Wilkesbarre, Pa.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Nov. 11.—When fire in the Auchingloss mine of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad was extinguished last evening, after burning thirty hours, the bodies of nine victims had been brought to the surface.

Only one of the men behind the fire escaped alive. He is Charles Adushis.

CANNOT RETURN FOR TWO YEARS

Law Student Fired From the University.

WAS ON DRUNKEN SPREE

Helped Smash Up Furniture In Rooming House—Landlady Had Him and Four Others Arrested—Faculty May Find It Necessary to Remove One of Remaining Ones From School.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 11.—Arthur Hemmy, a junior law student from Juneau, Wis., was last night suspended from the university for two years for "immoral and disorderly conduct."

This action by the law faculty is the result of a drunken rough housing that took place in one of the students' rooming houses after the Syracuse-Michigan game, Oct. 30.

Overjoyed at Michigan's victory, Hemmy could find no other way of showing his happiness than by getting drunk. Herbert Koehler, from Davenport, Ia., was in the same fix. The two started out and met a third, who invited them to his room. Once there they got troublesome and began to break up the furniture. Mrs. Hall, the landlady, demanded that her three roomers—for two others had joined the crowd—and their two intoxicated friends should settle for the damage they had done, and when they refused she caused their arrest. Before Justice Richie all five pleaded guilty and were fined the costs, $3.80 each.

Over Koehler the faculty has no jurisdiction, for, while he came here to enter the university, and, it is understood, his mother thinks he is a regular student here, he failed to enter because he could not pass the regular requirements. Despite the efforts of the faculty to have him return to his home, he still stays here.

Two of the remaining three claim they were innocent bystanders, but that they pleaded guilty believing that they would get out of their trouble by so doing easier than by fighting it out. They seem to be able to prove their innocence. The case of the fifth one will probably come before the faculty of another department next week.

ETHICS NOT OBSERVED.

Implement Dealers Are Down on Mail Order Concerns.

Flint, Mich., Nov. 11.—What state implement dealers, in convention here, declare that the worst thorn in their business just now is the big concern that sells goods by mail at wholesale prices and the traveling salesman and manufacturer who uses the same tactics. Members of the organization claim such methods are violations of business ethics, and it is likely the association will go on record as being opposed to them.

An elaborate banquet for the visiting members was held last night at the Dryden. About 300 men and women are attending the convention.

Detroit Auto Wins Atlanta Event.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 11.—William Knipper, driving a thirty horsepower Chalmers-Detroit, won the big race on Wednesday's program at the Atlanta automobile speedway, captured the Candler trophy for the Chalmers-Detroit Motor company and $600 in gold coin for himself. The race was the 100 mile event for stock classes of 161 to 230 cubic inches piston displacement. Six drivers started in the event.

DID NOT RETURN.

M. A. C. Professor Mystifies Faculty by His Actions.

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 11.—An air of mystery surrounds the sudden and unannounced departure of A. E. Jones, professor of mathematics at the Michigan Agricultural college, from the campus, at East Lansing, Oct. 30.

For the first time in five years Professor Jones did not put in an appearance at the college Nov. 1. None of the faculty have been able to penetrate the mystery which surrounded the professor of mathematics.

Professor Babcock has just received a letter written by Jones in his home at Lena, Ill., stating he was not coming back, but giving no reasons. Jones was about forty years of age and unmarried.

Horticulturists Meet Dec. 7.

"The most merciless enemy I had for 20 years," declares Mrs. James Duncan, of Haynesville, Me., "was Dyspepsia. I suffered intensely after eating or drinking and could scarcely sleep. Each inside organ has its controlling or "inside nerve". When these nerves fail then those organs must surely falter. This vital truth is leading druggists everywhere to dispense and recommend Dr. Shoop's Restorative. A few days' test will surely tell! Sold by all dealers.

The Lure of the Mask

By HAROLD MAC GRATH

Copyright, 1908, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

"It is not curiosity," declared Kitty. "It is because I love you and because it makes me sad when I hear you laugh, when I see you beat your hands against the chair as you did just now."

La Signorina turned again in a passion which was as fierce as it was sudden.

"There is a man," she hissed, her eyes dilating. "But I loathe him, I hate him, I abhor him! And were it not wicked to kill he would have been dead long ago. Enough! If you ever ask another question I will leave you."

"I am sorry," said Kitty. "He was false to you and broke your heart."

"No, Kitty, only my pride."

"It is a strange world," mused Kitty. "Let us turn to our affairs. I received a letter today."

"From home?" eagerly.

"I have no home, Kitty. The letter is from a friend in Naples. Mr. Hillard and Mr. Merrihew, friends of yours, are in Italy."

Kitty could scarcely believe her ears. "Where are they? Where are they stopping?"

"That I do not know. But listen. They have started out to find us. When I tell you that Mr. Hillard is the gentleman I dined with that night before we sailed you will understand my reasons for wishing to avoid him. From this time on we must never appear on the streets without our veils. If by chance we meet them we must give no sign. It will be only for a little while. Your letter will come soon, and you may renew your acquaintance with these two gentlemen when you return home. It may be hard for you, but if you wish to stay with me my will must be a law unto you."

"Not to speak to them if we meet them?" urged Kitty in dismay. "But that is cruel of you. They are both gentlemen."

"I do not know Mr. Merrihew, but I can say that Mr. Hillard is a gentleman. As for being cruel, I am not; only selfish."

"Are you not a queen who has run away from a kingdom?" asked Kitty bitterly. "One reads about them every day in the papers."

"My dear, you are free to choose one of two paths. I shall not urge you one way or the other, but you must choose now."

Several minutes passed. Kitty looked out to sea, and La Signorina closed her eyes. In her heart Kitty knew that she could no more leave this woman than she could fly. She was held by curiosity, by sentiment, by the romantic mystery.

"I have chosen," she said at length. "I shall stay with you."

"Thanks, Kitty. And now the affairs of the company. We have played three days and have lost steadily. Tonight will be the last chance. Win or lose, tomorrow we shall return to Venice. I do not like the idea of going to Monte Carlo at night. It is not exactly safe. But since beggars mustn't be choosers we must go. Again I warn you to speak to no one while I am playing and under no circumstances raise your veil. They have begun to notice us, but it will end tonight. I was mad to think that I could win. And, by the way, Kitty, we shall not go back to the Campo Formosa."

Kitty accepted this news brightly. If there was one place she hated it was the Campo.

"Now run and dress," advised La Signorina. "Let me dream a little more while the sun sets."

She knew men tolerably well. After thirty they cease to follow visions—they seek tangible things. No, they must never meet again. It would not be wise. Her heart, galled by disillusion, might not withstand much storming. And she had no wish to add this irretrievable folly to the original blunder. She was afraid.

No; they must go their separate ways till the end. With a sigh she rose and went into the room. Kitty was busy with the finishing touches of her toilet. The older woman kissed her fondly.

"And do you realize that you are the most beautiful woman in the world?" asked Kitty.

"Little flatterer!"

"And if I were a man"—Kitty paused—"I'd fall in love with you and marry you."

La Signorina looked into the mirror.

CHAPTER XII.

GRAY VEILS.

THE fascination of Monte Carlo is not to be described—it must be seen. Vice shall be attractive, says the mother of Satan. At Monte Carlo it is more than attractive; it is compelling. A subtle hypnotism prevails, the lure of gold. Fool and rogue, saint and sinner, here they meet and mingle and change. To those who give Monte Carlo but a trifling glance, toss a coin or two on the tables and leave by the morrow's train it has no real significance. It is simply one of the sights of Europe.

To this latter class belonged the two young men. They had no fortunes to retrieve, no dishonesty to hide, no restitutions to make, no dancers to clothe and house. It was but a mild flirtation.

They had searched Nice and Monaco and Mentone, but the women they sought were not to be found. They decided, therefore, that the women had gone on to Paris.

"My system needs a tonic," said Merrihew.

"We'll hold the funeral after tonight's play. Of all the damfool games it's roulette."

"And I can prove it," Merrihew replied. "I have just $50 left." He took out the gold and toyed with it. "Can't you hear it?" he asked.

"Hear what?"

"The swan song of these tender napoleons."

Merrihew had played the numbers, the dozens, the columns, the colors, odd and even. Sometimes he would win a little, but a moment later the relentless rake would drag it back to the bank.

"Nature has done this very prettily. Quite clever with her colors, don't you know," he drawled, plucking the down on his upper lip, for he was trying to raise a mustache, convinced that two waxed points of hair at each corner of his mouth would impress the hotel waiters and other facchini—baseborn.

"Don't be a jackass!" Hillard was out of sorts.

"You agreed with me that I was one. Why not let me make a finished product?" good humoredly.

"Well," Merrihew finally said, "you might as well let me have my letter of credit now."

"You will not set eyes upon it till we return to Genoa. That's final. I know you, my boy, and I know Monte Carlo. Even with your fifty, a watch and a ring I'm afraid to trust you out of sight."

"I can see that you will never forgive nor forget those bad cigars. Come on. We'll take a look at our Italian friend. He's a bad loser. I have seen him lose his temper too. It's my opinion that he's a desperate man."

A picture, beautiful, but false.

"They usually are when they come to Monte Carlo."

So they walked round to the entrance to the gaming halls, where the lights, the gowns, the jewels, the sparkling eyes, the natural beauty and the beauty of enamel, the vague perfumes, the low murmur of voices, the soft rustle of silks, the music of ringing gold, all combine to produce a picture as beautiful as a mirage and as false. They joined the never ending procession which passes in and out of the swinging doors day after day, year after year.

"There's the chap with the scar. He is a handsome beggar," Hillard admitted. "I wonder what sort of blackleg he is. He's no ordinary one, I'm certain. I begin to recognize the face of the man with him. He's a distinguished diplomat."

The Italian played like an old hand, a number once in awhile, but making it a point to stake on the colors. Red began to repeat itself. He doubled and doubled. On the sixth consecutive turn he played the maximum of 12,000 francs and won. The diplomat touched him on the arm significantly, but the player shook his head. Ten minutes later he had won 40,000 francs. Again he refused to leave his chair.

"If he stays now," said Hillard, "he will lose it all. His friend is right."

"Forty thousand francs, $8,000!" murmured Merrihew sadly. Why couldn't he have luck like this?

Hillard was a true prophet. There came a change in the smile of fortune. The game jumped from color to color, seldom repeating, with zero making itself conspicuous. The man with the scar played on, but he began to lose—small sums at first, then larger till finally he was down to his original stake. The scar grew livid. He waited five turns of the wheel, then placed his stake on the second dozen. He lost. He rose from his chair scowling. His eye chanced to meet Hillard's, and their glances held for a moment.

"Fool!" said Merrihew in an undertone as the man strolled leisurely past them. "Eight thousand and not content to quit!"

Meanwhile the trolleys from Nice and Mentone had poured into Monte Carlo their usual burdens of pleasure seekers. On one of the cars from Nice there had arrived two women, both veiled and simply gowned. They seldom addressed each other and never spoke to any one else. Doubtless they were some sober married women out for a lark. Upon leaving the car they did not at once go into the casino, but directed their steps toward the terraces, for the band was playing. They sat in the shadow of the statue of Massenet, and near by the rasp of a cricket broke in upon the music. When the music stopped they linked arms and sauntered up and down the wide sweep of stone, mutually interested in the crowds. Once as they passed behind a bench the better to view the palaces of the prince they heard the voices of two men.

As they went on the women heard something about "those bad cigars." The men were Americans evidently. It was only an inconsequent incident, and a moment later both had forgotten it.

"At which table shall I make the stake, Kitty?"

"The center. There is always a crush there, and we shall not be noticed."

ALMA COLLEGE.

If Woman's suffrage don't get a fair showing at Alma college, it won't be the fault of the girl's literary society.

Last Monday evening Alpha Theta was entertained by Zeta Sigma. The girls gave a program, the boys a spread. Order was called by the Alpha Theta president, roll call being responded to by quotations on man. To say that those quotations were apt and clever, and hit hard is putting it mildly.

Next came a debate on woman's suffrage—so hot and so pointed that the boys were nearly asphyxiated. Following this came an essay on the same theme. That was verily a remarkable paper, being at once prolix, poetic and puissant. The applause was still rattling when the next number appeared in the form of an original story on the glory of equal suffrage. It was a story of pathos, humor and cyclonic climaxes. The program was concluded by the entire society rising and singing an anthem on woman's suffrage.

The die is cast, the question of the collegiate triangular debate: Resolved that the U. S. government should adopt a progressive income tax, constitutionality conceded. The scheme of the league is this: Each college has two teams, a negative and an affirmative, the affirmative remaining at home. This year Alma's negative debates Hope at Hope. Hope's negative goes to Olivet, while Olivet contends with Alma here. Although only three of last year's debaters are back, yet Alma feels optimistic about the outcome, inasmuch as several of the new men are showing up in fine shape. Last year Alma lost to Olivet and won from Hope. The year before they captured both debates.

A committee comprising Graves, Call and Blaske, will confer with the Phi Alpha, to decide upon the date of the inter-society debate and other matters relative to that debate.

In response to the growing demand and interest in musical and literary entertainments, the faculty have made provisions for three programs, one to occur each term, lasting about an hour and a half. On Nov. 19, the first program, "A Morning with the Poets," will be given. There will be a paper on Sam Johnson by Graham, selection, from Tennyson, by Miss Huber, recitation of the "Raven" by Snell, the "Pilgrim's Vision" by Hume, and O. W. Holmes, "The Boys" by Blaske. Musical selections will intersperse the various numbers.

In a snappy game Alma Reserves put it over the St. Louis high to the tune of 31 to 0. The visitors played exceptionally fast ball, using for the most part, close formations, plunging off tackle for repeated gains. Open formations characterized the locals. A change for the good has been made in the line up of the second team. Blaske has been shifted from quarter to right end, Polhy from left half to quarter; while "Fleety" McComb, the sprinter who runs the 100 yd. dash in 10 flat, has been placed in Polhy's half.

Choosing a Christmas Present.

When you make a present of a periodical to a friend or a family you are really selecting a companion to influence them for good or ill during a whole year. If the acquaintances of your sons and daughters were to talk to them aloud as some periodicals talk to them silently, how quickly you would forbid the companionship! In the one case as in the other, the best course is to supplant the injurious with something equally attractive and at the same time "worth while." A food can be wholesome and utterly distasteful. Reading can be made so too. But The Youth's Companion not only nourishes the mind, but delights it, just like the ideal human associate whom you would choose. The Youth's Companion fills that place now in more than half a million homes. Can you not think of another family in which it is not now known where it would be joyfully welcomed?

If the $1.75 for the 1910 Volume is sent now, the new subscriber will be entitled to all the remaining issues of 1909. If desired the publishers will hold these back or send them at Christmas time, together with the Christmas Number and the Companion's new "Venetian" Calander for 1910, lithographed in thirteen colors and gold.

The Best Family Newspaper.

An ideal newspaper for the American home must be habitually clean and high-minded, it must offer something of interest to every member of the family, and it must present daily the news of the whole world in authentic and readable form. A large contract, you will say. Well, the newspaper that comes nearest to filling it in the West is THE CHICAGO RECORD-HERALD. Its moral tone is always high, its news service is unsurpassed, and probably no other paper in the United States has so brilliant array of special features suited to the tastes and needs of every member of the family.

Business and professional men have long regarded THE RECORD-HERALD as the best paper for their own reading because of its unequaled faculty for getting all the news of the world and putting is into the briefest possible form for the busy man. They also esteem is for the reliability of its financial, agricultural and market reports. Young men perhaps find its greatest attraction in the excellent sporting department, which fills four entire pages on Sunday and a page or more on other days. Wives and mothers emphatically prefer it on account of its well-conducted feminine departments—its daily recipes and menus, its daily fashion notes and hints for home dressmaking, Mme. Qui Vivi's pungent and sensible beauty talks, Marion Harland's famous page and the rest of the good things that make up the handsome Woman's Section in the Sunday paper. Children enjoy the Little Nemo and other Comic Section pictures, with the bright stories for boys and girls every Sunday. And all the family together can enjoy the interesting travels and special articles of William E. Curtis, Mr. Kiser's humor and verse, the serial stories and many similar features outside the news columns.

THE CHICAGO RECORD-HERALD has every right to call itself the best all-around family newspaper in the West.

CONFIRMED PROOF

Residents of Tecumseh Cannot Doubt What Has been Twice Proved.

In gratitude for complete relief from aches and pains of bad backs from distressing kidney ills thousands have publicly recommended Doan's Kidney Pills. Residents of Tecumseh, who so testified years ago, now say their cures were permanent. This testimony doubly proves the worth of Doan's Kidney Pills to Tecumseh Kidney sufferers.

Mrs. Charles Stevenson, Wyandotte and Pottawatamie Sts., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "Sharp, shooting pains across the small of my back were the first symptoms of kidney trouble in my case: My kidneys gradually became disordered and I was very miserable. Being advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills, I did so and the pains disappeared. For years I had also been distressed by gravel but Doan's Kidney Pills removed this trouble and I have not been bothered since."

Above statement was given on Dec. 10, 1906, and on Dec. 9, 1908, Mrs. Stevenson confirmed it in detail adding that her cure had been permanent. For Sale by all Dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, Sole Agents for the United States.

Mi-o-na cures dyspepsia. There isn't any doubt about it. Thousands of just such testimonials as the above from every city and town in America prove it. Mi-o-na does not digest the food in your stomach, but in a few days it tones up the walls of the stomach and makes it strong enough to digest its own food. NOTED SPIRIT MEDIUM.

Hereward Carrington Brings Eusapia Palladino From Europe.

New York, Nov. 11.—Eusapia Palladino, the Italian spirit medium who has puzzled scientists of Europe for years has arrived here on the steamship Prinzess Irene from Naples, and during the winter she will undergo a series of tests by well known men interested in spiritualism.

She came over through the efforts of Hereward Carrington, who went to Italy some months ago to investigate on his own behalf and was so interested that he thought the men in America should see the woman.

The medium got a little notice on board the ship as she came over, and those who came in contact with her and the spirits that she called from the vast deep won't soon forget what happened. She gave three distinct seances on the Prinzess Irene and so astonished some of her fellow passengers that they just had to tell about it.

There were few persons present, but they all heard rapping and saw mysterious hands flying through the air and heard the ringing of bells. Mr. Carrington was aboard the ship at the time.

Eusapia Palladine perhaps would not have come to America but for Mr. Carrington's skepticism. For years his business has been finding out just how much of a medium persons claim to be were.

Palladine is so good, according to Mr. Carrington, that if she is not the real thing she has been able to deceive pretty sharp men.

Mighty Spry Old Lady.

Saginaw, Mich., Nov. 11.—Though she is 104 years of age, Mrs. Kittie Nowack of Bridgeport is still so vigorous that the other day she assisted at the golden wedding anniversary celebration of her daughter, Mrs. Mark Eschepinak. And the celebration was a unique one, for besides the aged woman and her six children there were thirty grandchildren and one great-grandchild in attendance.

Attorney Jennings' First Petition.

Scranton, Pa., Nov. 11.—Attorney Hughey Jennings, who during the summer months wins championship pennants for the Detroit Baseball club, has filed his first petition in the local court. He has been a member of the Lackawana county bar for some time, but heretofore has kept rather close to his office.

As Others See Us.

"The man who can pick out the best picture of himself is a rare bird," said a photographer. "Even an author, who is reputedly a poor judge of his own work, exercises vast wisdom in selecting his best book compared with the person who tries to choose his best photograph. Every famous man or woman who has been photographed repeatedly has his or her favorite picture. Usually it is the worst in the collection. It shows him or her with an unnatural expression, sitting or standing in an unnatural attitude. The inability to judge of his best picture must be due to the average man's ignorance of how he really looks, or perhaps it can be partly attributed to a desire to look other than he does. A stout man will swear that the photograph most nearly like him is the one that makes him look thin, a thin man the one that makes him look stout, the solemn man selects the jolliest picture, the jovial man the most cadaverous.—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Famous Quotation.

A story about Keats is quoted by the late Sir Benjamin Ward Richardson in his "Lives" of disciples of Aesculapius. Mr. Stephens, a friend of the doctor, once told him that one evening at twilight when he and Keats were sitting together in their student days, Stephens at his medical books, Keats engrossed in his dreaming, Keats called out to his friend that he had composed a new line—"A thing of beauty is a constant joy."

"What think you of that, Stephens?"

"It has the true ring, but is wanting in some way," replies the latter as he dips once more into his medical studies.

An interval of silence, and again the poet, "'A thing of beauty is a joy forever.' What think you of that, Stephens?"

"That it will live forever."

A happy prophecy indeed!

The Label Language.

"There's a language in hotel labels, the same as in stamps or flowers," said a courier. "All over Europe the hotel porters paste the hotel labels on your trunks in such a way that the porters in future towns will know what sort of a tipper you are.

"Up at the top of the trunk the label means you are generous. In the middle it means you're a middling sort. Down very low it means you are no good."

Willing to Help.

"Ma, what are the folks in our church gettin' up a subscription fer?"

"To send our minister on a vacation to Europe."

Best Stomach Remedy Free

It is an old saying that if the stomach is sound the whole body is safe, because so much depends upon the proper working of the stomach. Many persons find themselves with a disorder of the stomach which produces dyspepsia or a peculiar state of biliousness.

If you suffer from both stomach trouble and constipation you are on the way to a very serious disease. From just such conditions come appendicitis, rheumatism, skin diseases and similar disorders, because the waste matter that should have been dispelled from the system through the bowels has found its way into the blood and vitiated it. What is needed at this point is not simply a violent cathartic tablet or salt, which usually does more harm than good, but a gentle laxative tonic like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which people have been using for these ailments for nearly a quarter of a century. It cured J. C. Lanham, of Warrensburg, Mo., of stomach trouble of long standing, also William Voit, of 903 Ellison St., Louisville, Ky., who had the trouble for fifteen years.

However, if you have stomach trouble you want to know from personal experience what Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will do for you. If so, send your name to the doctor and a free trial bottle will be sent you. You are urged to send for the free bottle, as the results from it will be the best recommendation of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Then you will do as over two million people did last year—go to your druggist and buy a regular bottle at 50 cents or $1, according to the size you prefer. We could mention hundreds and hundreds of families who are never without it. You can never tell when some member of the family will need a laxative, and then no time should be lost taking Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

If there is anything about your stomach that you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 500 Caldwell bldg., Monticello, Ill.

FEELS REPAID FOR LONG TRIP

Taft Believes It Will Be of Great Help to Him.

WASHINGTON WELCOMES HIM

Chief Executive Particularly Pleased With His Reception in South—Traveled 13,000 Miles, Made 270 Speeches and Got Away With 579 Formal Breakfasts, Luncheons and Dinners.

Washington, Nov. 11.—President Taft got back to Washington last night from his swing around the circle, the longest swing of that character ever taken by any president during the term of his service in that high office. He had traveled approximately 13,000 miles, had gone into thirty-three states and two territories and had crossed over into Mexico. This record-breaking tour was begun at Beverly, Mass., on Sept. 15, and extended over a period of fifty-six days.

It was a royal welcome home to the president—that is from the Washington viewpoint. Washington seldom enthuses over its great men. But it, or part of it, abandoned precedent last evening.

A large crowd had gathered at the Union station when the president's special train pulled in at 8:35 o'clock. The crowd cheered, too, and Mr. Taft looked pleased.

"I am very glad to get back," he said. "It was about August 6 when I left Washington. I am glad to get back in just about as good condition as when I left."

Crowd Cheered Him.

Then Henry Litchfield West, a member of the board of commissioners of the District of Columbia, and Robert Shaw Oliver, the assistant secretary of war, shook hands with the president and, with the others who met the train, escorted Mr. Taft and his traveling companions up the long stairway to the main concourse of the station. In the concourse about 1,000 people were gathered. As he walked across the station the crowd began to cheer, and Mr. Taft, smiling broadly, acknowledged the greeting by raising his hat.

The Union station has an apartment known as "the president room," which is used exclusively for the accommodation of the president of the United States and his family whenever they are in the station building. Here the members of Mr. Taft's cabinet were waiting to receive him.

There was a good deal of laughing and handshaking and hearty greetings as the president was surrounded by his official advisers. Only a few minutes was spent by Mr. Taft in the president's room. Then he got into the waiting White House automobile and was whirled off to his official residence, where Mrs. Taft was waiting for him.

Trip Great Value to Him.

President Taft expressed the opinion that his long trip would be of great value to him throughout the remainder of his administration. He declared that he had familiarized himself with the needs of the country in a way that he could never have done in any other way. He feels that the assimilation on his part has only begun, and it is his intention to confer from time to time with congressmen from the different parts of the country for the sole purpose of enlarging the impressions he has gained on his tour.

The president is particularly pleased with his receptions in the south. He believes that they indicate a confidence in him and a disposition on the part of the south to meet him more than half way in carrying out his so-called southern policy.

The president realizes that a lot of hard work is facing him at the White House. "A mountain of work," was the way he referred to it.

Besides the 13,000 miles that the president covered by train on his record-breaking trip, he made 962 miles in automobiles and 165 miles in carriages and stages. He has made 270 speeches, an average of about five a day. As a gastronomic feat the president's trip is one of the greatest on record. He has eaten 579 formal breakfasts, luncheons and dinners. He has not cut a single function, and he is ending the trip with his digestion just as good as it ever was.

He had lived in New Baltimore many years and is survived by a widow and one child.

SAILORS MAY HAVE PERISHED

Stranded Steamer Hoyt Is Awash With Icy Waves.

CAPTAIN AINSWORTH ASHORE

Says Crew Was In Best of Spirits When He Left Craft—Vessel Lies Twenty Miles Off Bayfield, Wis. Tugs From Ashland Were Unable Save Crew on Reaching Vessel.

Duluth, Nov. 15.—The steamer James Hoyt of the Provident Steamship company (Wolvin line), Captain Charles Ainsworth of Algonac master, is still on the reef two miles out from Outer island, twenty miles northeast of Bayfield, Wis.

It is feared that the crew has perished. The temperature is down to zero, and the upper works, all that remains of the wreck above water, is awash by the icy waves. The wreck resembles a frozen mass, as the water is freezing to her.

Captain Ainsworth reached shore Sunday with one of of his crew, making four men to leave the craft. He reported his crew as in the best of spirits when he left the craft.

For a while Sunday the weather favored the boat, but the weather bureau predicts a shifting of the wind back to the northwest, in which event nothing can save the crew, if they have not already perished.

A rescuing party on the tugs Bennett and Bayfield put out from Bayfield, but was compelled to come back to port on account of the fierceness of the gale.

The tugs Moose and Ferris were put into commission at Ashland and succeeded in reaching the wrecked vessel, but were driven back by the heavy seas and compelled to abandon their efforts in behalf of the crew, now consisting of twenty-one lives.

SOLDIERS ARE TO ERECT MONUMENT

Ann Arbor Veterans to Memorialize Their Dead.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 15.—After many years planning among the old soldiers and sailors of Washtenaw county, they are at last in a position to erect a monument for their dead, the men who gave up their lives for their country in both the civil and the Spanish-American wars.

This monument will be erected at the southwest corner of the courthouse square next spring. The order has just been given to H. P. Finley of this city, and the monument will be made and shipped from the quarries. The cost will be about $6,000.

The shaft is to be 26 feet high, of blue white westerly Rhode Island granite.

ONE HUNDRED DROWNED.

Steamers In Collision In Rheo Straits. One Sinks.

Singapore, Nov. 15.—The British-India steamer Onda has arrived here, with her bows smashed, bringing sixty-one survivors from the maritimes mail steamer La Seyne, with which the Onda was in collision in the Rheo straits.

The La Seyne sank in two minutes. One hundred of these on board were drowned.

Auto Ran Into Hotel.

Battle Creek, Mich., Nov. 15.—Although Mrs. W. C. Robinson and two little girls, Louise and Catherine Chapman, drove through the main street front of the Post Tavern's tea room, not one of the three was injured. Mrs. Robinson was driving in an electric brougham, when the machine hit the car track, skidded and then plunged through the plate glass windows.

MICHIGAN BRIEFS.

Mrs. Valantine Wagner, a Marine City pioneer, has passed away, aged seventy-nine years. Born in Tyrol, Austria, she came to Marine City fifty-five years ago.

James Welch, who resides near Addison, met death by drowning in the Addison mill pond. He was driving home from the village and lost his bearings, driving into the deepest portion of the pond.

Paul Boronoski, aged fifty, who escaped from the Pontiac asylum six weeks ago, was jailed at Hastings and handed over to the asylum authorities. Boronoski was in the employ of a Prairieville farmer.

Eluding the vigilance of the Muskegon county home authorities, Frank Siterstead, an inmate, escaped into the woods and hanged himself from a limb of a tree with his suspenders. His body was found by hunters.

Because he escaped from prison while employed in the lumber yard outside the walls, Earl Brownell, a former trusted convict at Marquette, will have to serve a number of years additional in the Marquette penitentiary. His original sentence for burglary was within seven weeks of expiration when he gained his liberty, on Sept. 8 last.

Dodging a Slander.

During a suit for slander brought in an Ohio town one of the parties was asked by the presiding magistrate:

"Is it true, as alleged, that you declared that Thomas Mulkins had stolen your pocketbook?"

"Your honor," responded the man, "I did not go so far as that. I merely said that if Mulkins had not assisted me in looking for the pocketbook I might have found it."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Before and After.

She was a frivolous, fashionable young woman with beaux galore, but one man with only a small income seemed to be the favorite.

"And a good deal harder after you win her," answered his father, who knew what he was talking about.

Paris, Nov. 15.—Mme. Margherita Steinheil has been acquitted by a jury of the murder of her husband, Adolph Steinheil, a noted painter, and her stepmother, Mme. Japy.

The verdict was rendered after two and a half hours' deliberation, during which the jury thrice summoned the president of the court for explanations, thus proving that the original majority was for conviction. It is understood that the jury stood nine for acquittal and three for conviction.

A dramatic scene followed the verdict. The crowd in the courtroom cheered time and again, and their cheers were taken up by thousands waiting on the outside.

LEGLESS MAN A HERO.

Routs Out Sleepers In Burning Building—Three Lives Lost.

Pittsburg, Nov. 15.—Three dead and a score injured, seven of them perhaps fatally, was the result of a fire at 425 Water street. The three story restaurant and boarding house of Frank Miller was burned to the ground, and from the ruins there were brought three charred corpses, the identity of which are not known. The trio came to Miller's place late at night and went to bed in one room, where they were cremated later.

Max Kemas, one of the most seriously burned, performed some acts of heroism, though greatly handicapped by having no legs. Through his individual work at least twenty persons who would otherwise have perished were roused. In the excitement Komas neglected his own flight until too late. When he was finally thrown from the second story window by some firemen, who found him unconscious in the hall, he had sustained severe burns.

BIG CONTRACTS MADE.

Governor Arranges to Purchase Sisal In Yucatan.

Mexico City, Nov. 15.—The state of Michigan will purchase from the sisal hemp growers of Yucatan from 16,000 to 20,000 bales of that fiber every year, an amount which represents a value of approximately a million pesos, according to contracts announced.

The hemp will go to the Michigan state penitentiary, there to be made into cordage, which is sold direct to the farmers of the United States for use in binding wheat, corn stalks, and for other purposes.

Governor Warner of Michigan and party have just returned from a tour of investigation throughout the Yucatan peninsula.

Lexington, Ky., Nov. 11.—Cassius Moody, aged forty, one of the best known and prosperous farmers of Madison county, killed his wife, set fire to the house and then drank a bottle of carbolic acid, and both were dead shortly after neighbors reached the scene. Moody had been drinking for several days and was said to have been crazed with liquor.

ALL EFFORTS AT RESCUE FAIL

Three Hundred and Eighty-Four Men Likely Dead.

FIRE HAS BEEN SMOTHERED

Experts Have Failed to Reach Men Imprisoned In Mine at Cherry, Ill. Hope For Entombed Men Not Abondoned—Blame For Disaster May Be Placed on Owners of Mine.

Cherry, Ill., Nov. 15.—Three hundred and eighty-four men are probably dead in the mine of the St. Paul Coal company here, where they were trapped by fire Saturday afternoon. All efforts at rescue have failed. Not a sign of life has come from the imprisoned men.

The fire, which gutted the two shafts, has been smothered, but it is feared that the men's lives have been snuffed out by that effort to save them from being roasted alive.

Mine experts in oxygen helmets have made five trips down the air shaft. They reached the second vein level, but not one of the miners has been reached.

Government Experts There.

Two government experts, R. Y. Williams and J. M. Webb of the Urbana mine rescue staff, are conducting the work. Williams and Henry Smith, a volunteer, made most of the dangerous descents. State Mine Inspector Taylor made on descent.

The helmetted men, with electric lanterns and oxygen tanks strapped on their backs, fought their way down the air shaft. Dense smoke poured from the shaft when they entered. Projecting timbers had to be passed, and fear of a cave-in was held by the most hopeful.

The Hon. Richard Newcom, president of the state mining board, is in charge of the situation. Ten state mine inspectors, two country mine inspectors and officials of the mine and the C. M. & St. Paul railway are in continuous conference. Until the mine divers enter the second vein tunnel and close trap doors and the mine can be cleared of smoke, the deadly fire damp and black damp, the experts say they can only wait.

Hope for some of the entombed men has not been abandoned. The more experienced, it is hoped, have made for the "face," the ends of the galleries and winding rooms, where the coal walls may shut out the heavy smoke and give them one fighting chance in a thousand.

May Blame Company.

Blame for the disaster may be placed on the company and its executive because of inactivity in the hour that the air shaft cage was left at the bottom of the bottom level. Evidence along that line was given before the coroner's jury at the inquest over the body of John Flood, one of the rescuers.

John Raisbeck, engineer of the air shaft, admitted that he raised his cage but once in the rescue work. Strict obedience to the rules requiring signals for every motion of the cage was offered as his excuse. His evidence and that of John Cowley, engineer of the main shaft, caused the jury to decide upon a thorough probe of the matter of signals.

RED CROSS TO AID.

Sends Man to Cherry, Ill., and Starts Raising Funds For Widows.

Washington, Nov. 15.—Ernest P. Bicknell, a relief expert of the American National Red Cross society, has left Washington for Cherry, Ill., where he will take charge of relief work at the mine disaster there. Mr. Bicknell is a national director of the organization and has had much experience in relief work. He went to Messina, Italy, last year as the representative of the Red Cross.

The Red Cross has sent out a request for donations of money for the widows and children of the victims of the mine disaster. The officers of the Red Cross believe that contributions of money will be needed in finding homes and obtaining transportation for the sufferers.

Wrote Note When Dying.

Peoria, Ill., Nov. 15.—The lifeless body of E. M. Sherrill, district agent of the Continental Casualty company, was found in a rowboat along the bank of the Illinois river, three miles north of here. The find was made by Ora Harbers, a duck hunter. A note, "My heart; wire David Fuller, 712 Maple street, Galesburg, Ill.," written on the back of an insurance policy, was found in Sherrill's coat. He was a sufferer from heart trouble.

The Lure of the Mask

By HAROLD MAC GRATH

"I do not agree with you there. However, it shall be the center table. What would you do, Kitty, if I should break the bank?"

"Die of excitement," truthfully.

"You will live through this event then." With a light, careless laugh La Signorina pressed her way to the table.

She lost steadily from the start. She gave no sign, however, that her forces were in full retreat from the enemy. She played on, and the hand which placed the bets was steady. And when the gold was all gone she opened her empty hands expressively and shrugged. She was beaten.

Behind the chair of the banker, opposite, stood the Italian. The scowl still marred his forehead. When the woman in the veil spread out her hands he started. There was something familiar in that gesture. And then the woman saw him. For the briefest moment her form stiffened.

"Kitty," La Signorina whispered, "let us go out to the atrium. I am tired."

They left the hall leisurely and found a vacant settle in the atrium.

"How cold your hands are!" exclaimed Kitty.

"Kitty, I am a fool, a fool! I have unwittingly put my head in the lion's mouth. If I had not reached this seat in time I should have fallen. I would willingly give all my rings if at this moment I could run across the hall and out into the open!"

"Merciful heaven! Why, what is the matter? What has happened?"

"I cannot explain to you."

"Was it some one you saw in there?"

"Silence, and sit perfectly still!"

A man in evening dress came out into the atrium, lighting a cigarette. At the sight of him both women were startled.

"It is Mr. Hillard, Mr. Merrihew's friend!" Kitty would have risen, but the other's strong hand restrained her.

"Kitty, remember your promise."

"Is he the man?"

"No, no! Only I have said that we must not meet him. It might do him incalculable harm. Harm!" La Signorina repeated. "Do you understand?"

Hillard blew outward a few pale rings of smoke and circled the atrium with an indolent glance which stopped as it rested upon the two veiled women. A certain curiosity impelled him toward them, and he sank on the settle with perhaps half a dozen spans of the hand between. He observed the women frankly. Not a single whisp of hair escaped the veils, not a line of any feature could be traced, and yet the tint of flesh shone dimly behind the silken bands of crape. He nodded.

The veils did not move.

"Fortune favors the brave, but rarely the foolish."

There was no response, but the small shoe of the woman nearest began to beat the floor ever so lightly. Hillard was chagrined.

Thereupon he bowed and sought another seat. The women hurried to the lobby. He would have given them no further thought had not the Italian with the scar appeared, eyed the retreating figures doubtfully and then started after them. That he did not know them Hillard was reasonably certain. He assumed that the Italian saw a possible flirtation. He rose quickly and followed.

The four departed from the casino and crossed toward the Hotel de Paris, the women in the lead. As yet they had not observed that they were being followed. The car stops at this turn. As the women came to a stand one of them saw the approaching men. Instantly she fled up the street. The other hesitated, then pursued her companion. Whatever doubts the Italian might have entertained, this flight dissipated then. He knew now—he knew! With a sharp cry of exultation he broke into a run. So did Hillard. People turned and stared, but none sought to intercept any of the runners. In Monte Carlo there are many strange scenes, and the knight errant often finds that his bump of caution has suddenly developed. And there were no police about; they were on the casino terraces or strolling through the gardens.

Past the park the quartet ran. Then came a stretch of darkness between one electric lamp and another. And then, as if whisked away by magic, the foremost woman disappeared. The other halted, breathless. She started again, but too late. The Italian caught her roughly and quickly tore aside the veil.

"Kitty Killigrew!" Hillard cried.

He sprang forward and grasped the Italian by the shoulders. The Italian struck out savagely, but Hillard seized said Hillard, pointing.

"Are you certain?" the Italian hissed.

"So certain that if you do not obey me I shall call the police."

"I should like nothing better," replied the Italian, with a coolness which dumfounded Hillard.

"Do you know these ladies?"

"Do you?" insolently.

"My knowing them does not matter. But it is any gentleman's concern when a man gives pursuit to a lady who does not wish to meet him."

"A lady? Grace of Mary, that is droll!"

Hillard released the imprisoned arm. There was a patent raillery, a quizzical insolence which convinced Hillard that the Italian had not given chase out of an idle purpose.

"We shall meet again," the Italian said softly.

"I hope not," replied Hillard frankly. "However, you may find me at the Hotel de Londres."

The Italian laughed again. "You understand the language well," debatingly.

"And the people too." Hillard had no desire to pass the time of day with his opponent.

"Well, I have said that we shall meet again, and it must be so."

"And your hat, as well as mine, is still in the casino. The night is cold."

The Italian permitted his glance to wander over Hillard critically. He swung round on his heel and walked rapidly down the street. Hillard turned to reassure Kitty. Kitty had vanished!

CHAPTER XIII.

MANY NAPOLEONS.

MERRIHEW sighed with perfect content. The pretty woman sitting opposite smiled at him tenderly, and he smiled back abstractedly, as a man sometimes will when his mind tries to gather in comprehensively a thought and a picture which are totally different. Before him in neat little lustrous stacks stood 7,000 francs in gold, 250 effigies of "Napoleon the Little"—7,000 francs, $1,400, more than half the sum of his letter of credit!

He counted off ten coins and placed them on the second dozen. The ball rolled into No. 23. He leaned back again with a second sigh, and the pretty woman smiled a second smile, and the wooden rake pushed the beautiful gold over to him. He was playing a system, one bet in every three turns of the wheel in stakes of $40 and $80. To be sure, he lost now and then, but the next play he doubled and retrieved. Oh, the American Comic Opera company should be well taken care of! Two more bets and then he would pocket his winnings and go. He laid 40 francs on No. 26 and 400 on black, leaned upon his elbows and studied the pretty woman, who smiled. If she spoke English—he scribbled the question on a scrap of paper and pushed it across the table, blushing a little as he did so. She read it, or at least she tried to read it, and shook her head with the air of one deeply puzzled. He sighed again, reflecting that there might have been a pleasant adventure had he only understood French.

Twenty-six, black and even!

Merrihew slid back his chair and rose. He swept up the gold by the handful and poured it into his pockets, casually and unconcernedly, as if this was an everyday affair and of minor importance. But as a matter of fact his heart was beating fast, and there was a wild desire in his throat to yell with delight. Eighteen hundred dollars, 9,000 francs! A merry music they made in his pockets—jingle, jingle, jingle! And then he saw Hillard coming across the hall. Instantly he forced the joy from his face and eyes and dropped his chin in his collar. He became in that moment the picture of desolation.

"Is it all over?" asked Hillard gravely.

"All over!" monotonously.

"Come over to the cafe, then. I've something important to tell you."

"Found them?" with rousing interest.

"I shall tell you only when we get out of this place. Come."

Hillard put out a friendly hand.

"I am sorry, boy. I wanted you to win something. Cheer up! We'll shake the dust of this place in the morning."

"Oh, for a vacant lot and a good old whooper-up! Feel!" cried Merrihew, touching his side pockets.

"What is it?" asked Hillard.

"What is it? It is 450 napoleons!"

"What?" sharply, even doubtfully.

"That's what! Eighteen hundred dollars! My system will have no funeral tonight."

He caught Hillard by the sleeve and fairly ran him over to the cafe.

"Nearly two thousand!" murmured Hillard. "Well, of all the luck!"

"It does seem too good to be true. I say, what's the matter with your cravat?"

Hillard looked down at the fluttering end and reknotted it carelessly.

"I saw Kitty tonight," he said.

To Merrihew it seemed that all the clatter about him had died away suddenly. He breathed deeply. "Where is she?"

"I'll explain what has happened."

Merrihew listened eagerly.

"And why did you bother about the Italian?" he interrupted. "Why didn't you hold on to Kitty?"

"I confess it was stupid of me, but the gentleman with the scar was an unknown quantity. Besides, why should Kitty run away from me of all persons? And why, when I spoke to them in the casino, did they ignore me completely?"

"It's your confounded prima donna. She's at the bottom of all this, take

Despondency over his wife's poor health and worry over business troubles caused him to commit the rash act.

Mr. Hawkins was formerly editor of the Tecumseh News for several years. The American Press and the Western Publisher printed a half tone picture of the editor's and among them we recognized Mr. Hawkins.

"Uncle Charley" and City Life.

The one great drawback of city life, in the opinion of "Uncle Charley" Spafford, is that things are too handy. "Uncle Charley," who is now 77 years old, has come from his summer home at Manitou Beach, on Devil's lake, to spend the winter with friends and relatives in Michigan's metropolis, and but for this one drawback he thinks he would like city life for a change.

"Why, all you've got to do when you want a drink of water is to turn on a faucet," says "Uncle Charley." "When you want to start a fire, you just turn a little handle, scratch a match, and there you are. And to turn on the lights you just push a button in the wall. Out where I've always lived we have to pump our water out of a well and split wood when we want to build a fire, and what I am afraid of is that these new fangled ways will make me lazy."

"Uncle Charlie" is a printer of the old schools, and worked at the trade 55 years ago. He ran a newspaper in Tecumseh with his brother, George. His publication was originally known as the Tecumseh Herald, and later the Tecumseh Chieftain. He entered his career as a printer in the days of the old Washington hand press and from that crude form he has seen the printing press develop into one of the most wonderful machines of the age.

Mr. Spafford recalls that in 1838 his father, whose name was also Charles Spafford, walked from Tecumseh to Detroit, when the only road was an Indian trail through the woods. In those days Detroit was the state's capital and the elder Spafford came here to attend the session of the legislature as representative from his district. The trip took two days and he shot a wild cat enroute.

"Uncle Charlie" is making his headquarters, during his stay in the city with his niece, Mrs. Anna Wray, in the Los Angeles apartments, No. 124 Park street. He has planned to spend the entire winter here, but the first fine day in spring will find "Uncle Charlie" back at Manitou Beach, where, from sunrise to sunset, no matter what the weather, you will see him out in his row boat, fishing. But you will never catch "Uncle Charlie" out on Sunday. That is strictly against his principles.—Detroit Times.

Charles Spafford never owned the Tecumseh Herald, but for many years was an employe at this office. At one time he and his brother George owned the Raisin Valley Record. We are always glad to hear any news from "Uncle Charlie" and his view of city life is unique.

HARRY SHERRARD

DIES IN DETROIT NOV. 13th.

Famous Greek Scholar and Graduate from Tecumseh High School.

The notice of Harry Sherrard's death came as a great shock to his many friends in Tecumseh, although he has been in ill health for the past eight years.

Although confined to his bed, he showed great strength of character and did much toward the training and education of his three children. He was a man who was very fond of his friends and kept in constant communication with them during his illness.

He was a graduate of the Tecumseh high school, also the U. of M. college, graduating from both places with high honors. His early life was spent in this village and he leaves a host of friends in Tecumseh to mourn his death.

From 1882 to 1887 he was a teacher of classical languages in the Detroit high school. From '97 to '99, he was head of the classical department in the Detroit Central. In '99 he joined in the founding of the Detroit University school of which he was principle until the time of his death.

He leaves a wife, who was formerly Miss Charlotte Berry and three children and two sisters, Eva and Margaret to mourn their loss.

Students at the Detroit Central High school during the eighties and nineties remember well Prof. Henry Gray Sherrard, the tall, angular, sandy man whose task it was to force Latin and Greek grammar into young Detroit minds and afterwards to regale them pleasantly in the eternal fields of classic literature.

They recall vividly how powerfully he labored with great zest of co-operation for a responsive student, with ferocious sarcasm and withering wit for idlers and dallers at the Pierian spring. Recollections of "Sherry" have a singular freshness after the years, and the news of his death after eight years of disablement will be a real grief to many busy men and women in the active world, who formerly blundered or triumphed in his classes.

Mr. Sherrard has had rough schooling himself. He came by rough ascents and with peril of health to that intimate knowledge and continual pleasant intercourse with the learned languages which made him remarkable even among teachers.

Doubtless he never guessed the extent of his own influence. But no man can throw his whole personality into such work as teaching without making a lasting impression. He spared no grind for himself, and wore out his fiber with work. It might have comforted him to know, as the shadows fell, that he has never been forgotten, and never will be, by those who owe to him the great initiation into the classic languages, with all it means to mind, and heart, and memory.—Detroit Journal.

Fatal Accident.

JAMES WELCH DROWNED IN ADDISON MILL POND.

Five Children Made Orphans by His Death.

James Welch, a well known resident of Addison, was drowned in the Addison mill pond Friday evening between 6:30 and 7 o'clock. His body was not recovered until 10:30 that evening.

Mr. Welch left his home for Addison about 5 o'clock and intended to drive to the home of Miss Nickloy who does his washing for him. As dearly as can be learned he reached Addison village about 6 o'clock and was seen driving to the home of Miss Nickloy at that time. She lives near the depot and before Welch reached the house he turned around and drove back.

It had grown quite dark in the meantime and it seems Mr. Welch drove around the road bordering the pond. The general opinion of the people is that Welch became confused in the darkness and got on the wrong road.

On the edge of the mill pond were several tracks of the horse and buggy and at one place the horse was urged to enter the water but refused to. The place where the animal did enter the water the bank drops steeply and a depth of 20 feet is reached at once. The buggy was overturned and Mr. Welch caught under it.

Those living near the pond heard the splash in the water and ran to learn the cause.

The horse was uninjured. The pond was dragged and it was 10:30 before the body of the man was recovered.

He is survived by five children who are left orphans, their mother having died a few years ago. Their ages range from 2 to 18 years.

Coroner Stevens was called from Tecumseh for the inquest. The verdict was that Mr. Welch met his death by accidental drowning.

FORCED INTO EXILE.

Wm. Upchurch of Glen Oak, Okla. was an exile from home. Mountain air, he thought, would cure a frightful lung-racking cough that had defied all remedies for two years. After six months he returned, death dogging his steps. "Then I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery," he writes, "and after taking six bottles I am as well as ever." It saves thousands yearly from desperate lung diseases. Infallible for Coughs and Colds, it dispels Hoarseness and Sore Throat. Cures Grip, Bronchitis, Hemorrhages, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough. 50c and $1.00, trial bottle free, guaranteed by C. A. Wright & Son.

The great restorative for men and women, produces strength and vitality, builds up the system and renews the normal vigor. For sale by druggists or by mail, $1.00 per box, 6 boxes for $5.00. For sale by C. A. Wright & Son.

That Masonic Spread

SPLENDID LINE-UP OF TECUMSEH LODGE 69, F. & A. M.

The Opossum Seemed to be the Prime Feature and Occupied the Minds of All Present.

On Friday night last a Special Communication was held at the Masonic Temple in Tecumseh in which the 3rd degree was conferred upon a worthy candidate in a very impressive manner. The candidate being safely landed, speeches were called for by the W. M., and not a few responded in bright and instructive terms, such as all true Masons give undivided attention.

It being nowwell into the night, and it being discovered that the brothers were becoming weary from fasting, speeches were called off and a patrol was sent out to investigate conditions in the kitchen. Prompt reports came in that all was ready and in a twinkling, all hands were martialed for the feast.

In the center of the spacious dining room upon a raised platform stood Mr. Opossum in all his fullness, cooked to a crisp-brown, done to a finish, and looked good enough to tempt any Master Mason. Oh, he was a "Mammoth!"

All quiet, the desection began. Past Master A. S. VanWinkle was called upon to grasp the head, Sec. Dickinson took a Master's grip upon the tail, while W. M. Nyland, with cleaver and knife, proceeded to carve up Mr. Opossum in delicate and appetising slices.

If you could have witnessed the look on Look's face, you would be inclined to the opinion that there wouldn't be enough opossum to go round.

Visiting brothers from adjacent lodges were present and expressed themselves in a way that left no doubt as to their complete satisfaction and enjoyment of the evening.

Plates were laid to the tune of about 175. The tables were heavily laden and fully clothed with all the good things, but supper over, there was nothing in sight except the tail of poor old opossum to which Dickinson still clung with the Master's grip.

WHAT IS HYOMEI?

You Have Heark About the Catarrh Cure O. A. Wright Guarantees.

HYOMEI is a wonderful antiseptic so powerful that it promptly destroys germ life, yet its action on the mucous membrane is extremely soothing and healing. It relieves catarrh in five minutes; it cures in a few weeks or money back.

It is made chiefly of eucalyptus and eucalyptol taken from the eucalyptus forests of inland Australia. The medical profession knows that eucalyptus is an absolutely certain germ destroyer and with the active principles of eucalyptus as a base Hyomei is made more efficient, pleasant and quick acting by the addition of Thymol, an antiseptic and disinfectant largely employed in the Listerian System. Guaiacol and other important medicinal agents are also included in the Hyomei formula, which, without a doubt is the greatest destroyer of catarrh germs the world has ever known.

Hyomei is a powerful, penetrating antiseptic that is pleasant to use. It does not contain a particle of cocaine, opium or any habit-forming or injurious drug.

No dosing the stomach when you use Hyomei. Just breathe it in through the small inhaler that comes with each outfit. Sold by leading druggists everywhere and in Tecumseh by C. A. Wright & Son. $1.00 for complete outfit.

CONFIRMED PROOF.

Residents of Tecumseh Cannot Doubt What Has been Twice Proved.

In gratitude for complete relief from aches and pains of bad backs from distressing kidney ills thousands have publicly recommended Doan's Kidney Pills. Residents of Tecumseh, who so testified years ago, now say their cures were permanent. This testimony doubly proves the worth of Doan's Kidney Pills to Tecumseh Kidney sufferers.

Mrs. Charles Stevenson, Wyandotte and Pottawatamie Sts., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "Sharp, shooting pains across the small of my back were the first symptoms of kidney trouble in my case: My kidneys gradually became disordered and I was very miserable. Being advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills, I did so and the pains disappeared. For years I had also been distressed by gravel but Doan's Kidney Pills removed this trouble and I have not been bothered since."

Above statement was given on Dec. 10, 1906, and on Dec. 9, 1908, Mrs. Stevenson confirmed it in detail adding that her cure had been permanent. For Sale by all Dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, Sole Agents for the United States.

Mi-o-na cures dyspepsia. There isn't any doubt about it. Thousands of just such testimonials as the above from every city and town in America prove it. FOOTBALL HAS NEW VICTIM

Virginia's Halfback, Christian, Dies of Injuries.

OPERATION FAILS TO AID HIM

Hurt In Game With Georgetown, He Dies From Concussion of Brain. Georgetown University Cancels All Future Games—Students Declare Police Acted Brutal.

Washington, Nov. 15.—Archer Christian of Richmond, Va., halfback of the University of Virginia football team, who was injured in Saturday's game with Georgetown university, died at 3:40 o'clock Sunday morning in the Georgetown university hospital.

Dr. S. H. Watt, professor of surgery at the University of Virginia, and Dr. Harvey Cushing, specialist from Johns Hopkins university hospital, in Baltimore, performed an operation on young Christian. There was a faint hope that the operation would save his life, but he sank rapidly and was dead in less than five hours after being taken from the operating table. The physicians found that Christian was suffering from concussion of the brain, and the operation was performed to remove the pressure.

As a result of the death the authorities of Georgetown university directed the cancellation of all Georgetown's football engagements.

Students of Georgetown and Virginia who witnessed the injury to Christian assert that the police acted in a brutal manner. As a result of this criticism, superintendent of the police has ordered an investigation.

One complaint is that when Deputy Coroner Glazebrook requested a policeman to get a stretcher on which to place Christian, the policeman refused.

BEAT PENNSY AT LAST.

Michigan Takes Saturday's Game to Tune of 12 to 6.

Philadelphia, Nov. 15.—It has been a long time coming, but it came Saturday, that victory over Pennsylvania. In just six minutes Yost's team accomplished what it previously had been trying to accomplish for four long years. In this brief space, two touchdowns and as many goals were chalked up to the credit of the Wolverines, and the Red and Blue were whipped. The Quakers managed to make up part of the handicap before the end of the first half, but one touchdown was their limit, and the timers' whistles ended the strife with the score 12 to 6.

MADIGSOHN.

Playing his first year in U. of M. football, Magidsohn is one of the most sensational halfbacks since the days of Heston. He scored both of Michigan's touchdown in the Pennsylvania-Michigan game, at Philadelphia, Saturday.

Michigan played the sort of game that made Yost's reputation as a coach. As bad as were the Wolverines the Saturday a week ago, just so good were they this time.

A fumble, some good line plays, two trick maneuvers and the Red and Blue trailed in the dust. Fight as they might, the Philadelphians could not overcome that lead.

It was Magidsohn, who is playing his first year on the team, who scored both of Michigan's touchdowns, and it is needless to say he was the hero of the day.

WARREN TOPPAN, Lynn, Mass.,

Cured of severe compound cold and cough by

Vinol

"From Dec. 20, '08, to March 1, '09, I had three bad colds, one on top of the other. I got so weak I could hardly get around. Nothing seemed to help me until I began to take Vinol. The change was magic. Three bottles completely fixed that compound cold and stopped the terrible cough—and what surprises me most, at the same time it cured me of a severe stomach trouble that has bothered me for 20 years. Vinol is certainly a wonderful medicine."

Mr. Toppan is one of Lynn's most prominent and highly respected merchants, whose word is as good as his bond.

The reason Vinol is so successful in such cases is because it contains the two most world-famed tonics—the medicinal, strength-giving, body-building elements of Cod Liver Oil and Tonic Iron.

GIVES RAILWAY JOLT.

Judge Contends It Has No Right In Streets of Kalamazoo.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Nov. 15.—The Michigan United railways cannot operate interurban cars inside of the city of Kalamazoo, according to a decision of Judge Knappen in the circuit court here. The court not only denied the motion of the Michigan United Railways company to quash a temporary injunction granted several days ago, forbidding the company to run the interurban cars into the city, but made the injunction permanent.

The court contends in his opinion that the company never acquired the right, by franchise or otherwise, to run cars into Kalamazoo. The company has been running these cars into the city for ten years.

An Indigestion Remedy Free

Many people who are otherwise healthy suffer from indigestion, or dyspepsia. When you consider that the stomach and allied digestive organs are the most important organs of the body, it would seem that a disorder there is to be taken very seriously.

Dyspeptics cannot eat the things they like; food sours in the stomach; then chronic constipation begins, or, as is often the case, you have been constipated all along, and the stools are forced and irregular.

But there is no use letting indigestion go until it becomes chronic and undermines your health. It is good advice to suggest to you that you go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, the wonderful cure for stomach, liver and bowel troubles. That is what C. Fowler, of Carson City, Mich., did and he is well today. Others who did the same and are cured are Ida A. Fortune, of Grand Junction, Tenn., B. F. Thompson, of Shenandoah, Ia., who actually considers that it saved his life. You can obtain a 50-cent or $1 bottle of the druggist, and, taken according to directions, it will probably be all you need. It is a liquid, acts gently, never gripes, and besides the laxative effect, contains exceptional tonic properties which tone the stomach, and that is what is especially needed in indigestion.

All sufferers from indigestion who have never used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can obtain a free test bottle by writing the doctor. It will be sent direct to your home without any charge. In this way thousands have proven to their own satisfaction Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the very remedy they needed to cure indigestion. When once you use this grand remedy you will throw violent cathartics, tablets, salts, etc., away.

If there is anything about your ailment that you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 500 Caldwell bldg., Monticello, Ill.

Why He Was Deaf.

Farmer (louder)—I tell ye, it's no' a horse, but a bottle o' whisky, I want.

Farmer—Gang awa' wi' yo an' yer beasts!

The Order of the Bath.

The first Knights of the Bath made according to the ancient forms were at the coronation of Charles II., when various rites and ceremonies, one of which was bathing, were enforced.

According to Froissart, the court barber prepared a bath, and the candidate for membership in the order, having been undressed by his esquires, was thereupon placed in the bath, his clothes and collars being the perquisites of the barber. He was then removed from the water to the words "May this be an honorable bath to you" and was placed in a plain bed quite wet and naked to dry. As soon as he was quite dry he was removed from the bed, dressed in new and rich apparel and conducted by his sponsors to the chapel, where he offered a taper to the honor of God and a penny piece to the honor of the king. Then he went to the monarch and, kneeling before him, received from the royal sword a tap on the shoulder, the king exclaiming, "Arise, Sir ——," and then embraced him, saying, "Be thou a good knight, and true."—London Strand Magazine.

England's Patron Saint.

The story of England's patron saint is surrounded by a mixture of truth and fable which defies definite sifting. He is generally believed to have been born at Lydia, but brought up in Cappadocia, and suffered martyrdom in the reign of Diocletian, A. D. 303. The legend of his conflict with the dragon may have arisen from a symbolical or allegorical representation of his contest with the pagan persecutors. When our crusaders went to the east in 1096 they found St. George elevated to the rank of warrior saint, with the title of the "victorious," and as they believed that they were indebted to him for aid in the siege of Antioch they adopted him as the patron of soldiers. Edward III. was thus led to make him patron of the Order of the Garter, and so gradually St. George became the tutelary saint of England.—London Mail.

Eve and the Apple.

Princess Duleep Singh at a dinner in New York said that she found the American woman a marvel of beauty and the American man a model of good looks and kindness.

"The American man," said the charming princess, "is rightly held up to the world as the pattern husband. In Europe they have a saying about Eve and the apple which shows how wretched a failure the European husband is. This saying is unknown in America, I am sure. It would have no point, no application, here in the land of pattern husbands. The saying is this: "The evil one didn't give the apple to the man, but to the woman, because the evil one knew well that the man would eat it all himself, but the woman would go halves.'"

Aisle of the Car in a Railroad Wreck.

A veteran railroad man gave a piece of valuable advice not long ago.

"If you ever get into a wreck," he said, "and have time to follow out this suggestion remember this: Always stand in the aisle. Most of the injuries that are suffered occur because the victim is crushed between the seats. If you are in the aisle you may be thrown forward and bruised a little, but there is much less chance of receiving serious hurts. It isn't always possible to get out of your seat before the crash comes, but if it is follow that advice."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A Use For Arithmetic.

"My boy," said the head of the firm, "I've noticed that you have a great head for figures, although you don't seem to be able to spell or write at all. How does it happen?"

"I studied 'rithmetic," replied the office boy, "'cause I wanted to know how to figure de battin' averages."—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Myth Chaser.

"What makes your youngest son so eager for athletics?"

"Filial admiration," answered the worried looking mother. "He believes all the stories his father tells about the wonderful things he did when he was a boy and is trying to equal the record."—Washington Star.

SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS MEET

State Association In Session at Saginaw.

Saginaw, Mich., Nov. 18.—The Michigan Sunday School association, about 1,000 strong, convened here Wednesday afternoon for a three-day convention. President J. H. Grant of Manistee presided.

A mixed chorus of nearly 1,000 voices completely filled the huge auditorium stage and was directed by Tuller and Meredith, the New York evangelists. Elementary work, bible study and practical missionary work in the Sunday schools occupied the attention of the delegates in the afternoon, the speakers being Mrs. Eva Washburn, A. L. Parker of Detroit and William A. Brown of Chicago.

The executive committee held a meeting, its most important action being a recommendation that the state association employ a general secretary at once, which means that the forward movement will be taken up in Michigan.

FEUD CAUSES TWO DEATHS.

Wealthy Planter and His Daughter Are Killed.

Floyd, La., Nov. 18.—Clarence Compton, a wealthy planter, and his twelve-year-old daughter are dead as the result of a feud encounter, and Sylvester and Albert Owens, sons of a prominent clergyman, are in jail charged with the crime.

Albert Owens accused Compton of having said he had been forced to support Mrs. Owen's entire family since marrying her. Compton refused to retract, and the brothers opened fire on him, emptying two shotguns and four revolvers. The daughter, who was near her father, fell dead at the first shot, and Mrs. Compton had a narrow escape.

FORM PLANS TO PROSECUTE

MacVeagh and Wickersham Confer in Washington.

GOING AFTER SUGAR FRAUDS

Understood New Evidence Has Been Gathered Against Alleged Grafters in New York—President Commutes Sentence of Physical Culturist McFadden.

Washington, Nov. 18.—Prior to leaving Washington, Wednesday, for Kansas City, Mo., where he is to make a speech, Attorney General Wickersham had a conference with Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh in regard to the prosecution of alleged sugar frauds and the other frauds against the customs revenue which are being brought to light in the New York custom house.

MacVeagh Was Happy.

The conversation between the secretary of the treasury and the attorney general had to do with evidence which the treasury department is furnishing to the department of justice and did not concern the pending suit of the government against the American Sugar Refining company for alleged violation of the federal anti-trust law. While officials having knowledge of what was talked over by Mr. MacVeagh and Mr. Wickersham were exceedingly reticent, it was gathered that new evidence has been procured against alleged grafters and dishonest employes of the New York custom house, to be used as a basis for further criminal prosecutions against criminals. Mr. MacVeagh was happy when he returned to the treasury department after his interview with the attorney general. He was exceedingly cautious, however, in replying to questions as to what had taken place.

Washington, Nov. 18.—The so-called Ballinger-Pinchot controversy, which involves diverse views of Secretary of the Interior Ballinger and Forester Pinchot over the methods to be employed in conserving water power sites embraced in public lands, has broken out afresh in spots. That is to say, it is asserted in newspaper publications that Mr. Pinchot had delivered an ultimatum to President Taft that the government service was too small to hold Mr. Ballinger and Mr. Pinchot at the same time, and the president had directed Attorney General Wickersham to make a new investigation of Mr. Ballinger's alleged interest in the Cunningham claims to coal lands in Alaska.

Mr. Pinchot gave out a denial in which, incidentally, he made a remark that some think unkind about the story that a "conspiracy" to nominate Roosevelt in 1912 had been formed by strong Roosevelt supporters, Mr. Pinchot among them. This is the denial:

"The story that I have issued an ultimatum to the president, like the recent 'conspiracy' story, is merely a silly fabrication. Of course I have done nothing of the kind, nor anything that could be twisted into that meaning. The president was good enough to express his satisfaction with my work, and I am going ahead with it."

The story that President Taft had directed his attorney general to investigate Mr. Ballinger's conduct in connection with the Cunningham claims was full of details. All that it lacks is any sort of confirmation.

Washington, Nov. 18.—President Taft has exercised executive clemency in a number of cases. In some, pardons were issued and in others commutation of sentence allowed. In every case President Taft followed the recommendations of Attorney General Wickersham.

McFadden Escapes Prison.

Bernard MacFadden, editor of a magazine devoted to physical culture, who was convicted on a charge of sending "non-mailable" printed matter through the mails and sentenced, on Nov. 11, 1907, by United States District Judge Lanning, at Trenton, N. J., to two years in prison and to pay a fine of $2,000, had his sentence commuted by President Taft, and on the payment of the fine the prison sentence will be waived. MacFadden's offenses consisted in publishing an article in the nature of a warning to young men against immoral practices.

Attorney General Wickersham finds that the advice and deductions in the article were wholesome, but that some of the story was decidedly improper reading and calculated to promote evil habits rather than to retard them.

MacFadden has never gone to prison, although the sentence was imposed about two years ago.

OFFICIALS ROW AT THE MINE

New Troubles Grow Out of Cherry Mine Disaster.

NO RESCUES ARE YET MADE

Disorder Feared If Efforts to Take Out Men Are Abandoned—Experts Confident Every One Is Dead Within—Angry and Despairing Crowds Gather About Shaft and Threaten.

Cherry, Ill., Nov. 18.—Harangues have taken place at the main shaft that leads to the tomb of the entrapped miners. Mine owners clashed with the state over the production of evidence to show the child labor law was violated by the coal company. Strong differences arose in the conference of experts in charge of the situation. And every faint hope for the rescue of any of the hundreds of men in the burning mine was killed by the experts.

Every man in the mine must die unless rescued today. If a last attempt to reach the men, which will be made today, fails, as the two previous attempts have, the mine will be sealed with concrete, and many weeks or months may pass before it will be opened. The two companies of militia are preparing for trouble. Disorder is feared if efforts to take out the men are abandoned or fail. The conference of experts announced that its members are certain every man in the mine is dead. When the families and friends hear this incendiary speeches may drive them to violent expression of the threats and charges voiced here all day. Angry and despairing women gathered in crowds around the shaft, and lynching and crucifixion were advocated. Incited by women, half crazed by the delays and failures of the rescue work, a shouting, cursing crowd vowed vengeance for the men below.

No attempt has been made to go into the mine the past two days. For six hours the score of experts argued for their different ways of taking out the bodies. They split on the question of again opening the main shaft, the action that caused the almost extinguished fire to rage anew. Every phase of the situation was discussed, and it was agreed without dissent that the men in the mine are all dead and that present efforts are only to take out the bodies before all become unrecognizable.

This conference resulted in a decision to make the exploring descent in preparation for the final attempt to reach the men this afternoon.

BIRD M'GUIRE DIVORCED.

"Mrs. Oklahoma" McGuire Is Granted Decree.

Guthrie, Okla., Nov. 18.—Mrs. Anna Mattingly McGuire was late last evening granted a divorce from Bird Segle McGuire, member of congress from Oklahoma for seven years and one of the most prominent Republicans in the southwest. McGuire did not appear in court nor oppose the decree, which becomes absolute in six months on the ground of incompatibility. Both maintain no other reasons exist.

Mrs. McGuire, who designed her own wearing apparel, was always known while there as the "best dressed woman in Washington city," where she was also known as "Mrs. Oklahoma," a name given her by Mrs. George B. Cortelyou, following the inauguration of Oklahoma into statehood.

Suffragette Gets Hard Labor.

Bristol, Nov. 18.—Ellen Pitman, a suffragette, is the first martyr to the cause to be sentenced to hard labor. She was arraigned in the magistrate's court on a charge of throwing a stone through a window of the post office. She was sentenced to two months' imprisonment at hard labor.

Heavy Rains in Tropics.

New York, Nov. 18.—Captain Krause of the steamship Prince August Wilhelm, which has arrived from Jamaica, reports having encountered the tail end of the hurricane. From Colon to Kingston it rained so hard that it was impossible to take any observations. In Kingston at the time he left eighty inches of rain had fallen.

Lipton Will Challenge.

New York, Nov. 18.—Sir Thomas Lipton, just before his steamship sailed, Wednesday, said: "You may state positively for me, without any qualification, that I shall challenge for the America's cup for the fourth time. I will challenge for a race to be sailed in 1911."

MISSING MAN'S BODY FOUND

Evidence of Murder Apparent At Once.

EDWARD SOLOMAN KILLED

Remains of Citizen of Ford, Suburb of Detroit, Discovered In River Six Weeks Following His Disappearance—Believed He Was Struck Down by Robbers.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 18.—Six weeks after his mysterious disappearance, Oct. 11, the body of Edward Soloman of Ford, a suburb, has been found in the west channel of the Detroit river, off Grosse Ile.

Murder was evident at once. Dr. Frank W. Lamb of Trenton, who conducted a postmortem, and Justice George D. Jones, who took charge of the body, are both confident that the man was beaten until unconscious and thrown in the river while he was alive.

The body was discovered by a boy, the son of E. J. Bell. The lad saw a pair of shoes sticking up among the reeds near the shore.

He mentioned the circumstance to his father. The father notified Marshal Winnie of Trenton.

The marshal rowed across the river and found the body where the boy had indicated.

The theory of the officials is that men who knew that Oct. 11 was Soloman's payday lay in wait for him and assailed him. Soloman was employed as night conductor on the Wyandotte terminal line. He had slept all that day, and early in the evening he arose and told his wife he was going to get his pay.

He was informed on his arrival at the office that a Ford saloon keeper had garnisheed his wages, so he went away without them. He went to the shanty, near the Michigan Alkali company's plant, where he kept his working effects, but left there soon and walked toward the dock nearby.

None of his friends or fellow-workers ever saw him again.

OFF FOR MINNEAPOLIS.

Michigan Team Leaves Today to Play Minnesota.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 18.—Over 100 Michigan rooters are sure to follow Yost and his tribe to Minneapolis. They will leave this afternoon and arrive in the Flour City Friday.

The scrubs will also go. Eighteen of the men who have been kicked and bounced around by the 'varsity will be taken on the long trip this year.

STEAMER ROME BURNS.

Crew Awakened Just In Time to Escape Flames.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Nov. 18.—The steamer Rome, a wooden vessel, owned by J. W. Norcross of Toronto, burned to the water's edge while lying at Lime island rock, in St. Mary's river, about thirty miles below the Canadian Soo, on the American shore.

The fire started below decks, in the bow. The crew were awakened only in time to escape with their lives.

Take Railroad Case to Detroit.

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 18.—Because there are about two carloads, more or less, of documents which must be introduced as evidence, and that they would be damaged in the handling and transportation to this city, the suit brought by the state in its effort to collect back taxes from the Michigan Central railroad will be tried in Detroit. The case will probably be taken up there in the federal building Thursday morning.

Teacher Says He Was Attacked.

Bay City, Mich., Nov. 18.—Mrs. and Mrs. Jacob Mallory of Essexville are under arrest charged with assault and battery on F. L. Reed, principal of the school there. Reed, who is a small man, says that when the Mallorys' daughter, Gladys, refused to obey him he slapped her. The girl told her parents, and that evening, when Reed was passing the house, the man and woman attacked him, he says.

Alleged He Tried to Wreck Train.

Washington, Nov. 18.—Dominic Falaco, an Italian, twenty-four years old, employed as a track walker by the Union Station Terminal company here, has been arrested on the charge of having attempted to wreck the southwestern limited train of the Southern railway, which runs from New Orleans to New York. The police say he has confessed.

OUR BOY IN TEXAS

HE IS SPENDING SOME TIME AMONG THE PINES.

His Letters are Always Interesting and Will be Much Enjoyed by Our Readers.

Soda, Texas, Nov. 12, 09.

Dear Friend:

A few more lines from the tall timber and then I am done, as I am about to change location again.

The weather here at present is delightful. No frosts, but just a little cool, morning breeze, and just enough crispness in the air to remind us that our old friend "Jack" has left Medicine Hat, and will arrive here about Christmas time.

The days are quite warm, but there is a difference between the sultry heat of Michigan and this Gulf tempered sunshine. The rays of "Old Sol" are sometimes beastly hot, but one can always get air to breathe and a moment in the shade, brings instant relief and the sun always shines. I have not seen one whole cloudy day since coming here, but Jupiter Pluvius visits us occasionally, cooling the air and giving new life to all vegetation.

This year has been unusually hot and dry for Texas, necessitating the transfer of live stock to favored sections, even to Oklahoma or any place that had water and grass.

Corn, cotton and other staples did not make a full crop, but brought higher prices, so that the farmers did not suffer very much.

Bankers of the state say that the Southern farmers have more money in bank now than in any previous year.

Well, he earns it, and deserves to be well paid, although his methods of tilling the soil are very peculiar. Nearly all his work of breaking and cultivation is done with a buster, and small plow. No great variety of harrows, cultivators or small tools. He plows the land for a crop and continues to plow occasionally, but only occasionally, until nearly harvest time. But he lets it lay too long untouched after a rain, allowing the water to evaporate, the weeds to grow, and shutting off the supply of nitrogen from the plants.

Nitrogen in itself, and confined, is not a plant food, but the cultivation of the soil allows the nitrogen in the air to mix with the elements of the soil, thus forming a compound which is plant food. It also conserves the water supply in the subsoil. Am I right, farmer friends?

The reason for so much once tilled land, now lying idle, is, that the farmer has had perhaps a succession of lean, dry years, the wevil pest, or low prices, has given it up in complete discouragement.

I have walked over land which raised fine crops thirty years ago, but is now covered with a heavy growth of yellow pine, white oak, ash and gum. In fifteen more years, this timber will be marketable, but wouldn't it have been more profitable to have kept the land in cultivation?

The owner of it replies in the negative, for the weevil pest destroyed the corn and cotton, and he didn't know how to raise other profitable crops.

There seems to be a greater variety of destroying insects here than in the north, and almost impossible to eradicate them. But perhaps some town man, with progressive ideas, a little money and a desire for the simple life, gets one of these abandoned farms, he taps a large spring, gets an artesian well, or puts in a pump, raises stock and diversified crops adapted to the soil, and makes a success.

This movement of people from town to the country, and, vice versa, is continually going on and will continue until the end of time. And the reason for this is—what? Grape-nuts, Postum says! "There's a reason."

My "opeenion" is, that we of Adam's clay, are not doing the work for which we are best adapted, but sometimes driven by necessity, take up that which first presents itself, burying our ideals, struggling up hill and always "kicking against the pricks."

Having a day off last week, I went down to Houston, the mecca of all good Texans, living within a radius of 200 miles, and on the invitation of a friend, went to hear the musical program at the convention of the United daughters of the Confederacy. The orchestra played some of those tenderly sweet, soul touching old songs such as were in vogue during the civil war, arranged in a medley called: "Echoes from the Old South." Each of the original confederate states being assigned one song which was sung by a young lady draped with the stars and bars, and who was a lineal descendant of a veteran from that state, and each young lady appearing in the order of that state's secession from the Union. It was very fine, inspiring and patriotic to the Southerners, but I enjoyed the music as I had not heard any except a jewsharp, since coming to the tall timber. Leaving the convention hall late in the afternoon, we boarded an elrctric car for Harrisburg to see the progress being made on the ship channel, the turning basin and the free wharves.

The ship channel will be an important factor in the up-building of Houston. It is a project for the deepening and widening of an old bayou, so that large boats from the Gulf can load cargoes direct from free wharves at Port Houston, making the city practically a seaport.

Galveston exacts a toll on all shipments from her docks, but Houston is building free wharves and expects to secure a large percentage of Galveston trade.

In the the vicinity of Harrisburg and down below toward Galveston, are many fine fruit and vegetable farms, yielding abundantly. The land is well adapted for it and there are plenty of small tracts being offered from $25 to $50 per acre, according to location. As it is near railroads and markets, I consider it a "good buy" for those who intend to make it a home. The raising of oranges, lemons, figs, plums and peaches, attracts those who can afford to wait two or three years for results. Quick money in return for investment, the truck gardening has the call.

Frosts are rare and there is plenty of rain-fall. That section is being built up very fast and will support a thickly settled population.

Having but one day to spare, I was obliged to return to Houston, and then to Soda, among the tall timber, the razorbacks, and the "hill-billies."

Although this is a small town, we manage to make some amusement for ourselves. Some of the curious people ask me some absurd questions about Michigan, and those who have never traveled farther than the county seat, seem to think that the No'th is all frozen up and that the people have ice-water in their veins instead of good red blood.

But, comparing the residents of country districts and small towns with those of the cities, the middle classes, the average of intelligence, morals and energy is about the same. For the cattle, hawgs and jays, are not all confined to the rural districts.

On starting this letter, I intended to give it the title of "Tall Tales" instead of Tall Timber, and to chronicle some of the tales, but have concluded to just mention the fact that I hear some remarkable stories of land, crops, weather, etc., from men who don't really mean any harm, but being direct lineal descendants from the original charter members of the Ananias club, they just can't help it, you know.

I have mentioned in this and other letters, a few facts about land and crops, as that seems to be my hobby at present, and we have more of it than any other commodity, but, as Tecumseh and vicinity is largely agricultural, that subject may interest a few. And, let me say further, that I am not employed by any railroad or land company to boost this country, but I was so impressed with everything in general that I had to tell someone.

My observations, as I write them, are not gleaned from Texas papers or from mere heresay, but based upon a knowledge and experience gained here and elsewhere, with my own eyes as a guide.

It is not my purpose to speak in disparaging words of my own town and county, for I know well that old Lenawee and Tecumseh is Heaven blessed in many ways, but I can see opportunities here for men of energy and brains, with a little money. Perhaps there are just as good chances at home, but when such farsighted, shrewd men as C. W. Post, W. J. Bryan, Pres. Taft and others, turn their attention to Texas, there must be something more substantial than pipe dreams.

Land boomers and cheap novelists have worn out many dictionaries in a search for words to describe the resources of this state, the vastness of its praries and plains, and the fertility of the soil. They have extolled the chivalry and the honor of the men, sentimentalized on the beauty and virtue of the women, and portrayed the picturesque cowboy and bad man.

Honor and virtue is held sacred and protected with a 44 Colt when necessary, but the people as a rule, do not pretend to possess more good traits than is consistent with everyday life. The women are passing fair. Nature does more for her in this climate than human skill, and she does not need Madam Merri's Beauty Hints, or Betty's Mo-u-rning Talks.

I can't even hope to find many Southern Michigan people here, for the conditions there are so good, that the alluring townsite prospectus and the "booster" literature fails to move them. But, when you get tired of the cold, damp climate of Michigan, when the wanderlust grips you hard, or when you yearn for the possession of something intangible and indefinite, then come to Texas.

The change of climate and environment may not alter your general character, for some old sage has said that habits make character; but you may have better health and naturally, better thoughts and feelings.

With the ordinary amount of intelligence and expenditure of energy, you can secure a good living, independence and freedom. Freedom from mill, factory or store, from lay-offs, strikes and hard times and from bossism, or any other ism which imposes conditions and surroundings that gall and wound more deeply as the years roll by. But don't be disappointed if everything is not handed to you on a silver tray. In addition to all these good things, you and I, or all of us, may yet find in Michigan or in Texas, that elusive something—shall we say happiness? Burns says:

"Catch the moments as they fly, and use them as ye ought, man. Believe me, happiness is shy, and comes not aye when sought, man." Auf wider sehen. Sincerely yours,

SAM JAY.

SALOONKEEPERS.

Must Be Citizens of the United States.

The man who conducts a saloon after May 1, 1910, must be a citizen of the United States, and those who have lived here five years continuously and want to continue in the business must file their petitions with the county clerk before next Wednesday else they will find it difficult to consummate their intentions in time to be entitled to license. There will be a hearing for applicants for citizenship, February 18, but the names must be posted at least 90 days prior to that time. There will be another hearing April 15, but between that date and May 1, when licenses are issued, the time will be too short for a compliance with the proceedings necessary to acquire a red card.

Printer Killed In Hillsdale.

Arthur McDaniels, a Hillsdale printer, was electrocuted in Hillsdale about 6 o'clock last Friday night. His wife was also a printer, and they were going home from work when he noticed that a street light was not burning, and said he would fix it. She walked on, and a moment after hearing him make a peculiar noise, went back and saw he was holding a chain and could not let go. Sparks were coming from his heels, and he had evidently got the full shock.

McDaniels was 35 years of age and his former home was at Howell. He had worked in offices at Lansing and Owosso, and came to Hillsdale a year ago.

ANN ARBOR DISTRICT CONVENTION HELD AT TECUMSEH.

Fifty Delegates Present.

The Ann Arbor District Epworth League Convention held in the M. E. church Tuesday and Wednesday was attended by nearly 50 delegates. The work of the convention was intensive rather than extensive and meant much to the delegates present. The program was instructive and inspirational while the contact made by young hearts intent upon the same great purpose of making their lives tell for the Kingdom of Jesus Christ cannot fail to waken enthusiasm and clearify vision as to what to work for ond what to expect

We were glad of the privilege of having those 50 young people in our homes; glad for the influence exerted over our young people: glad for the the strengthening of the district bond; glad to have heard the encouraging reports from the various fields and hopeful that our League will give expression to the benefits received by doing better and more effective work during the year to come.

The next convention will be held in Howell early next fall, probably the last week of August.

THAT REAL SHOW.

Culhane's Comedians, that opens a week's engagement at the Bradley Opera House starting Monday night, Nov. 22, is one of the standard stock companies who have earned the title "That Real Show" from the clever manner in which they present their plays. Every attehtion is given to the staging and costuming of each and euery production. The plays are new and up-to-date. The acting company is capable in every way and the vaudeville features are the best to be had. The costumes worn by the ladies of the company are a delight to the lady patrons, as Miss Margie Southwell is considered one of the best gowned women in the theatrical profession. Among the plays in their extensive Repertoire are such successes as Thelma, DuBarry, The Battle of Life, For a Girl's Love, Dora Thorne, Lena Rivers, etc. The bill selected for the opening is the comedy drama in 4 acts "Heart of the West," a play of to-day, full of heart interest and good clean comedy and in the hands of this capable company will be seen at its best. The vaudeville is in a class by itself. Clean and bright. No waits—feature specialties between each act making the performance a continuous one. Popular prices, 10c, 20c and 30c will prevail during the engagement. Seafs at Aldrich's bakery, Friday.

Don't forget to leave your poultry order for Thanksgiving with us—we have anything you want. All birds will be sent out Wednesday. Williamson Bros.

Concert

BY BEULAH HOME BOYS

At Presbyterian Church, Tuesday Evening.

Tuesday evening, Herman L. Swift and the Beulah Boys Quartette from the Beulah Home at Boyne City, packed the Presbyterian church at a concert and program of recitations. This was the second appearance of the boys in Tecumseh and the audience was delighted with the entertainment. At its close, Mr. Swift made an eloquent plea for his work and an offering of over $100 was taken.

This work is one of the finest benevolences of the state. Mr. Swift goes to the slums of the city and finds the homeless boys of the street. He takes them to his 160 acre farm near Boyne City, on the shores of Pine Lake, and after a few years of training works marvels in their lives, and later finds good homes for them. Since the work began 1700 boys have been received, and last year 200 were placed in good homes.

Mr. Swift now has two fine buildings for his work and is contemplating a third.

The quartette has given entertainments in most of the cities and larger towns of Michigan and on their second and third visits are always greeted by larger offerings and houses than on the first.

Clarence Sweet.

WELL KNOWN TECUMSEH MAN

Suicides at Amherstberg, Ont., Monday Night.

C. W. Sweet, aged 40, a Detroit blacksmith employed by the Dunbar & Sullivan Dredging Co. of Amherstburg, committed suicide some time during Monday night or Tuesday morning by slashing his throat from ear to ear with a sharp jackknife in the rear of the Presbyterian church manse at Amherstburg.

The body was found shortly after 7 o'clock Tuesday morning by Geo. Nattress, son of Rev. Thomas Nattress, lying in a pool of blood in the yard. Coroner Park, who was called, decided that no inquest was necessary. He ordered the remains shipped to Detroit.

Last Saturday night Sweet visited his home in Detroit and returned to Amherstburg on Sunday. He worked Monday all day He was heard to leave his room in the Anglo-American hotel, where he boarded, early in the evening, and it is thought he ended his life a short time later. No reason can be found why he took his life other than he had become despondent.—Detroit Journal.

Clarence Sweet was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sweet of Tecumseh and is well known here. His death comes as a great shock to his family and friends. Mr. Sweet was for many years was an employe in the car shops here.

Besides his parents he is survived by a widow, three sisters and one brother.

The remains were brought to Tecumseh last night and taken to the home of his parents where the funeral was held at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

CONFIRMED PROOF.

Residents of Tecumseh Cannot Doubt What Has been Twice Proved.

In gratitude for complete relief from aches and pains of bad backs—from distressing kidney ills—thousands have publicly recommended Doan's Kidney Pills. Residents of Tecumseh, who so testified years ago, now say their cures were permanent. This testimony doubly proves the worth of Doan's Kidney Pills to Tecumseh Kidney sufferers.

Mrs. Charles Stevenson, Wyandotte and Pottawatamie Sts., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "Sharp, shooting pains across the small of my back were the first symptoms of kidney trouble in my case. My kidneys gradually became disordered and I was very miserable. Being advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills, I did so and the pains disappeared. For years I had also been distressed by gravel but Doan's Kidney Pills removed this trouble and I have not been bothered since."

Above statement was given on Dec. 10, 1906, and on Dec. 9, 1908, Mrs. Stevenson confirmed it in detail adding that her cure had been permanent. For Sale by all Dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, Sole Agents for the United States.

Remember the name Doan's and take no other.

Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free. Sold by Druggists. Price, 75c. per bottle. Mi-o-na cures dyspepsia. There isn't any doubt about it. Thousands of just such testimonials as the above from every city and town in America prove it. Mi-o-na does not digest the food in your stomach, but in a few days it tones up the walls of the stomach and makes it strong enough to digest its own food. Washington, Nov. 18.—Representative Edwin Denby of Detroit has arrived in Washington to attend the sessions of the joint committee on revision of the laws, of which he was appointed a member by Speaker Cannon. He will remain in Washington until congress convenes.

"At the last session our committee revised the criminal code," said Mr. Denby, "and we are now prepared to revise the civil code. The laws of the United States have not been revised in thirty years, and we hope before long to agree upon a plan for a complete revision of the United States statutes."

BODY FOUND ON TRACK.

Was Former Tennis Champion Murdered in Chicago?

Chicago, Nov. 18.—Was Krigh Collins, former western tennis champion, murdered and his body placed on the street car tracks?

Mr. Collins' body was found at night on the street car tracks in Erie street, west of Franklin. It had been run over by a car, and the police concluded that death had been accidental.

Residents of the neighborhood reported, however, that they had heard two revolver shots about the time Collins was killed. This gave rise to a theory that Collins may have been dead before the street car passed over his body.

The body was in such a mangled state that the police were unable to determine whether Collins had received bullet wounds.

One theory of the police is that Collins may have shot himself, but the general belief is that if he died from bullet wounds they were inflicted by a hold-up man.

BELONGED TO SULTAN.

Young Turks Say Famous Hope Diamond Was Stolen.

New York, Nov. 18.—A letter to the Evening Post from its Constantinople correspondent says that the Hope diamond, which is reported to have been lost with its owner, Selim Habib, a Turkish merchant, in the sinking of the French steamship La Zyne, in the Rheo straits, was part of the plunder taken from the Yildiz Kiosk when the Young Turks compelled Abdul Hamid to leave his palace last spring.

The letter quotes a Turkish official as placing the total value of the loot at about $9,000,000 and adds that a special commission is at work investigating the robbery and attempting to trace the stolen jewels and other treasures.

TO WED JAP PRINCE.

Daughter of Lillian Russell Engaged to Emperor's Nephew.

Los Angeles, Nov. 18.—Not having a great fortune to pave the way to a European title, Miss Dorothy Russell, daughter of Lillian Russell, the actress, has decided to become an oriental princess. She has admitted that she is engaged to Aoki Sumutroi, (Prince Mutsuhito), a nephew of the emperor of Japan. She is waiting in Pasadena, accompanied by Miss M. A. Driscoll, who is to act as her chaperone, she says, until she becomes Princess Mutsuhito. The prince has sailed from Japan, and the wedding is expected to follow his arrival.

The romance, Miss Russell says, began when the prince was a student at Yale.

PREACHER HANGS SELF.

No Known Reason Why He Should Do So.

Maryville, Mo., Nov. 18.—The body of the Rev. J. C. Hathaway, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church, was found hanging from a railroad bridge in the northeast part of the city. No reason is known for his suicide, unless it was that he was dissatisfied with life.

It was known that he was ambitious, but was unable, because of the smallness of his congregation, to carry out plans that he had in mind. He left a widow and an aged father.

Slaves to the Servants.

"I am very tired," said the fashionably dressed woman. "I have been working dreadfully hard all day. Doing what? Why, seeing to my servants—working for them. Didn't you know that the more servants you have the harder you must work? Certainly I have to do all the shopping for my servants. I have to buy their uniforms, the caps and aprons of the maids, the clothing of the housekeeper, and have to see to the marketing, too—yes, and very often, in spite of the fact that I have a housekeeper. I must, or they will form a combine to rob me of everything I have. The housekeeper will get a rakeoff that will enable her to retire in a few years. Then perhaps it is I who must hunt a place as housekeeper for some one else. Oh, yes, if you want to keep your position as mistress of a household of servants you must keep hustling! You can't afford to let the grass grow under your feet to any great extent."—New York Press.

He Got a Hundred.

Sammy's mother talked to him long and earnestly about the poor marks he had been getting in his work at school. She painted in alluring colors the career of the little boy who studies his lessons and gains the love and respect of his teachers. She went even farther. She promised him that if he got good marks she would give him a whole dime all for his own. Sammy seemed impressed.

That afternoon he returned from school fairly dancing with joy.

"Oh, mother," he shouted, "I got a hundred!"

"Sammy!" cried his delighted mother. She hugged him and kissed him and petted him and—gave him the dime.

"And what did you get a hundred in?" she finally asked.

"In two things," replied Sammy without hesitation. "I got forty in readin' and sixty in spellin'."—Everybody's Magazine.

Trapping the Parson.

William Morris did not always get his jokes right end first. In a biography of her husband, Mrs. Edward Burne-Jones tells of the ease with which he reversed them.

A dinner gathering had all been asking conundrums.

"Who killed his brother Cain?" asked Burne-Jones.

Morris fell into the trap at once. "Abel!" he shouted.

Later in the day he came in laughing.

"I trapped the parson, by Jove!" he exclaimed. "I asked him, 'Who killed his brother Abel?'

"'Cain,' he said at once.

"'Ha?' I said. 'I knew you'd say that. Every one does.' I came away and left him puzzled enough, and I doubt if he's found out yet what the joke was."

Not Qualified.

Two men were getting warm over a simple difference of opinion.

They turned to the third man.

"Isn't a homemade strawberry shortcake better than a cherry pie?" demanded one of them.

"Isn't a homemade cherry pie better than any shortcake?" inquired the other.

The third man shook his head.

"I don't know," he said. "I board."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Leftover Material.

Barbara, aged four, had always been allowed to make small cakes out of the scraps of dough left from the morning's baking, so one morning after being sent to gather the eggs she came running in with a very tiny one and exclaimed: "Oh, mamma, see this little egg! It must be that's all the dough the hen had left!"—Delineator.

Liver Trouble Remedy Free

Any intelligent person can be his own doctor in the ordinary case of liver trouble, for the symptoms cannot be mistaken. If the white of the eye becomes yellowish, if the skin becomes sallow, if pimples and blotches appear, if the bowels do not move, if you have sick headache, if you are bilious, you may be sure that your liver is torpid or inactive.

The quickest and surest remedy yet found for the cure of liver trouble or any of its symptoms is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, the great herb laxative compound. This wonderful remedy is not only a laxative, but a tonic as well. It will start the flow of gastric juice, thereby soon enabling the liver to do its work naturally. A bottle of this great liver remedy can be bought of any druggist for 50 cents or $1, and in many cases a single bottle has cured a chronic case.

For example, John W. Zee, 419 S. Pennsylvania ave., Indianapolis, Ind., had a stubborn and very long-standing case of liver trouble, with pimples, blotches, jaundice, etc., and it cured him. Mrs. B. Flinchum, Jackson, Ky., says the same of it. Thousands of families keep it in the house against just such an emergency, as you can never tell when some member of the family will need a good laxative.

In order to have you or any other sufferer from the liver make a test of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin without personal expense, Dr. Caldwell will send you a free test bottle if you will send your name and address. The sample will show you how pleasant it is to take, how gently it works. It will start you on the cure of your trouble and convince you that you have found a cure. That is the object of the sample, and the doctor urges you to send for it today.

If there is anything about your ailment you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 500 Caldwell bldg., Monticello, Ill.

New Orleans, Nov. 18.—Edward Von Buelow, a first cousin of Prince Von Buelow of Germany, has committed suicide by jumping into the river, because he was married to an octoroon woman. He was arrested a week ago, charged with violating the law which prohibits such relations between the races.

Von Buelow came to this country about twelve years ago, and in 1902 was married to a young woman who claimed to be a widow with two children. She was almost white, and the marriage was performed in Jefferson parish. She bore him two children, and the family lived in a quiet residential district and seemed very happy. Neighborhood gossip finally led to an investigation and the disclosure that the woman was colored. Von Buelow was arrested and released on bond and disappeared three days ago. His body has just been found in the river, just below the city. A note found on the body directed that it be turned over to his wife.

MONROE HOME ROBBED.

Thieves Got Away With $1,700 Worth of Jewelry.

Monroe, Mich., Nov. 22.—While the members of the family were attending church last night, burglars entered the residence of George B. Fink, on Macomb street, ransacked the house and got away with jewelry valued at $1,700, chiefly diamond rings, brooches and watches, belonging to Mrs. Fink and her daughter.

Miss Lucille Fink and a girl friend returned to the house between 8 and 8:30 o'clock, and Miss Fink was unable to open the door, it being held shut by the robbers, on the inside, who finished their job and escaped by the rear door, through which they had gained entrance with a skeleton key.

MICHIGAN IS AGAIN CHAMPION

Defeats Minnesota by Score of 15 to 6.

Minneapolis, Nov. 22.—Michigan again is champion of the west. Yost's genius and the fighting spirit of the the great eleven triumphed over the best team Minnesota ever put in the field Saturday. The score was one that left no room for anything but joy on Michigan's part and vain regrets on Minnesota's. Michigan 15, Minnesota 6, was the way it read. Two touchdowns and a goal from the field by Captain Allerdice made up the Wolverine total. One trip across the final chalk mark and the resulting goal earned the half dozen points for the Gophers.

Starting the game a poor second choice in the betting, the men of Yost simply played rings around Coach Williams' fancied worldbeaters. The Wolverines were the first to score and, although they were tied soon afterwards, never stood in any particular danger of being passed. There was nothing to the second half but Michigan. For a short time at the beginning of this period the Gophers succeeded in making an argument, but toward the end of the game the big boys from Ann Arbor were going through them like a rotary plow through a snowdrift.

The game was one of the finest and cleanest ever played in the west.

BOTH SATCHELS ARE FOUND

Prisoner Hammond Maintains He Didn't Steal Money.

DETROIT POLICE "SWEAT" HIM

Second Satchel Stolen From E-M-F Company, and Containing Portion of $17,000, Had About $40 Left In It. Officers Confident They Have Right Man.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 22.—Both of the satchels that once contained the $17,000 belonging to the E-M-F company, automobile manufacturers, which was stolen Friday from the First National bank, are now in the possession of the police. The second satchel was recovered Sunday morning, the other one having been found Saturday afternoon.

Chauncey W. Hammond, former paymaster for the automobile concern, who is charged with the theft, is still locked up in Central police station. In spite of repeated "sweat box" sessions, the young man still maintains his innocence. He insists he did not take the money and knows nothing of its mysterious disappearance.

Captain McDonnell and Lieutenant Lally are devoting all their time to the solving of the mystery and, with a squad of men, are running down every clue in an attempt to uncover the cash. They are satisfied that Hammond knows where it is. Bit by bit, they are weaving a chain of evidence around the youth.

All day Sunday, Captain McDonnell was closeted with officers and employes of the First National bank. Other persons, who it was thought might be able to shed some light on the case, were summoned to police headquarters. The boy who found the first satchel at the foot of Eighteenth street was questioned closely. He said he found it near the slip at the foot of the street.

The second satchel was found within a block of where the first one was discovered. A citizen, whose name the officers will not divulge, picked it up at the foot of Seventeenth street. Only a part of the pay envelopes that had originally reposed there were left. A few of these contained money. There was about $40 in cash left in the satchel.

This would indicate that great haste was used in removing the envelopes and their contents. The satchel found Saturday afternoon contained nothing but empty envelopes. Officers are inclined to believe the money eventually will be found in the neighborhood where both satchels were located.

Hammond's police court arraignment may not take place until the money is found. That is all the police are waiting for to complete what they say is a strong case against the former paymaster of the company.

Sheriff Mistook Man For Deer.

Marquette, Mich., Nov. 22.—Charles Knick of Greenville, O., while hunting in the woods near Whitbeck, this county, was shot and killed by Albert E. Robbins of Iron Mountain, sheriff of Dickinson county. Robbins mistook Knick for a deer. Knick was forty-three years old and married. The body was taken to Whitbeck.

Do not make unjust gains. They are equal to a loss.—Hesiod.

THE REAL RESCUERS.

Government Officials Give Credit to Geological Survey Corps.

Washington, Nov. 22.—It is believed by government officials in Washington that the miners who were saved from death in the St. Paul coal mine, at Cherry, Ill., owe their lives to the work of the government's rescue corps connected with the United States geological survey. These men, who are stationed at Pittsburg, where the survey has an experimental station for investigating the causes of mine disasters, were rushed to Cherry as soon as word was received of the catastrophe.

Each member of the corps had been trained in the use of what is known as the oxygen helmet, an apparatus that permits artifical breathing in the presence of deadly gases. Equipped with such helmets, the government's life savers were able to enter the shaft of the burning mine and fight the fire at close range.

Officalls said that had the methods that have been in use in the past been employed, the mine shaft would have been sealed until the fire had been smothered for want of oxygen. This, of course, would have meant a delay sufficient to have caused the death of every man underground.

PUT TROOPS INTO CHERRY

Town May Be Placed Under Martial Law.

CURIOUS FLOCK TO PLACE

Make Trouble For Those Engaged at Rescue Work In St. Paul Mine. Thirty-five More Bodies Discovered. Voices of Men Shouting For Help Are Heard.

Cherry, Ill., Nov. 22.—As the result of delay due to the fact that the great crowds that are gathering here are hampering the rescue work around the St. Paul mine shaft, and to the circumstance that serious friction has arisen among the state and county officials, a movement has been started here to put the town under martial law.

Sunday there were 25,000 strangers in the town. They came from as far away as Chicago and packed themselves around the works in a solid circle ten feet deep. All day long the militia battled with the crowd, pressing it back and driving it out of forbidden places. All day long the crowd pressed in where it did not belong, hampering the workmen and filling all the passages to and from the coal company's plant.

Thirty-five more bodies were discovered in the second vein. Up to 6 o'clock last night fifty-nine bodies had been taken from the mine. The discovery of the bodies was made in the third east drift, where a pile of debris was blocking a trap door. Removing this the miners forced open the door and were horrified to find a ghastly heap piled up against the door. These men apparently had rushed to the door just after the fall came and had been killed in a few moments by black damp. Fifty-two of the bodies thus far recovered have been identified.

Word has came from the foot of the shaft of the mine that workers on the east side of the second vein had distinctly heard the voices of two men shouting for help.

Saved Themselves.

The charge is made that there is a conflict of authority which is lessening the chances of the men who may be fighting the black damp in sealed up corridors. It is pointed out that the twenty men who have come up alive virtually saved their own lives, and all the rescuers did was to bring them up to the surface after they had fought their way to safety.

Some of the firemen charge openly that they could penetrate into the unexplorable territory if they were permitted by their superiors to do so, but that they are being held back and kept at work shoring up the walls and putting in supports.

Determined to definitely fix responsibility for the disaster and declaring that a grand jury probe will probably be demanded, Duncan McDonald, president of the United Mine Workers of Illinois, and Attorney Seymour Stedman, counsel from Chicago, have admitted that they were attempting to uncover legal proof of the St. Paul coal company's alleged failure to take reasonable precautions for the safety of the men in the Cherry mine.

The two state representatives in this district, W. J. McGuire of Kewanee and William F. Scanlan of Peru, each of whom is closely in touch with the labor element, are urging Governor Deneen to aid in fixing the responsibility.

Sanitarium Wins Suit.

Jackson, Mich., Nov. 22.—Judge Parkinson has filed an opinion in the suit brought in the Calhoun circuit by the attorney general to enforce collection of taxes against the Battle Creek Sanitarium. It is adverse to the contention of the company that it is entitled to exemption from taxation because of its organization under a statute applying to hospitals and benevolent institutions.

Shipped Lambs Were Starving.

Chesaning, Mich., Nov. 22.—E. F. Edwards has received a shipment of western lambs from Chicago for fattening purposes, and upon arrival the animals were found to be so nearly starved as to have eaten the wool from each other's backs. It is believed that they were over time on the railroad and remained unfed. The matter is being investigated.

PUNISHMENT FOR ZELAYA

Taft and Knox Talk Matter Over.

DRASTIC STEPS MAY RESULT

Nicaraguan Crisis Will Likely Take Up Attention of Cabinet Tuesday. Zelaya's Elimination From Central American Politics Desired—Reparation For Executions Wanted.

Washington, Nov. 22—The details of the plan mapped out by Secretary of State Knox for dealing with President Zelaya of Nicaragua for the summary execution of two Americans, LeRoy Cannon and Leonard Grace, were laid before President Taft last night at a conference at the White House. Secretary Knox was accompanied to the White House by Henry M. Hoyt, counsellor of the state department and Mr. Knox's right hand man in handling diplomatic questions. They spent several hours discussing with Mr. Taft the details of the political situation in Nicaragua leading up to the present revolution and the execution of the two Americans, and Mr. Knox's plan of action.

It is believed that President Taft will approve the program decided on by his secretary of state for dealing with President Zelaya. The measures contemplated by Secretary Knox are said to be of a drastic nature.

Orders have been sent to the navy department to the transport Buffalo, which is now at Pinchilinque bay, Mex., directing that vessel to proceed as rapidly as possible to Panama, where she will await further orders.

No additional dispatches on the subject have been received from Henry Calders, the American vice consul at Managua. The preliminary report from Mr. Calders, received Saturday is regarded by officers of the department as a full and comprehensive statement of the facts of the execution of the two Americans, and Secretary Knox has issued this report as the basis of his action. The Nicaraguan crisis probably will be the principal topic of consideration at the regular cabinet meeting on Tuesday.

For many months the state department has desired to eliminate Zelaya from Central American politics. He has not been only obnoxious to the United States and its diplomatic representatives in Managua but has been regarded by the officers of the state department as a political mischief maker. It is regarded as probably by well informed people here that an apology and substantial indemnities for the families of the executed Americans will be demanded from Zelaya by Mr. Knox.

After the conference at the White House, Mr. Knox made the following statement.

"In case certain representations of facts which have been made to the department concerning the Grace and Cannon (the men executed) case are verified, through injuries the department has made, this government will at once prepare a demand on the Nicaraguan government for reparation for the death of the two men."

Hanged While Dying.

Vicksburg, Miss., Nov. 22.—After he had shot and fatally wounded City Marshal Walter Nichols and was in turn shot by Nichols, James Estes, a a negro, was hanged by a mob at Delhi, La. Nichols was attempting to arrest the negro on a minor charge when shot. Estes was practically dying when he was lynched.

LIVED LIFE OF MYSTERY.

Man Who Was Killed Was Not Married to Woman He Lived With.

Laporte, Ind., Nov. 22.—The suspicion in the minds of the people of Laporte that a deep mystery was wrapped up in the identity of Harry J. May, vice president of the Laporte Stone Manufacturing company and inventor of a waterproof cement block, who lost his life Oct. 20 in an explosion of a secret compound he was mixing, has been confirmed through an inquiry made by Mrs. H. H. Thompson of Jamestown, N. D., for particulars of the explosion.

Mrs. Thompson claims that the dead man was her husband and that his name was not Harry J. May, but Harry H. Thompson. Mrs. Thompson also says the woman who lived with May in Laporte from March, this year, until the explosion, and posed as his wife, was a woman from Fargo, N. D.

The real name of the woman has not been ascertained.

KILLS HER FOE OF 20 YEARS

"The most merciless enemy I had for 20 years," declares Mrs. James Duncan, of Haynesville, Me., "was Dyspepsia. I suffered intensely after eating or drinking and could scarcely sleep. After many remedies had failed and several doctors had given me up I tried Electric Bitters, which cured me completely. Now I can eat anything. I am 70 years old and am overjoyed to get my health back again." For Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, Kidney Trouble, Lame Back, Female Complaints, it is unequaled. Only 50c at C. A. Wright & Son's.

When you have a cold the first thing to do is to have the bowels move. Do not take anything that may constipate—and most old fashioned cough cures do constipate. Try Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup. It drives the cold from the system by a free yet gentle action of the bowels; it stops the cough, it is pleasant to take. Children like it. Sold by all dealers.

Tickling, tight Coughs, can be surely and quickly loosened with a prescription Druggists are dispensing everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. And is is so very, very different than common cough medicines. No Opium, no Chloroform, absolutely nothing harsh or unsafe. The tender leaves of a harmless, lung healing mountainous shrub, gives the curative properties to Dr. Shoop's Cough Remedy. Those leaves have the power to calm the most distressing Cough and to sooth and heal the most sensitive bronchial membrane. Mothers should for safety's sake alone, always demand Dr. Shoop's. It can with perfect freedom be given to even the youngest babes. Test it yourself and see! Sold by all dealers.

It isn't so difficult to strengthen a weak stomach if onegoes at it correctly. And this is true of the Heart and Kidneys. The old fashioned way of dosing the Stomach or stimulating the Heart or Kidneys is surely wrong. Dr. Shoop first pointed out this error. "Go to the week or ailing nerves of the orhans", said he. Each inside organ has its controlling or "inside nerve". When these nerves fail then those organs must surely falter. This vital truth is leading druggists everywhere to dispense and recommend Dr. Shoop's Restorative. A few days' test will surely tell. Sold by all dealers.

Quaint Record of a Journey from Monroe to Ypsilanti in 1833

The Following Was Taken from the Diary of Mrs. David A. Noble of Monroe.

On Wednesday morning, June 1 1833, Father, Temple, Henry, Addison and myself set out on horseback for Ypsilanti. Father and Temple rode large English bay horses; Addison, a bay pony; Henry, my little black pony, which Addison gave me a few weeks since.

I rode a sorrell pony, very easy in all his gaits yclept: Elder Gantt. The day was a favorable one, cloudy but rather warm.

We got over the first ten miles very easily. I was not much fatigued. (I intend to be particular, that I may note the changes a few years hence, should I travel that way.)

Stopped at Billy Brown's, a log hut, miserable place as can well be imagined. It is, however, one of the best stopping place or tavern on the roads. The flies here troubled our horses very much. You can have no idea of their size unless you see them. Their bite is very poisonous.

Just as we passed along, a fine, large deer, made frantic, almost, by those merciless insects, rushed from the woods into a lot, where these were many men at work burning logs, and rolled in the dirt to rid himself of his tormentors. Soon we struck the Indian Trail in a fine oak opening: it winds about gracefully and the tall oaks, which, on either side, are blazed or hacked with a tomahawk to mark the road in winter. Soon, we came to a well, very deep indeed, which, instead of being stoned up, had an immense hollow sycamore log inserted, which, they say, is much better than stone.

We passed on from there, took again the trail: there were some very some very deep holes, owing to the late heavy rains; the ponies sunk above their knees in the mire.

We stopped at a hut, a little off the road, just up Beaver Dam, found a farmer's family, cattle, and flies enough; the woman, shaking with the ague, insisted "There never was so healthy a place."

Stopped just for a glass of water at Welch's: he had just moved into his house when we passed that way last fall: he has now quite a clearing and seems very industrious.

From this house is heavy timber land: consequently the roads are almost impassible, as the sun does not penetrate the massive foliage enough to dry them off. We were now riding very slowly, "Indian file;" the roads would admit of no other way: moving on cautiously, our ponies stumbling and plunging against scraggy roots of trees, almost miring in the black mud holes.

Once we halted to admire the movements of a large "massasauga" snake, who uncoiled himself and moved on his sluggish pace, unmolested, for we were quite unwilling to seek warfare with this poisonous reptile.

We stopped at "Thompson's," five miles from Ypsilanti, partook of some refreshments, arriving at Y—— about 5 o'clock. Stayed at Alford's, who keeps a good house, with waiters, bells, etc.

Next morning set off for Clinton, Addison having exchanged his pony for a large horse. We were overtaken by a shower at Saline, a little settlement commenced two years since, but with now a tavern, two or three stores, dwelling houses, etc.

We arrived at Clinton in the evening, and stayed at Hoover's, whom, I should think, is one of the greatest liars the western country can boast of.

We dined at Tecumseh, a pleasant village; Musgrove Evans being the first settler of that place. Its plan is something like Pittsfield, Mass.: the houses are all painted: looks quite like an old place: the gardens are very pleasant, many of them.

Mr. Evans, when he first went there, had to come to Monroe, 50 miles, for men to help raise his house. His wife used 23 barrells of flour before she had an oven to bake in; there was no other house for 30 miles in any direction, and he kept a public house for a long time.

We returned via Blissfield: at one place we were obliged to dismount and drive the horses on through a quagmire, while I walked a rail fence to get across.

The last day we road from Adrian to Monroe, a distance of 42 miles.

WHAT IS HYOMEI?

You Have Heard About the Catarrh Cure C. A. Wright Guarantees.

HYOMEI is a wonderful antiseptic so powerful that it promptly destroys germ life, yet its action on the mucous membrane is extremely soothing and healing. It relieves catarrh in five minutes; it cures in a few weeks or money back.

It is made chiefly of eucalyptus and eucalyptol taken from the eucalyptus forests of inland Australia. The medical profession knows that eucalyptus is an absolutely certain germ destroyer and with the active principles of eucalyptus as a base Hyomei is made more efficient, pleasant and quick acting by the addition of Thymol, an antiseptic and disinfectant largely employed in the Listerian System. Guaiacol and other important medicinal agents are also included in the Hyomei formula, which, without a doubt is the greatest destroyer of catarrh germs the world has ever known.

Hyomei is a powerful, penetrating antiseptic that is pleasant to use. It does not contain a particle of cocaine, opium or any habit-forming or injurious drug.

No dosing the stomach when you use Hyomei. Just breathe it in through the small inhaler that comes with each outfit. Sold by leading druggists everywhere and in Tecumseh by C. A. Wright & Son. $1.00 for complete outfit.

ALMA COLLEGE.

Big, brainy Champ. Clark opens the Alma Lyceum Course in a lecture on Picturesque Public Men. As a debater and a thinker, Champ Clark takes the front rank either in or out of Congress. The motor of his his elocution being impulsiveness, felicity gleams in his eye as he weaves into the wool of his lecture fanciful phrases and splendid ideas.

He is followed by the Four Musical Artists, Dec. 13, who come with a national reputation.

Next appear the College Singing Girls, accompanied by Mr. Walter Eccles who stands front in the rank as public entertainer.

On Feb. 8, 1910, Rogers and Grilley present their celebrated recitals. These men make a specialty of appearing at colleges, universities and normal schools. Their program is said to be most unique and thoroughly delightful.

Ernest Harold Baynes, lecturer and naturalist, closes the course in his wonderful lecture on Wild Animals in America.

The Lure of the Mask

By HAROLD MAC GRATH

his arm. Each man could hear the breathing of the other, quick and deep.

"You meddling dog!" gasped Hillard. "Take care lest the dog bite, signor. Release my arm and stand aside!"

"Presently. Now that way is yours."

my word for it. Something's desperately wrong. Persons do not wear masks and hide in this manner just for a lark. Why didn't you knock him down?"

"I wanted to, but it wasn't the psychological moment. You can't knock a man down when he practically surrenders."

"You're too particular. But what's the matter with Kitty? I don't understand. To see you was to know that I was round somewhere. She ran away from me as well as from you. What shall we do?"

"Start the hunt again or give it up entirely. There are some villages between here and Nice. It must be in that direction. They were about to board the car for Nice. If you hadn't been gambling, if you had been sensible and stayed with me"—

"Come, now, that won't wash. You know very well that you urged me to play."

"You would have played without any urging."

"And who is this Italian anyhow?" asked Merrihew. "And why did he run after your prima donna?"

"That is precisely what I wish to find out," answered Hillard.

"I'm afraid that Kitty has fallen among a bad lot. I'll wager it is

He swept up the gold by the handful.

some anarchist business. They are always plotting the assassination of kings over here, and this mysterious woman is just the sort to rope in a confiding girl like Kitty. One thing if I come across our friend with the scar"—

"You will wisely cross to the opposite side of the street. To find out what this tangle is it is not necessary to jump head first into it."

"A bad lot."

"That may be, but no anarchists, my boy."

Hillard was a bit sore at heart. That phrase recurred and recurred: "A lady? Grace of Mary, that is droll!" The shadow of disillusion crept into his bright dream and clouded it—to build so beautiful a castle and to see it tumble at a word! The Italian had spoken with a contempt based on more than suspicion.

"Kitty doesn't wish to meet us," Merrihew bitterly observed. So we'll light out for Venice in the morning. I'm not going to be made a fool of for the best woman alive."

In the meantime the lamps in the casino had been extinguished. In the harbor the yachts stood out white and spectral. The tram for Nice shrieked down the incline toward the promontory. At the foot of the road which winds up to the palaces the car was signaled, and two women boarded. Both were veiled. They maintained a singular silence. At Villefranche they got out. The women stopped before the gates of a villa and rang the porter's bell. Once in the room above, the silence between the two women came to an end.

"Safe! I am so tired. What a night!" the elder of the two women sighed.

"What a night truly! I should like to know what it has all been about. To run through dark streets and alleys, to hide for hours, as if I were a thief or a fugitive from justice, is neither to my taste nor to my liking."

"Kitty," she began sadly, "in this world no one trusts us wholly. We must know why. Loyalty must have reasons; chivalry must have facts. You have vowed your love and loyalty a hundred times, and still when a great crisis confronts me you question, you grow angry, you complain, because my reasons are unknown to you. It was blind terror which made me run. I counted not the consequences. I shall tell you why I am lonely, why the world, bright to you, is dark. I am proud, but I shall bend my pride." With a quick movement she lifted her head high, and her eyes burned into Kitty's very heart. "I am"—

"Stop! No, no! I forbid you!" Kitty put her hands over her ears. She might gain the secret, but she knew that she would lose the heart of the woman it concerned. "I am wrong, wrong. I have promised to follow you loyally, without question. I will keep that promise. I am only angry because you would not let me speak to Mr. Hillard. He is very handsome," Kitty added thoughtfully. "He is strong too."

"Strong and cruel as a tiger. How I hate him! But thank you, Kitty; thank you. Sooner or later, if we stay together, I must tell you. The confidence will do me good." Kitty approached, and La Signorina drew her close. "I have wrought harm to no one. But on my side they will tell you that I have been terribly wronged. And all I wish is to be left alone, alone. It was cruel of me to forbid you to speak to Mr. Hillard. But I wish him to recollect me pleasantly, as a whimsical being who came into his life one night and vanished out of it in two hours."

"But supposing the memory cuts keeply," ventured Kitty. "Men fall in love with less excuse than this."

"Nonsense!" La Signorina opened the window to air the room. She lingered, musing. "You are very good to me, Kitty."

"I can't help being good to you, you strange, lovely woman, for your sake as well as for mine. Now I am going to write a letter."

La Signorina still lingered by the window.

Merrihew was pocketing currency in exchange for his gold when Hillard passed an open letter to him:

My Dear Mr. Hillard—Do not seek us. It will be useless. If Mr. Merrihew is with you, tell him that some day I will explain away the mystery. But, this please make plain to him—if he insists upon searching for me he will only double my unhappiness.

KITTY KILLIGREW.

Merrihew soberly tucked the letter away. "I knew it," he said simply. "She is in some trouble or other, some tangle, and fears to drag us into it. Who left a letter here this morning?" he asked of the concierge.

"A small boy from Villefranche."

"Just my luck," said Merrihew. "I said that it would be of no use to hunt in the smaller towns. Well, we had better take the luggage back to the rooms. I am going to Villefranche."

"You will be wasting time. After what happened last night I am certain they will be gone. Let us respect their plans, hard as it may seem to you."

"But you?"

"Oh, don't bother about me. I have relegated my little romance to the garret of no account things, at least for the present," said Hillard, with an enigmatical smile. "Make up your mind—we have only twenty minutes."

"Oh, divine afflatus! And you lay down the chase so readily as this?" Merrihew was scornfully indignant.

"I would travel the breadth of the continent were I sure of meeting this woman. But she has become a will-o'-the-wisp, and I am too old and like comfort too well to pursue impossibilities."

"But why did she leave you that mask?" demanded Merrihew. "She must have meant something by that."

"True, but for the life of me I can't figure out what."

"But I don't like the idea of leaving Kitty this way without a final effort to rescue her from the clutches of this fascinating adventuress."

"I admit nothing, my boy, save that the keenness of the chase is gone. As for Kitty, she's a worldly little woman and can take good care of herself. Now letters—"

To be continued.

A FREE BAKING SCHOOL

CLASS IN Y. M. C. A. ROOMS.

Noted Chicago Woman Coming Here to Explain it in Detail.

To the ladies of Tecumseh is extended a cordial invitation to meet Mrs N. Briggs of Chicago and listen to her lectures on the "Science of Domestic Economy". She illustrates her lectures with interesting baking tests which are sure to interest you.

There will be no dread of bake-day after seeing this expert and receiving her helpful instructions. She is an expert in the art of baking, as taught by Mrs. Janet McKenzie Hill, of the widely famed Boston cooking schools, and has many new and practical ideas that you are sure to find helpful. The lectures are free, no charge whatever. Tastes of delicious baking will be served to all who attend, hot from the oven while you wait. Chairs will be placed so you may sit in comfort during these talks and demonstrations at 2 p. m. Friday, Saturday and Monday at 2 and 8 p. m. Mrs. Briggs uses the well known K. C. Baking Powder in her work. She thinks it superior to all others for reasons she will explain. She will open the school in the Y. M. C. A. rooms Friday at 2 p. m.

The following dainties will be baked and served at Friday's class: white cake, gold cake, one-egg muffins and corn bread.

Don't miss attending the Free Baking School. Change each class.

Representatives of the K. C Baking Powder will call at your home and tell you of its great merit. Ask them to show you the Janet McKenzie Hill Cook Book. It contains the finest collection of choice recipes ever compiled, and is beautifully illustrated

The Late John Boyd.

A WELL KNOWN PIONEER OF LENAWEE COUNTY.

A Long and Useful Life.

The recent death of Mr. John Boyd at his late farm home on the Ridge-Road, Township of Macon, in his 80th year removes one more of the pioneers of Lenawee county, and this community has lost one of its most respected and substantial citizens. At his advanced age death was perhaps not a remote possibility, yet to most of his relatives, neighbors and acquaintances it came very unexpectedly, as he seemed to be enjoying good health and apparently had gained in strength since his return from a trip to Ireland during the past summer.

The deceased was born in Antrim County, Ireland, January 11, 1830, and came to the United States at the age of 18. Possessed of but a few shillings, in money, but with a determination to make himself a home in the land of his adoption he found employment as a farm hand near Geneseo, Livingstone County, New York, and in a few years, by industry and economy, had saved enough to bring him to Michigan and make a payment on 80 acres, a small portion of which was cleared, this with an additional purchase was sold and in 1865 the farm on which he died was purchased.

As a wage earner his motto was to keep busy at whatever wages he could get, and in business transactions, with him principle was greater than prosperity if the latter was to be gained by any advantage over his fellow men.

His years at school ended when he was eight years of age, in which short time he obtained the rudiments which enabled him to develop by extensive reading of instructive books and the best newspapers a broad knowledge of affairs possessed by but by few in his community; he could define his convictions on the current questions of the day clearly and logically.

His integrity was unquestioned, and it is said of him that he never forgot a promise or obligation. His early associations brought him in contact with many of the influential men of Tecumseh, such as the late Lawyer Adams, Judge Stacey, Anderson Brothers, Banker Lilley and in business here for the past 20 years, with each of whom his work was as good as his bond.

In politics he was a Republican and had supported every Presidential nominee of that party from Lincoln down with the single exception that he voted for Horace Greeley; in his active years he had served his township as Supervisor and Justice of the Peace to the entire sasisfaction of the people whom he represented in these capacities.

In his early life he was a member of the Presbyterian church but as there was no Congregation of that denomination in his immediate neighborhood he joined the Reformed church of America, and he was almost the sole surviving elder of the south Macon Congregation, and his funeral services were conducted by his former pastor Rev. Mr. Scarlett, and members of the choir he had listened to for many years.

His wife by his first marriage died in 1891; he married again some years after, the widow sorrowing him, an only son by his first marriage residing in Detroit; one brother, William Boyd and an only sister Mrs. Margaret Hastings both of whom live at Albion, Mich., survive.

His remains rest in the family burial lot in Tecumseh Cemetery marked by a granite monument erected several years ago.

He was a kind, considerate and provident husband and father, and leaves as a heritage as fine a farm as there is in the county equipped with all the improvements and requirements of a rural home.

His family survivors will miss him from his accustomed place at the fireside; his relatives and friends who looked to him for counsel and advice; and the beneficiaries of his benevolence will miss him. He set an example worthy of being followed by all men, and the memory of his integrity, kindness and humanity will long remain to be most revered by those who knew him best.

CONFIRMED PROOF

Residents of Tecumseh Cannot Doubt What Has been Twice Proved.

In gratitude for complete relief from aches and pains of bad backs from distressing kidney ills thousands have publicly recommended Doan's Kidney Pills. Residents of Tecumseh, who so testified years ago, now say their cures were permanent. This testimony doubly proves the worth of Doan's Kidney Pills to Tecumseh Kidney sufferers.

Mrs. Charles Stevenson, Wyandotte and Pottawatamie Sts., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "Sharp, shooting pains across the small of my back were the first symptoms of kidney trouble in my case. My kidneys gradually became disordered and I was very miserable. Being advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills, I did so and the pains disappeared. For years I had also been distressed by gravel but Doan's Kidney Pills removed this trouble and I have not been bothered since."

Above statement was given on Dec. 10, 1906, and on Dec. 9, 1908, Mrs. Stevenson confirmed it in detail adding that her cure had been permanent. For Sale by all Dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, Sole Agents for the United States.

Mi-o-na cures dyspepsia. There isn't any doubt about it. Thousands of just such testimonials as the above from every city and town in America prove it. Mi-o-na does not digest the food in your stomach, but in a few days it tones up the walls of the stomach and makes it strong enough to digest its own food. Digesters never cured dyspepsia, and never will; they may help a tired stomach do its work, temporarily, but that is all. Mi-o-na tablets 50 cents a large box. Sold by all druggists.

GRAVE DANGERS AHEAD.

Professor Nearing Sees Them in Increased Population.

Philadelphia, Nov. 22.—Limit the number of children in each family and limit the immigration to the United States or else there is a great danger of the population exceeding the available food supply, is the advice of Professor Scott Nearing, instructor in economics at the Wharton school of finance and commerce of the University of Pennsylvania.

Speaking before the Hebrew Literary society Sunday afternoon on the subject of "race suicide," Professor Nearing ridiculed ex-President Roosevelt's pet theory of the advisability of big families, declaring that the anti race suicide sentiment was directly responsible for the increased cost of living expenses.

COLLECTOR LOEB IN WASHINGTON

Seeks MacVeagh's Advice In Carrying on House Cleaning.

Washington, Nov. 22.—William Loeb, Jr., collector of customs at the port of New York, is here today in conference with Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh in regard to the inquiry now being made into frauds against the customs at New York. Collector Loeb will spend today and Tuesday in the treasury department. He expects to return to New York Tuesday night.

"I came here to confer with Secretary MacVeagh," Mr. Loeb said, in reply to a question. "It is not true that I was asked to come here to take up the customs frauds with President Taft. During my stay here, however, I shall pay my respects to the president."

Mr. Loeb said that during his talk with Secretary MacVeagh he would acquaint him fully with conditions in the New York custom house.

He was extremely reticent on the subject of the frauds. He said he had nothing to give to the public at this time as to whether there would be additional removals from the customs service in the near future. "I desire to discuss with Secretary MacVeagh certain matters of policy bearing not only on the investigation into alleged collusion of government employes with importers, but on the conduct of the office of collector as a general thing," said Mr. Loeb.

The collector expressed great pleasure with the support he said he was receiving from the treasury department in the work of cleaning out the New York customs service. "The department is determined to stick to the job to the finish," said Mr. Loeb. "We will conclude our labors in due season, but it is impossible to say just when we will be able to announce that the service has been cleaned up."

Collector Loeb denied that his visit here was to discuss the advisability of more removals. While the collector did not say so, it is the understanding in official circles that he has been given carte blanche by Secretary MacVeagh in the matter of dismissals in that whoever he marks for the block will lose his office.

PASSENGERS ALL ESCAPE.

Wild Scene Enacted When Steamer St. Croix Burned Near Los Angeles.

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 22.—Captain Warner of the steamer St. Croix arrived here last night and gave facts in regard to the burning and beaching of the coast line steamer, about which many sensational reports were circulated. None of the eighty-two passengers was seriously injured, although they lost most of their baggage. The origin of the fire is a mystery, but probably came from the oil burning plant.

The flames were first discovered by a deckhand, who promptly gave the alarm. Then for a few minutes there was wild panic among passengers, who made a rush for the boats and tried to vainly launch them. Several women were knocked down by men from the steerage, but the fellows were roughly handled by the crew, and all passengers, under the captain's orders, waited at the head of the main deck while the crew lowered lifeboats and gave first place to the women and children. Then the men climbed down.

Captain Warner was the last man to leave the wreck.

The fire rapidly died down, and the steamer drifted in near Point Duma, where the passengers were landed. There, in a sheltered canyon before great bonfires, they passed the night, and Sunday morning were brought to Los Angeles.

The musical entertainment given by the Parkinson family Saturday night for the benefit of the Britton band, was very well attended. The family consists of five members, each playing a different instrument, thus making an orchestra of their own. The entertainment consisted of music by the orchestra, violin solos, clarionet solo, readings and vocal solos and duets, and music by the band. This being their first appearance in public, we feel that the boys needs to be complimented on their progress in playing, as they are a new organization and have only been practicing about two months. The entertainment was very well appreciated by all who attended. Mr. Parkinson is the leader and founder of the band and by his help may we have more such entertainments.

Left to perish alone in the wilderness, twenty miles out from Newberry, in Luce county, Hockenberry slowly bled to death. Had the man who fired the fatal shot gone to the aid of his victim, it is believed that Hockenberry would have had an excellent chance to recover from his wounds. Mild Laxative for Baby Free

The child of today is the parent of the future, and whether it grows up healthy and strong, or puny and weak, depends upon the intelligence of its parents, for most children are born into the world healthy, but thousands become future weaklings between birth and the age of ten, when the parents are still in greatest control.

The prime cause of trouble is in the stomach. A baby that is digesting its food seldom cries. Let a mother's love be faithful the little child whose stomach is good romps and plays and never whines, the growing child being well at school and eager for fun if its head is clear and its stomach light, and that means if it has no constipation.

The best and safest way to cure any irregularity of the stomach and bowels in children is by the use of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. This is a fruit laxative wonderful in its effect, as Mrs. John W. Dunham, Apple Creek, O., Mrs. H. L. Gulliam, Fisherville, Ind., and numerous others can testify, who give it to their children with extraordinary results.

A bottle only costs 50 cents or it according to the size you want, and even one 50-cent bottle will do a wonderful amount of good in a family. It can be given to any member of the family in constipation, sour stomach, indigestion, torpid liver, dyspepsia, heartburn, nervous headache and similar digestive troubles. It never gripes or strains like pills, tablets, salts and purgatives which should not be given to children, women or old folks.

If you have a child or other member of the family who needs, but has never taken this grand laxative tonic, send your name and address to the doctor and a free trial bottle will be sent to your home, in the way you can find out what it will do without personal expense.

If there is anything about your ailment that you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the doctor and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 355 Caldwell bldg., Monticello, Ill.

CIGAR MAKER GOES HOPELESSLY INSANE

Witnesses Declare Christian Science Was Cause.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 24.—According to the testimony, in the probate court here, of Drs. Seymour L. Spler and Max Mailhouse, Christian Science has driven Elam Martin, thirty-six years old, a cigar maker, hopelessly insane. Martin, who came to this city from Lancaster, Pa., several years ago, has worked steadily and accumulated several thousand dollars, which is on deposit in the local savings banks. Two weeks ago he became a member of the local Christian Science church. Every spare moment he spent pouring over the Christian Science text books.

A week ago his landlady was startled by Martin's statement that there was no reason why he could no go to Lancaster with 30 cents, because Christ himself had traveled all over the world with less than a dollar. Monday afternoon Martin went to the Hebrew temple, in the center of the city, and stripped himself of every stitch of clothes he had on. He made a platform of his clothes and, with the bible in his hand, began to address the temple. He read sections of the bible in a very loud voice for several minutes. Then a dozen men surrounded him, and he was turned over to the police.

He has been committed to the Norwich hospital for the insane.

MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL.

United States Circuit Court Grants Permission For Its Making.

New York, Nov. 24.—The United States circuit court of appeals has granted the motion made by Martin W. Littleton, counsel for Charles W. Morse, for leave to apply to the circuit court, in which Morse was officially convicted, to hear a motion for a new trial.

Mr. Littleton said that he would speedily make the application to the court below. If the United States supreme court took up next Monday his application for a writ of certiorari, as it might do on reconvening, the motion for a new trial would not be made before then, but if there is delay on the part of the highest tribunal the motion might be made in advance of the supreme court's action.

WOMAN TELLS STRANGE STORY

Says Saw Mabel Millman In Dr. Fritch's Office.

DOCTOR ACTED QUEERLY

Mysterious Woman Goes to Ann Arbor and Relates Startling Details of Crime For Which Detroit Physician Is Held—Deputy Sheriff Overhears the Account.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 24.—To Deputy Sheriff Stark of this city belongs credit for apprehending a Detroit woman whose testimony may result in the conviction of Dr. Fritch, accused of manslaughter in connection with the death of Mabel Millman, the pretty Ann Arbor girl whose mutilated body was found in a creek near Detroit last September

The woman is the one who has been writing letters to Sheriff Gaston and has thrown some valuable clues in his way, but whose identity has been kept a secret. Even now she refuses to give her name, because of her family in Detroit.

Tuesday she came to Ann Arbor, and as she was entering the Millman home Deputy Sheriff Stark passed the house. The few words he heard the woman speak to the mother of the dead girl told him there was something he ought to know about. From a member of the family he obtained permission to stay in a room nearby, to hear the conversation of the mysterious woman, dressed in black, who refused to divulge her name even to the mother of the murdered girl.

She told of having been in Dr Fritch's office one day in September and of meeting a young lady there, who, during a conversation, said she was Mabel Millman.

"Miss Millman," she said, "went into the private office of the doctor. She dropped her handkerchief as she left me, and I picked it up. That handkerchief had a gold ring tied in one corner.

"Miss Millman and the doctor were in the room a long time, and, getting tired of waiting, I walked down to the foot of the stairs, but never left the place.

"I heard a noise of a slamming door, and, looking around, I saw Dr. Fritch, his face as white as death, rushing downstairs. Without a look at me he ran into the street. Remembering that I had Miss Millman's handkerchief and ring, I went back upstairs to return them to her.

"The door was locked. I pounded, but got no reply. Then I left. Later came the story of the finding of the dismembered body of the young woman."

Sheriff Gaston arrived at the Millman home later and heard the mysterious woman's story. She would not reveal her identity. She left last night for Detroit, but has promised to testify at the trial of Dr. Fritch.

INDICTMENTS DISMISSED.

Maybury's Death Blocks Prosecution of Postoffice Cases.

Washington, Nov. 24.—The attorney general has ordered that the indictments returned Sept. 8, 1903, against Eugene D. Scheble of Toledo, O., and August W. Machen, the former head of the free delivery postal system, be dismissed.

These indictments were based on an alleged conspiracy by Scheble, who claimed the patent right for letter boxes, and Machen, when the latter was general superintendent of the free delivery service, to procure contracts with the postoffice department to furnish it with a large number of letter boxes in excess of the needs of the service.

The recent death of former Mayor William C. Maybury of Detroit, Mich., who was an important witness, made it impossible for the government to obtain convictions.

HAMMOND STOOD MUTE.

Judge Lets Him Off With Bail at $10,000.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 24.—Chauncey W. Hammond, the young man charged with nervily appropriating $17,000 of the pay roll money of the E. M. F. Automobile company from the First National bank on Friday last, was Tuesday arraigned before Justice Stein.

The prisoner stood mute after hearing the charge of the court and asked that his trial be set for the earliest possible date. Justice Stein set the examination for Nov. 30, and admitted him to $10,000 bail, with two sureties.

TO SUCCEED JAMES BURTON

James Freeman Curtis of Boston Enters Treasury.

MACVEAGH OFFERS HIM JOB

New Man Enjoys Golf, and MacVeagh Pointed This Fact Out to Taft. President Would Not Accept Loeb's Choice For Surveyor of Customs. Has Another Office For the Man.

Washington, Nov. 24.—James Freeman Curtis, assistant district attorney for the state of Massachusetts, at Boston has been offered and has accepted the office of assistant secretary of the treasury in charge of customs, to succeed James Burton Reynolds, also of Boston, who resigned to accept a membership on the tariff board. The announcement of Mrs. Curtis' appointment was made by Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh.

It was Mr. MacVeagh who discovered Mr. Curtis and recommended him to the president. The matter was closed some time ago, but as Mr. Curtis has been busy for ten weeks in the prosecution of the steel combination cases in Boston and was not ready to take up his work in Washington, announcement of the appointment was purposely deferred. Secretary MacVeagh announced to the other members of the cabinet Tuesday for the first time the name of his new assistant. Mr. Curtis will assume his duties in Washington next Monday.

RICHARD PARR.

The new assistant secretary is thirty-three years old, a bachelor, and was graduated from Harvard with the class of 1899. He held the intercollegiate golf championship while in college. Secretary MacVeagh smilingly remarked that he had been careful not to conceal from the president M. Curtis' fondness for golf when he first recommended the Boston lawyer for the position. It is expected that Mr. Curtis will become an active member of the golf cabinet.

Secretary of the Treasury MacVagh and William Loeb, Jr., collector of customs for the port of New York, agreed on a New York man for appointment as surveyor of customs at New York, a position which will become vacant next January through the retirement of General James S. Clarkson.

President Taft, however, told Mr. MacVeagh and Mr. Loeb that this man was to have another federal office which the president regarded as much more desirable.

Who the mysterious New Yorker is none of those who knew would tell. It was made known authoritatively, however, that the man endorsed was not Richard Parr, deputy surveyor of customs at the New York custom house. Mr. Parr had been mentioned for the place.

Sailboat Capsized; Youth Drowns.

GENERAL MOTORS CHOOSES DETROIT

Will Build Parent Plant In City of Straits.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 24.—From authentic sources it has been learned that the General Motors company will establish its headquarters in Detroit. It will invest $2,500,000 in a plant to occupy a 50 acre tract which has been purchased at a cost of nearly $300,000 in the northeastern corner of the city.

The real estate transactions alone in this projected enterprise are the largest ever consummated in Detroit for manufacturing purposes.

This gigantic industry, which is to be the central and parent plant for the General Motors company operations, is expected to give employment to between 6,000 and 7,000 men.

MISTAKEN FOR DOLLIVER.

Salesman Gets Cordial Reception in Kalamazoo.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Nov. 24.—All the early honors planned for Senator J. P. Dolliver of Iowa, who delivered a lecture in Kalamazoo last night, fell upon M. A. McLaughlin, a traveling salesman. The reception committee, headed by Postmaster H. B. Colman, was at the depot to meet the well known statesman. When Mr. McLaughlin stepped from the train with his grip he was immediately relieved of it by the Kalamazoo postmaster. Other members of the committee hustled the bewildered man towards an automobile standing near the station, and before he could successfully explain himself away from the committee he was seated in the automobile. During all this while Senator Dolliver was sleeping in one of the local hotels.

Hangs Himself In Shed.

Metamora, Mich., Nov. 24.—James Church, who resides three miles east of this place, was found suspended from a rafter in his woodshed. He had hanged himself some time during the night. Church, who was sixty-five years of age, is survived by a widow and two children. Ill health is supposed to have unbalanced his mind.

MUST BUY FROM SALOONS.

Indiana Supreme Court Shuts Down on Sale From Breweries.

Indianapolis, Nov. 24.—The supreme court has rendered a decision prohibiting the sale of beer or other intoxicants except by licensed saloons. The decision is regarded as being the most drastic delivered by any of the higher courts of middle states on the liquor question.

Up to the present private customers have been able to have their beer delivered at their homes direct by the brewers. They have also been permitted to buy their liquors direct from wholesale houses. This decision takes that privilege from them. It provides that brewers and wholesalers shall sell only to licensed saloon keepers and that the public shall buy only from the saloons.

MAY NAME LURTON.

Taft Apparently Favors Him For Supreme Bench.

Washington, Nov. 24.—President Taft is sounding members of the senate judiciary committee and other senators as to whether they would object to the nomination of Judge Horace H. Lurton of Tennessee as associate justice of the supreme court of the United States. Nothing has appeared to indicate that there will be any serious objection to Judge Lurton on account of his age, which is sixty-five years.

It has become known that Frederick N. Judson of St. Louis is Mr. Taft's second choice for the supreme court vacancy.

ORAL TEACHING.

Superintendent Wright Will Recommend That It Be Introduced.

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 24.—On his return from the trip of inspection and instruction to several schools in the state, State Superintendent of Public Instruction Wright states that he will at once take up a plan to introduce oral instead of written arithmatic in the grammar grades of all the public schools.

From his observance of the working of the plan in at least one school in the northern part of the state, Mr. Wright says, the oral is the ideal system of teaching mathematics. The graduates of this school, he asserts, are regarded as mathematical experts, and easily command better positoins and higher salaries that the students who study written arithmetic.

"But it isn't. A woman's 'don't' often means 'do.' If Kitty really expects me to search for her and I do not she will never believe in me again."

"Perhaps your knowledge of women is more extensive than mine," said Hillard.

But this flattery did not appeal to Merrihew. "Bosh! There's something you haven't told me about that makes you so indifferent."

This was a shrewd guess, but Hillard had his reasons for not letting his friend see how close he had shot. "A lady? Grace of Mary, that is droll!" He could not cast this out of his thought. He floated between this phrase and Mrs. Sandford's frank defense of her girlhood friend.

"Time flies," he warned. "Which is it to be?"

"We'll go on to Venice. It would be folly for me to continue the hunt alone."

At 7 that evening they stepped out of the station in Venice—the blue twilight of Venice that curves down from the hollow heavens, softening a bit of ugliness here, accentuating a bit of loveliness there. Here Merrihew found one of his dreams come true, and his first vision of the Grand canal, with its gondolas and barges and queer little bobtailed skiffs, was never to leave him. Hillard hunted for his old gondolier, but could not find him. So he chose one Achille, No. 154. With their trunks, which they had picked up at Genoa, and small luggage in the hotel barge they had the gondola all to themselves.

Instead of following the Grand canal Achille took the short cut through the Rugа di San Giovanni and the Rio di San Polo.

Out into the Grand canal again. As they swept under the last bridge before coming out into the hotel district Hillard espied a beggar leaning over the parapet. The moonlight shone full in his face.

"Stop!" cried Hillard to Achille.

The beggar took to his heels, and when Hillard stepped out of the gondola the beggar had disappeared.

"Who was it?" asked Merrihew indifferently.

"Giovanni!"

CHAPTER XIV.

O'MALLY SUGGESTS.

IN a bedroom in one of the cheap little pensiones which shoulder one another along the Riva degli Schiaboni sat three men. All three were smoking execrable tobacco. The castaways of the American Comic Opera troupe were on the anxious seat.

"O'Mally, what's your opinion of La Signorina?" said Worth.

"What about her?"

"What do you think of her? She's not one of us; she belongs to another class, and the stage is only an incident."

"Well, I don't know what to think. I've pumped Killigrew, but she seems to be in the dark with the rest of us. That ring and the careless way she offered it as security convince me that she doesn't belong. But what a voice!"

"She is without exception one of the most beautiful women I ever saw or care to see," rejoined Worth.

Smith and O'Mally exchanged a swift, comprehensive look.

Worth rose to go to Cook's office for possible letters, but abruptly returned to announce that the two ladies had returned from Monte Carlo. The actors proceeded to the parlor and greeted the prima donna and Kitty.

"We lost," explained the latter.

"I was very foolish," said the erstwhile prima donna. "I might have known that when one is unlucky one may become still more unlucky. But I did so wish to win. I wanted to bring back enough gold to send you all to America."

"But what was to become of you?" asked Worth.

The question was not expected. "Oh, Italy is my home. I shall find a way somehow. Put me out of your thoughts entirely. But I am sorry to bring you this bitter disappointment, for it must be bitter."

"There is one thing I wish to understand thoroughly," put in Worth slowly.

"You have guaranteed our credit at this hotel. By what means?" Worth held her eye with courage.

"With my word," she answered.

"I know something of these foreign hotel managers. Words must be backed by values." Worth's eye was still steady and unwavering. "If, as I believe, you guaranteed our credit with jewels we must know."

"Is it from a sense—a misguided sense of chivalry?" she asked, her lips suggesting a smile.

"You are evading us," went on Worth.

"You insist, then?" coldly.

"Positively insist. If you do not tell us we shall be forced to take our chances elsewhere." Worth pressed a button. A servant appeared. "The manager at once."

La Signorina dropped her veil and sat stiffly in her chair. Kitty moved uneasily. The manager appeared. He bowed.

"Madame here," began Worth, indicating La Signorina, "has guaranteed our credit at your hotel."

"Yes. Is not everything satisfactory?" asked the manager eagerly.

"What security did madame advance?"

"Security?" The manager looked at La Signorina, but she rendered him not the least assistance. "I have given my word to madame not to tell."

"Then three gentlemen shall leave. Make out our bill at once!"

The manager appealed to the lady.

"You are foolish men," spoke La Signorina. "If the manager wishes to tell you he may do so."

The manager brought forth a flat wallet and opened it. Out of this he took a flat object wrapped in tissue paper. Very tenderly he unfolded it. The treasure was a diamond pendant, worth at least $1,000.

"I was to keep this simply till madame chose to reclaim it. Nothing has been advanced against it." A new thought came into the manager's mind, and he turned slightly pale. "If it is not madame's"—

"It is mine," said La Signorina. She was very angry, but her sense of justice admitted that Worth was perfectly right. "Once more I ask you not to make me miserable by forcing this trinket back upon me. Will you do me the honor to wait till tomorrow morning?"

The three men exchanged looks.

"Till tomorrow morning, then," said Worth. The manager was glad to escape.

La Signorina raised her veil. From her girdle bag she took a letter. "This letter is from a friend I have always known. Has any one of you ever heard of the Principessa di Monte Bianca?"

Her audience leaned forward attentively as she read the letter:

My Dear—I was very glad indeed to hear from you, and I shall be only too happy to offer you the temporary assistance you desire. You will recollect that I possess a villa just outside of Florence, a mile or so north of Fiesole. The villa is furnished and kept in repair by an ancient gardener and his wife. You and your friends are welcome to occupy the Villa Ariadne as long as you please. Of course you will find all the chests, bureaus, sideboards and closets under seal, for I have not been there since the death of my father. None of the seals may be removed till I occupy the villa legally. However, the gardener and his wife have silver and linen and china, and with these you will be able to get along nicely.

LA PRINCIPESSA DI MONTE BIANCA.

"The question is, Shall we accept this offer?" She refolded the letter. "This was the plan I had in mind when we went to Monte Carlo, and a much better plan too."

"Of course we shall accept it," said Worth.

"But what's the matter with your playing the princess to the neighbors?" suggested O'Mally, his eyes laughing. "I'll be the concierge, Smith the steward and Kitty your maid."

"And I?" asked Worth.

"Oh, you can be her highness' private secretary and attend to the correspondence."

The laughter which followed this was light hearted and careless. Only La Signorina did not join the merriment. She rose with a determined air.

"Mr. O'Mally makes a very good suggestion. It will be an adventure worth

The manager brought forth a wallet.

recounting. I shall go as the princess. Her highness commands! Will it not be delightful?"

Worth looked at O'Mally, who looked at Smith, who looked at Kitty; then all four looked at La Signorina.

"Are you not lightening our trials by joking?" asked Worth dubiously.

"Call it madness, if you like. I shall go as the princess."

To be continued.

ALMA COLLEGE.

The first of the series of special programs that are being given at various intervals throughout the year in commemortion of the birthday anniversaries of great men, proved to be an unqualified success. Many visitors from town filled the chapel in connection with the student body in attendance. The whole hour was given up to the exercises which consisted of music, essays and recitations of choice literature from the pens of the various men commemorated.

Holmes, Tennyson, Poe and Samuel Johnson was given especial attention and the resulting program was indeed interesting. The quartette "Crossing The Bar" from Tennyson was most pleasingly rendered. Mr. Graham read a paper on Johnson which was as interesting as the character described. Mr. Blake's recitation of the "Boys" perhaps would have taken the prize had any been offered. In itself a difficult piece to render, it surely did not suffer any in this instance. Mr. Blake is easily himself in this sort of work. The recitation of the "Raven," by Mr. Snell in its way was excellent. Well rendered Solos by Miss Hood and Mr. Strickland completed the program.—Alma Journal.

Strenuous plans are being made in connection with the the 25th. anniversary Alma is planning to celebrate in 1912. Dr. Bruske, in the pulpit of the College church, made several interesting statements in connection with an appeal for the college. At the conclusion of the first treasurer's term of office the report was that the endowment amounted to $150,000. The second treasurer to relinquish office reported the figures at $250,000 and the doctor's statement is that today the endowment fund is $389,000. In this same time the buildings have increased from two to 22, the students from 40 to 300, and everything else in proporation.

The doctor has very optimistic views of the future. He is laying deep plans for the 1912 anniversary. By then he hopes to increase the endowment to half a million. The faculty to half a hundred, the free scholarships to 300, provide a new boy's dormitary and a large Lumberman's memorial hall to be a sort of auditorium. The city of Alma is already working to raise a sum of $5,000 to endow permenent fund for the beautification of the campus. The alumni have been delegated certain results to be accomplished by 1912. So that all together it should make the the 25th anniversary an historical year in the development of the college.

In a scrappy game, characterized by punts and heavy tackle plunges, the Reserves won from the "barbs" by the score of 5-0. Boyd, Graham and Anderson (Omena) Starred for the scrubs, while "Dr. Frost, Waring, Yearex and Wilson were the ground gainers for the barbarians. The day was ideal and a good crowd attended.

LEVI OWENS.

A large concourse of relatives and friends gathered at the residence of Robert Owens, Tuesday afternoon to show their last respects to the late Levi Owens, the funeral services being held at 1:30, Rev. J. Wirt Dunning, pastor of Presbyterian church officiating. Mrs. Ella Hodges and Mrs. Richard Mead sang very appropriate hymns, "Safe in the Arms of Jesus" and "Saved by Grace." Edward Generuex, Frank Riply, Claud Grey, Frank Kennedy, Lawrence Boland and Bert Lawrence acted as pall bearers. About 30 members of the Cigar-makers local union 302, of which the deceased was a member attended the funeral in a body. Thomas Owens of Angola, Ind., and Mr. and Mrs. William Owens of Hillsdale attended the funeral.

Charles Pritchard.

Charles Pritchard passed away at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening at the home of his daughter Mrs. John Kidd two and one-half miles south of this place. Cancer was the cause of his death. The deceased was 81 years of age and was a late private of Co. L, New York, Heavy Artillery. He is survived by a widow, son and daughter. The funeral was held this morning at 10 o'clock at his late home. A number of the soldiers attended in a body. Interment on soldiers lot in Brookside cemetery.

SICK WOMAN CALLS FOR MISSING DAUGHTER

Her Whereabouts are Unknown.

Deerfield, Mich. Nov. 22.—"Dora, Dora, where is Dora? Why doesn't she come to me?"

Pathetically calling for her missing daughter as she lies tossing in pain on a sick bed, perhaps her death-bed, aged Mrs. Mayte Schatte of this place wrings the hearts of her friends by her appeals to her 35-year-old daughter to come to her before she dies.

Miss Schatte left home some time ago and her present whereabouts are unknown. It is believed by her friends and relatives, however, that she would return if she knew of her mother's illness. The family offers a reward of $5 to the person locating her within ten days.

The woman is about 35 years old, with brown eyes and dark curly hair. She has one sister.

George Tiffany, Jr.

A TECUMSEH BOY WHO HAS MADE GOOD IN ALASKA.

He Receives Great Credit for Securing Unique System of Post-office Boxes.

Our postmaster was very agreeably surprised last Saturday to receive via Dawson the beautiful hardwood cabinet of lock boxes which he ordered with the balance of his office furniture. Now that the outfit is complete, Tanana boasts the finest post-office in Alaska. Nearly all the business houses of the town and many individuals have shown their appreciation of Mr. Tiffany's enterprise by securing mail boxes and drawers, which are rented to patrons at a very reasonable rate.

The boxes are operated by a keyless system of combinations, easily learned and difficult to forget; they are so constructed that the holder of a box may change the combination thereof as he desires, and the combinations are limitless in number. By this scheme the man who walks about two miles to the postoffice to learn that he has forgotten his mail box key is a big winner. The new keyless system has many advantages over anything heretofore introduced in postoffice equipment. The manufacturer is T. J. O'Leary, of St. Paul, Minn.

Among the new features which greatly please Postmaster Tiffany are the up-to-date racks upon which to hang the bags into which is assorted the mail for outgo over the different routes. This being a distributing center, the saving of time under the new arrangement is a big item. The bags are strung in a convenient circle, and the mail is dropped into their open mouths. When this operation is not going on the table is used in the stamping and distribution of local mail.

Mr. Tiffany has also received samples of a new pattern of mail-bag the department has adopted for Alaska. It is made of waterproof material and is designed for more convenient packing on sleds, and for better protection of contents in case of rough handling.

Altogether, the postmaster's conversation is highly complimentary to the department for the thoughtful consideration being given to the Alaska service nowadays.—Tanana Leader.

FROM WASHINGTON.

After a protracted absence during a long summer vacation, the personnel of the government, with the exception of the legislative branch is back in Washington. An extensive and positive legislative and administrative program is in prospect. The president during his journey of several weeks, covering nearly every state, made numerous speeches and was not reticent as to his intentions. The mere fact that he is the executor of the Roosevelt Policies, a fact which he has again and again emphasized is sufficient to indicate that there will be something doing at the Capitol during the coming winter.

Perhaps the most important project, although the least sensational, will be an effort to remedy the laws delays in the federal courts, and to invent a plan for securing prompt and economical justice in the federal courts, thereby setting an example to the state courts.

It is a fact acknowledged by all except snide lawyers that the administration of justice in this country is more dilatory and slovenly than in any civilized country, with the exception of Russia, if indeed Russia can be called civilized.

The question of ship subsidies will be urged upon Congress with the object of developing our Merchant Marine, with of course the ulterior object of furnishing a large number of sea-seasoned Americans to man the United States warships in time of war.

The adoption of an income tax amendment to the Constitution will be favored, this tax to be resorted to only in time of national stress.

ANDERSON--SMITH

ERNESTINE ANDERSON AND B. EARL SMITH PROMINENT PEOPLE OF TECUMSEH UNITED IN MARRIAGE TUESDAY EVENING.

The Ceremony was Preceeded by Christening.

A simple but a very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mrs. Julia Anderson on Union street, when her daughter, Mary Ernestine, was united in marriage to B. Earle Smith, in the presence of about 50 relatives.

Promptly at six o'clock, the bride and groom with their attendants, Miss Dorris Anderson, sister of the bride, and L. J. Heesen, took their place under a beautiful bower made of white chiffon and wedding bells and Japanese Honey Suckles.

Rev. J. Wirt Dunning, pastor of the Presbyterian church, spoke the unpreserve words that made them man and wife, the ring ceremony being used. During the ceremony, Miss Smith, sister of the groom, sweetly sang, "O, Promise me." After congratulations, a four course dinner was served.

The decorations were in the green and white color scheme, Japanese Honey Suckles, Chrysanthemums, being used.

The wedding gifts consisting of cut glass, silver and linen, were beautiful and showed the high esteem in which the young couple are held.

Miss Anderson is one of Tecumseh's most prominent young ladies and spent her entire life in Tecumseh.

Mr. Smith has been principal of the Tecumseh High School for the past two years and has made many friends in this vicinity.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith left on the evening train for a short wedding trip, after which they will be at home to their many friends.

The out of town guests were, Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Smith and daughter, Miss Eva, parents and sister of the groom, of Reed City, and Arthur Smith of Ann Arbor, brother of the groom, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Anderson of Adrian.

Previous to the wedding ceremony the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Anderson was christened Elona-Wilhelmina.

ILLEGAL PURCHASE

STOCKHOLDERS OF D. T. & I. ROAD DECLARE DEAL WAS CONSPIRACY

It is Said The Union Violates the Laws of Michigan, as the Two Lines are Competitors.

Columbus, O., Nov. 22.—A petition has been filed in the United States court by Fred J. Lisman for a committee of holders of preferred stock, against the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton Railway Co., the Knickerbocker Trust Co., the United States Mortgage & Trust Co., H. B. Hollins & Co., a note holders' committee and the receivers of the Detroit & Ironton road, in which conspiracy is charged in the purchase of the Ann Arbor railroad by the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton Co.

The petition alleges that the two roads are competitors and that the purchase was a violation of the laws of Michigan; that $5,000,000 of consolidated mortgages were issued and bonds sold without the knowledge of the majority of the stockholders and that the whole deal was a conspiracy to work injury to the complainants.

The complainants pray for a true accounting and that the $5,000,000 of bonds issued for security of collateral trust notes be declared void as obligations against the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton road, or as having any lien on the property.—Detroit News.

AMUSEMENTS.

The patrons of our local theatre have a royal treat in store when W. F. Mann's latest book "Her Dark Marriage Morn" is presented for their approval. The characters are overdrawn, the scenic part bright and new from the studio of Peltz, Carson and Buhler of Chicago, the gowns worn by the ladies are mostly Parisian effects from this season's importations. The cast needs no introduction for among them you will no doubt recognize celebrities from New York and Chicago productions. Those who have read the book are already anxious to see the production, and as this book has been one of our local book dealer's greatest sellers, we feel sure that most of our literary inclined people have already had this pleasure.

"Her Dark Marriage Morn" comes with the stamp of city success to the Bradley Opera House shortly.

CONFIRMED PROOF

Residents of Tecumseh Cannot Doubt What Has been Twice Proved.

In gratitude for complete relief from aches and pains of bad backs from distressing kidney ills thousands have publicly recommended Doan's Kidney Pills. Residents of Tecumseh, who so testified years ago, now say their cures were permanent. This testimony doubly proves the worth of Doan's Kidney Pills to Tecumseh Kidney sufferers.

Mrs. Charles Stevenson, Wyandotte and Pottawatamie Sts., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "Sharp, shooting pains across the small of my back were the first symptoms of kidney trouble in my case. My kidneys gradually became disordered and I was very miserable. Being advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills, I did so and the pains disappeared. For years I had also been distressed by gravel but Doan's Kidney Pills removed this trouble and I have not been bothered since."

Above statement was given on Dec. 10, 1906, and on Dec. 9, 1908, Mrs. Stevenson confirmed it in detail adding that her cure had been permanent. For Sale by all Dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, Sole Agents for the United States.

Mi-o-na cures dyspepsia. There isn't any doubt about it. Thousands of just such testimonials as the above from every city and town in America prove it. Mi-o-na does not digest the food in your stomach, but, in a few days it tones up the walls of the stomach and makes it strong enough to digest its own food. FIRST SOUGHT FRIENDSHIP

Falling In This Zelaya Captured Two Americans.

EXECUTED THEM IN ANGER

Mother of Leonard Grace Receives Message of Condolence from Rebel Leader in Nicaragua—Washington Cabinet Does Not Touch on Nicaraguan Matters.

Galveston, Tex., Nov. 24.—The translation of a cablegram received by the mother of Leonard Grace from General Estrada, commander of the revolutionary forces in Nicaragua, reads:

"With you, my heart bleeds for the loss of your son. Opposing oppression and tyranny, he nobly gave his life."

A message has been forwarded asking the general for a statement of the particulars of the occurrences leading up to the execution of Grace and Cannon, at his convenience.

Details are being received in brief messages from friends of Grace in Nicaragua. One just received from a man named Thornway, says that President Zelaya admired the bravery and venturesome spirit of the two Americans, and, failing to enlist the good graces of Grace after sending him many messages, Zelaya offered a reward for their capture of $25,000 a head. Zelaya had not anticipated the two Americans would be captured so soon, or that they would be actively in the midst of the battle. He was so enraged when he found them in his power he directed their execution before appeals could reach him.

In a letter, just received and written two weeks before his execution, Grace says:

"I know I am accepting desperate chances, but I far rather die fighting for my rights than live a tyrant's friend."

Washington, Nov. 24.—The status of the crisis in the diplomatic relations between Nicaragua and the United States over the summary execution of two Americans remains unchanged. Secretary of State Knox and other officials of the state department maintain their attitude of reticence in regard to the plans for demanding reparation from President Zelaya. It is probable that an apology and substantial indemnities for the families of the two Americans will be insisted on. Secretary Knox also may send passports to Senor Rodrigues, the Nicaraguan charge d'affaires in this city.

While it was generally expected that the Nicaraguan crisis would receive consideration at Tuesday's cabinet meeting, Secretary Knox said after the meeting that it was not discussed. Commander Alex S. Halstead, commanding officer of the gunboat Vicksburg, which is now at Corinto, on the west coast of Nicaragua, has sent a report to the navy department, saying that there was no disorder there.

Will Report on Blockade.

The cruiser Des Moines has sailed from Port Limon for Greytown, Nicaragua, to make a report on the effectiveness of the blockade maintained by the revolutionists. It is expected that her commanding officer, Commander J. H. Shipley, will make a report to the department soon on political conditions on the east coast of Nicaragua.

The cruiser Tacoma sailed from Colon Tuesday for Port Limon. The gunboat Marietta is on her way from Guantanamo to Port Limon.

Secretary Knox, it was said, will take every necessary step to protect American interests on both coasts of Nicaragua. If president Zelaya does not make satisfactory reparation before congress convenes, two weeks hence, the president probably will lay before congress the questions as to what punitive action should be taken against the Nicaraguan government.

EXONERATES OFFICIALS.

Warriner Says Other Big Four Men Are Not Implicated.

Cincinnati, Nov. 24.—A statement has been issued by C. L. Warriner, former Big Four railroad treasurer, under indictment for embezzlement and grand larceny, exonerating other officials of the road from any connection with his shortage. Warriner says, in his statement:

"Owing to the repeated insinuations in the public press and otherwise in this unfortunate affair that officials of the Big Four railroad are implicated, I feel it only just to them to most emphatically say that not only are such insinuations and statements untrue, but I have never, directly or indirectly, authorized any statement of the kind."

FIVE BURNED TO DEATH.

Lose Their Lives in Burning Tenement in East New York.

New York, Nov. 24.—Five persons were burned to death in a fire last night in a frame tenement at 1490 Herkimer street, east New York.

There were sixty persons in the house, which was a four story frame structure. Ten persons were seriously injured and removed to hospitals in ambulances. The occupants of the tenement were foreigners.

It is suspected that the fire was of incendiary origin.

TO POOL FREIGHT.

Coal Men Petition Taft to Permit Railroads to Co-operate.

Washington, Nov. 24.—Bituminous coal operators of Ohio, Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois and West Virginia have combined in a request that railroads of the country shall be permitted to pool freight under supervision of the government, and today representatives of the soft coal interests of all these states are having an audience with President Taft for the purpose of laying the matter before him.

President Taft is being urged to make plain in his coming message the necessity for taking immediate action against car shortages and freight congestions such as are now throttling the coal men of the different states.

A committee of the Ohio and Pennsylvania operators, consisting of Samuel A. Taylor, representing the Pittsburg district coal operators; T. K. Maher of the Pittsburg vein coal operators' association of eastern Ohio, and Howard Mannington of Columbus, O., representing the Ohio Coal Operators' association, are in Washington, joining the others, who, with National President Lewis of the United Mine Workers' union, meet with President Taft.

What a Dollar Dog Can Do.

A man in a nearby city bought for his wife and child a year ago a dog, for which he paid a dollar. It was obviously nothing wonderful in the canine way—merely a mongrel, with the bulldog strain predominant. The owner was a man in humble circumstances, and the dog in his modest dwelling was the principal asset aside from a few sticks of furniture. The other night Tom was tied to a leg of the kitchen sink, as usual, and the family went to bed. They were awakened by the dog at midnight scratching at his master's door. When his master came out to see what was the matter the dog, with a remnant of chewed rope hanging from his collar, whined and ran to the head of the stairway. The house was on fire, and shortly after woman and child and man and dog made their escape their poor dwelling was a mass of glowing embers. The owner of the dog has been urged to part with him for a large cash consideration; but, though he is penniless, he will not part with the four footed savior of his family. Neither has the dog at any time had thoughts of leaving them for luxurious kennels.—New York Times.

Rebuked the Bishop.

The bishop of Petersburg, England, is a great motorist and is also a stanch teetotaler, and thereby hangs a tale. On one occasion, while out in his car, the chauffeur ran short of petrol and applied at a public house for some more. The publican came out, and, seeing the bishop in his episcopal dress in the car, said: "Yes, I've got plenty of petrol, but I don't sell it to the likes of them what never buys my beer."

Laxative for Women Free

There is a great difference in the purposes to which a laxative should be put. Tablets and pills, salts, etc., are usually violent purgatives or cathartics, and altogether too powerful for the average person.

A woman at all times needs only a mild laxative—in fact, none other is needed by anyone, weak or strong though they may be, for the object is simply to move the bowels, and if a gentle laxative will do it, what is the use of a violent one?

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has earned a well-deserved vogue among women and children and old folks—people who must necessarily be careful of what they take. It is a liquid laxative tonic and admittedly the greatest stomach, liver and bowel remedy before the American people. The price is only 50 cents or $1 a bottle, as it comes in both sizes, and all druggists sell it. Its pleasant taste and gentle action make it an ideal remedy for women in constipation, torpid liver, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn and such like digestive complaints. Its use for a short time will remove the trouble entirely so that future medication will be unnecessary. Its tonic properties build up the stomach and intestinal muscles so that they act naturally again. That this is so is the experience of many heads of families, like Mrs. Brannan, of Alvarado, Va., Mrs. E. L. Stout, of Louisville, Ky., and numerous others in fact, way out in Williams, Cal., as Mrs. J. B. Blackmore, of that place, writes, the whole town seems to be using it.

If the remedy is new to you and you want to make a trial of it before buying, send your name to the doctor, address as below and a free test bottle will be sent you. Then, if results are satisfactory you can buy it of your druggist.

NEWS AGAIN VERIEIFD.

Officers of Steamship Luckenbach Saw Astor's Yacht.

New York, Nov. 24.—The report of Captain Furst of the Red D liner Caracas that he had left Colonel John Jacob Astor's yacht, the Nourmahal, in the harbor of San Juan on Nov. 15 has been confirmed by Captain James Dalton and the officers of the insular line steamship Harry Luckenbach, in from Porto Rico.

Captain Dalton and his chief engineer, A. L. Emery, dispelled all doubt as to the safety of the Nourmahal by declaring that when the Luckenback sailed from San Juan, on Tuesday, last, two days after Captain Furst had seen the [illegible] that she was still at anchor off San Juan and showed no evidences of having encountered rough weather on her trip from San Domingo. The officers of the Luckenbach saw no vessel resembling a rich Cuban's yacht, discovered by wireless several days ago. Chief Engineer Emery was, thirteen years ago, an assistant engineer aboard the Nourmahal, so there is no doubt about his ability to identify her.

Letters written on Nov. 14 by Colonel Astor on the stationery of the yacht Nourmahal arrived from San Juan by the Luckenbach. They were addressed to the secretary of his estate, William A. Dobbyn, and were exclusively of a business nature. The tone of the letters indicated that Colonel Astor was not aware that there had been any apprehension about the Nourmahal.

Nothing Was the Matter.

"A newsboy I knew," said a yachtsman, "took to the sea. He became cabin boy on a tramp collier. He was a good boy, but—

"Once, when our white squadron was at Newport, this collier steamed in her slow way shoreward with her ensign upside down, the signal of distress—distress of the direst. Instantly a pretty sight was to be seen. Every warship in the fleet lowered a lifeboat, and all of those beautiful, snowy boats, manned by jackies in spotless white duck, raced for the grimy old collier at breakneck speed—a pretty sight indeed. The captain of the collier stood on the bridge. He waved his hat, and the crews pulled all the faster. As they drew close they heard the man's cries.

"'Come on! Pull! Get down to it!' he roared, dancing about wildly.

"'What's the matter, captain?' the first officer to reach the collier asked breathlessly.

"'Why, nothing's the matter,' the captain answered in a surprised voice.

"'Then why's your ensign upside down?'

"The captain looked aloft, then frowned.

"'It's that boy Hank again,' said he. 'And here I thought it was a regatta.'"
